THE records of the Merchant Adventurers of Newcastle-upon-Tyne are contained in the following manuscript books, which are deposited in the safe of the Company in the Merchants' Hall, at the Guildhall, Newcastle-upon-Tyne :—

I. A demy folio volume, bound in full brown calf, and indorsed "Book of Orders, 1480 to 1568." It contains ordinances, accounts, and minutes of meetings at which officers were elected, apprentices were enrolled, and members admitted to the freedom of the Company.

II. A crown folio volume, bound in full brown calf, and indorsed "Book of Orders, 1554 to 1627." It contains, at the commencement of the volume, ordinances, prefaced by a table of contents of the principal ordinances; the Star Chamber proceedings as to wool-fells set out on pages 120, 121 and 122; and, at the end of the volume, copies of a few bonds and recognizances conditioned to become void in case the obligors did not import or sell merchandise in Newcastle, otherwise than according to the ancient orders then used within the same town for strangers.

III. A foolscap folio volume, bound in full rough calf, and indorsed "Book of Orders, 1639 to 1675." It contains (i) an alphabetical index of admissions to freedom, with name and page and the trade of the member (that is whether draper, mercer, or boothman); (ii) a table of titles of "the most observable acts in this book"; (iii) minutes of the meetings of the Courts of the Company; (iv) memoranda of the dispute of the Company with the Merchant Adventurers of London.

IV. A demy folio volume, bound in full rough calf, and indorsed "Charters, Acts and Correspondence of the Merchant Adventurers Company." It contains (i) an index; (ii) a copy in English of the Charter of Elizabeth, printed at page 282; (iii) copies of various ordinances of the Company set out in books

I., II. and III. and other subsequent ordinances, and, at the end of the volume, (iv) forms of certificates in blank (a) to the Merchant Adventurers of England of the apprenticeship of the bearer, (b) by three justices (in pursuance of 5 Eliz. c. 4, s. 20) that the father of an intended apprentice is seized of freehold land of the value of 40^{s.}, (c) of the date of baptism of intended apprentices, (d) of a deposition of birth or baptism before a justice of the peace; (v) forms of oaths; (vi) carefully written-up copies of the documents relating to the dispute with the Merchant Adventurers of England, and a copy of the agreement dated 23 Oct., 23 Charles II., relating to primage, and made between the Merchant Adventurers and the Masters, Pilots and Seamen of the Trinity House, referred to on page 217.

V. A demy folio volume, bound in full rough calf, and indorsed "Statutes Merchant, from 1650 to 1661." It has no index. It contains copies of bonds or statutes merchant according to the statute of Acton Burnell, copies of deeds of defeasance of the bonds, and copies of requests to the Commissioners having custody of the Great Seal, or to the Lord Chancellor, that writs of execution on the bonds might be sealed and sent to the sheriffs of the surrounding counties of Northumberland or Durham.

VI. A foolscap folio volume, bound in full vellum (repaired with a calf back). It is indorsed "Book of Orders, 1662 to 1690." It contains an index of admissions, minutes of admissions, and entries relating to the Eastland Company. It begins on the 25th February, 1662-3, and ends on the 29th January, 1690-91. It is not strictly a continuance of No. III. That book is continued by No. X.

VII. A thick foolscap folio volume of accounts, bound in full rough calf. It is indorsed "Merchant Adventurers 1668." It contains (i) an inscription that the book had been bought for the accounts and reckonings of the Company; (ii) an alphabetical index of names of members; (iii) a list of "the names of the Company of Merchant Boothmen who are thought to be living this 4th December 1668." The list numbers 131 names, and at the foot of it are added two further names, "Sir Francis Anderson, by gift," and "Robert Ile, by purchase"; (iv) a similar list of the Merchant Drapers on the same date numbering 14 names, and (v) a similar list of the Merchant Mercers on the same date numbering 67 names; (vi) a heading, "small impositions as they are rated in the old book"; (vii) a heading, Duties paid to the Company; (viii) Debtor and Creditor Accounts with the various members of the Company. The accounts extend up to 1788.

VIII. A demy folio volume of accounts, bound in rough calf, rebaked in pigskin. It is not indorsed. It extends from 12th December, 1786, to 9th October, 1845, and contains (i) an alphabetical index of names of members, and (ii) Debtor and Creditor Accounts with members of the Company. The heading of such members' accounts generally states the date when the member was made free, and whether he became so by patrimony or service.

IX. A foolscap folio volume of accounts, bound in morocco, and indorsed, "Cash Book, 1704 to 1816." It contains Wardens' Accounts between those dates, prefaced by a memorandum, dated 1810, as to the investment and interest of £500 left by Thomas Davison.

X. A double foolscap folio volume, bound in rough calf, rebaked with pigskin. It has no indorsement. In its title-page it is described as "The Journal of the Company." It contains (i) an alphabetical index of members; (ii) Entries of apprenticeship indentures enrolled, freemen admitted, resolutions passed, and other minutes of business transacted at Courts of the Company held between the 9th Oct., 1675, and the 7th Oct., 1733.

XI. A double foolscap folio volume bound in full brown calf. It has no indorsement. It has an index and it contains entries of minutes of business transacted at Courts of the Company between the 11th February, 1733-4, and the 9th October, 1837.

XII. A royal folio volume bound in full brown calf, rebaked. It has no indorsement. It has an index and is unfinished. It contains entries of minutes of business transacted at Courts of the Company from 31st October, 1837, to the present time. The entries about half fill the volume.

XIII. A demy folio volume bound in morocco. It is indorsed "Merchants Company Guild and Admission Book." It extends from 1789 to the present time and is unfinished. It has an alphabetical index of names of members, and the rest of the book is ruled with columns for (i) the date of admission before the Mayor; (ii) the name and description of the freeman admitted; and (iii) the date of admission into the Merchants' Company.

XIV. A royal quarto thin volume, bound in full brown calf, containing transcripts of the Governor's, Warden's, Clerk's, and Beadle's oaths and the oath to be taken on admission.

XV. A crown folio volume, bound in full rough calf, indorsed "Cash Book," 1816 to ——. It contains entries of cash accounts up to the present time and is unfinished.

There is also, with the above volumes, a paper parcel containing a few loose miscellaneous deeds and papers.

From the above records the Rev. J. R. Boyle made numerous and extensive extracts and began to edit them for this volume. He afterwards left Newcastle, and for that and other reasons he was unable to complete the work. He had partly arranged his materials under the following headings:—(1) Ordinances; (2) Extracts from minute books; (3) The disputes between the London and Newcastle Companies of Merchant Adventurers; (4) The relationship between the Newcastle Merchants and the Eastland Company; (5) Extracts from accounts and wills; (6) Oaths; (7) Enrolments of apprentices and admissions of freemen; (8) The charters of the Company and other documents from the Record Office.

In the latter part of 1894 his unfinished materials were placed in my hands to complete the work, and on account of the delay which had taken place it was decided to publish it in two volumes in order that one volume might be speedily issued. It was also arranged that the first volume should consist of the ordinances and the extracts from the minute books, and to these I have added translations of the governing charters.

The first volume constitutes in itself a fairly complete history of the Company as a burghal merchants' gild. The interest of the second volume will principally consist in its containing the account of the transactions of the Company as a foreign trading company having relationships with the great London trading companies of the Tudor and Stuart periods, and in its genealogical record of local families, whose names may be traced through many generations in the entries of enrolments of apprentices and of admissions to the Company.

When the materials came into my hands, the first 160 pages of the book had been printed off and the type distributed. Other 30 pages were in proof, and the rest of the volume was in partly arranged manuscript. Most of the entries given for the 18th and 19th centuries had been noted, but had not been copied out from the books of the Company. I am responsible for these later entries, for the notes subsequent to page 162, and for the introduction; but for the accuracy of the extracts generally, and for the main execution of the work, the credit and the responsibility belong to Mr. Boyle. I have only been able to compare a few of his extracts with the original records, but where I have done so I have found that they were careful and accurate transcripts. Many of the early documents mentioned in Brand's History of Newcastle seem to have been lost.

Owing to the change in the editorship, there are a few unavoidable discrepancies in the footnotes, which refer to Mr. Boyle's intended Preface. On pages 22 and 81, for "Codex" or "Codices" read "Book" or "Books"; on pages 89 and 129, for "second part of Preface" read "Introduction"; and on page 129, for "section" read "volume."

My thanks are due to Mr. Collingwood Jackson, one of the wardens of the Company, and Messrs. Clayton and Gibson, the solicitors to the Company, for affording me facilities of access to the original records, to Earl Percy for sending to Newcastle for my inspection the Hornby MS. from the archives of the Duke of Northumberland, to the Clerk of the Peace for Newcastle (Mr. J. G. Youll) for permitting me to inspect the Quarter Sessions Records, and to Mr. Richard Welford, Mr. Frank Marshall, Mr. F. H. Gough, and the Rev. Canon Raine, Secretary of this Society, for their assistance in the preparation of the book. The index has been kindly prepared for me by the Rev. J. T. Fowler of Durham.

INTRODUCTION

THE application of the idea of natural growth or evolution to the organised life of society has widened the range of historical studies, and given a new interest to social customs which, until recently, were almost overlooked by the historian, and were rather guessed at than made clear by the antiquary.

Under the influence of this modern tendency, the agricultural and trading life of the nation in bygone times has been more fully studied, and more attention has been devoted, especially during the last twenty-five years, to investigating the records of merchant guilds, craft guilds, and trading companies, by the instrumentality of which the business transactions of the country were conducted during the latter part of the Middle Ages. The result of those studies is epitomised in the works of Toulmin Smith,* Brentano,† Cunningham,‡ Ashley,§ Gross,|| Mrs. Green,¶ and other writers.

Although no one can read without interest the quaint entries and local references set forth in the extracts from the records of the Merchant Adventurers of Newcastle-upon-Tyne contained in this volume, yet it is necessary for those who wish to fully realise their true purport that they should avail themselves of the previous researches and conclusions of the above-named writers, or should consult the authorities to which they refer. Reasons for the promulgation of many of the ordinances set out in this volume, for the abrogation of others, and for changes in the mode and nature of the business done, may, in many cases, be made clear by referring to the statutes of the realm enacted during the period over which the extracts extend.

The result of the studies of the writers above referred to tends to show that the merchant gilds and craft gilds of the Middle Ages were a further development of that principle of joint action which had been applied to agricultural concerns in village communities, and were an extension of the early organisation of the township, to meet the exigencies of a later time, when trade and commerce had been added to the agricultural operations of the inhabitants.

Gilds, brotherhoods, and other similar unions had been formed in all ages, and in all countries, wherever a group of men had come together for a common pursuit; and the leading features in any brotherhood, formed for any purpose, were that the members treated each other and named each other as brother and sister; that all were equals before the gild; that they owned some property in common; that they took an oath of fellowship; that no quarrel should develop into a law-suit until an attempt at a settlement had been made before the tribunal of the brotherhood itself; and that if a brother was involved in a quarrel with a stranger to the brotherhood, they agreed to support him for good or for bad.*

Merchant gilds existed in France at an earlier date than their existence can be traced in this country, and the advantages of such gilds were probably learned by the English from the Norman merchants who frequented the markets and trading towns of England after the Conquest.†

The members of the merchant gilds were those burgesses in the town, who were shopkeepers or warehousemen engaged in the purchase and sale of merchandise. Their objects in forming the gild (to which formation the assent of the Crown was needful) were to protect by union their existing rights and privileges as traders; to obtain preferential rights of freedom from tolls and dues in their own town, and in the other towns in which they traded at fairs and at other times; and to obtain a monopoly of trade in their own town for the gild brethren as against the other inhabitants of the town.

The words "so that no one who is not of the gild may trade in the said town except with the consent of the burgesses," ‡ which frequently accompanied the grant of a gild, expresses, says Dr. Gross, "the essence of the institution."§ The grant was a concession of the exclusive right of trading, and the gild was the department of town administration whose duty was to maintain and regulate the trade monopoly. Non-gildsmen were forbidden to keep shops, or sell merchandise. Merchant strangers were to bring their wares to some specified public place to be examined; they were not to remain in the town longer than a specified time, and no one but a merchant might buy of them. The gildsman was generally under an obligation to share all purchases with his brethren, and temporary or partial exemption could be purchased from many of the restrictions by ungildated merchants on their making a payment to the gild.* There were distinct officials for the town and for the gild: the bailiffs, provost or mayor for the one, and the alderman and stewards, or the governor and wardens for the other.†

The objects of the Crown in granting these privileges were principally fiscal. Just as, in granting the town to the burgesses at a fee-farm rent, the Crown obtained collective security for this payment at less trouble of collection, so, in granting privileges to the gild, the Crown obtained the responsibility of the whole body for the tolls and dues, in the nature of excise and customs, which were paid on the merchandise in which the members of the gild traded.‡

It was in the second half of the eleventh century that the merchant gilds began to come into existence in England. In the advancing stages of civilisation, the growth of the trading class precedes that of the manufacturing class; and the rise of the craft gilds was, roughly speaking, a century later.

Craft gilds were separate associations of all the artisans engaged in any one handicraft or manufacture, in any one town; and in the thirteenth century they appear in all branches of manufacture, and in every industrial centre.§ They did not either spring from or unite into one general body, as did the different kind of merchants who sprang from or united into the general merchant gild. The craft gilds paid, in many cases, a yearly ferm to the Crown; but they were less frequently created by royal charter than was the case with the merchant gilds, and they were more often governed by an ordinary from the governing body of the town in which they resided.|| Only persons properly admitted to one of the craft gilds

|| Upon a habeas corpus was returned an action of debt for the penalty of a by-law made by the common council of the City of London. The by-law was, That whereas the Company and fellowship of porters had been, time out of mind, a company and fellowship, it was ordained, that they should still remain and continue for ever a company and fellowship, and that no master of any boat, etc., from place to place to, etc., should unload or send on shore any goods but by such persons as were free of the said company. To which it was objected, First, That the city of London could not make a Corporation. Secondly, That a Corporation could not make a by-law to bind strangers, un-could carry on, within the limits of the town, the occupation assigned to that gild; and searchers were appointed to prevent a breach of this regulation, and also to prevent false workmanship or deceit in the manufactures or handicrafts carried on by the members. By an Act of Parliament which was passed in 1363, and remained in force two hundred years, it was enacted* that "two of every craft should be chosen to certify that none use other craft than the same which he has chosen."

Whilst a long period of purely agricultural life intervened between the rise of trade and commerce in this country, and the previous departure of its Roman conquerors from it,—and although there was probably, therefore, no direct connection betwixt these English gilds and the similar associations which had existed in Greece and Rome—yet, on the other hand, there seems little doubt that the English gilds indirectly derived most of their laws from that classic civilisation to which modern Europe owes so much.

Evidence of the regulations which governed similar gilds in the eastern Roman Empire in the tenth century has recently come to light. In 1893, Professor Nicole of Geneva published in Latin, and in 1894, in French, a translation of a Greek manuscript he had found two or three years previously in the Public Library of Geneva. It is entitled "The Book of the Prefect; or, the Edict of the Emperor Leo the Wise on the Gilds of Constantinople." Leo the Wise reigned from 886 to 911. He continued the work of codifying the civil law which still forms the foundation of the jurisprudence of most of the States of Europe, and he issued a number of ordinances, including those published by Professor Nicole. The "Book of the Prefect" mentions the regulations of some twenty-one occupations. The manufacture of silk being the leading industry, there were separate gilds for merchants of silk goods, for merchants of raw silk, for silk spinners, and for silk weavers; and there were also gilds of mercers, saddlers, soap boilers and others. As, in England, the chief personage in some gilds was called an alderman, and in others, a master, a governor, or a dean, so the title given to the chief personage in each of the Constantinople gilds varied. He was, according to the French translation, sometimes called "primicier," sometimes "exarque," and sometimes "prostat"; and this difference seems to show that, although under the despotic government of the later Roman Empire the laws were promulgated by the prefect less founded on public convenience. Et per Cur. The city of London cannot make a Corporation, for that can only be created by the Crown; but this is only a fraternity, not a corporation, and a corporation may make a fraternity. A corporation is properly an investing the people of the place with the local government thereof, and, therefore, their law shall bind strangers; but a fraternity is some people of a place united together, in respect of a mystery and business, into a company, and their laws and ordinances cannot bind strangers, for they have not a local power or government. (Cuddon v. Eastwick, 1 Salkeld, 192.)

himself, yet that the original constitution of those Societies had been formed in earlier times, by ordinances amongst themselves.

Amongst the provisions of the prefect's regulations, we find that a merchant of silk goods could not enter the gild until five members of it had testified that he was worthy to exercise the calling, and until he had paid an entrance fee to the fellowship of six sous of gold. No man might exercise at the same time the occupation of selling silk goods and the occupation of weaving them. The goods of merchants of foreign wares had to be placed en bloc in a hostelry, where all the members of the gild met together to divide them; and each merchant had the right to buy at a set price a portion of the goods according to his contribution to the gild. The silk spinners were only allowed to buy as much raw silk as they were able to manufacture, and if, under the colour of some rich person, they bought more than enough for that purpose they were to be whipped, have their heads shaved, and cease to exercise their calling. Every silk spinner who should resell raw silk by retail, or should show himself a babbler, or a user of coarse language, was to be excluded from the gild and should no longer be able to sell silk. The silk weavers were to buy their raw silk from the merchants of raw silk. The perfumers were forbidden to buy articles which were the speciality of the spicers, and could not exercise the one trade without giving up the other. The soap boilers could not buy soap from strange merchants to sell it again, under pain of confiscation. The fish merchants were forbidden to go directly to the fisheries to buy in the open sea, but had to wait until the fishermen were landed; and it was forbidden for any strangers with merchandise to sojourn more than three months in the capital.

A similar registry of the laws governing the artisans and merchants of the City of Paris was made in 1258, by Etienne Boileau, who was Provost of Paris in the reign of Louis IX.* At that time a gild of merchants existed in Paris who took the name of the "merchants of the water of Paris," and were later known simply as La Marchandise. They are mentioned early in the twelfth century and were probably founded as early as the eleventh century. No ship could come above the bridge of Mantes, to be discharged there unmolested, unless it had been freighted by a member of the gild. If the freighter was a burgess of some other place, it was necessary that he should declare his intention to sell the goods which he carried, and then the provost of the merchants, and the wardens designated to him a merchant of Paris to be his compagnon. To this compagnon he had to declare the price of his cargo, and at that price the compagnon had the right to take half of it, or, if he preferred, to sell the whole, dividing the profit with the importer.†

It is in the nature of privileged corporations to endeavour to consolidate and strengthen their power, and to exercise their rights with inflexible rigour. Such was the conduct of the Parisian merchants' gild. It exercised a severe and minute police supervision on the waters of the Seine. Whoever dared, within the limits of the gild, to load or discharge merchandise without a compagnon had his boat seized and his cargo forfeited, and if the local compagnons of the gild allowed their names to be used to colour the importation of goods, without regard to the privileges of the gild, they were punished by expulsion from the community.* The provost of the merchants kept, in the name of the king, standards of measures, and sworn measurers nominated by the merchants were appointed to carry out all sales.

* Documents inédits sur l'histoire de France, vol. 22.

† Documents inédits, vol. 22, Introduction, p. xxv.

Besides the merchant companies, there were in Paris, in 1258, upwards of one hundred gilds of crafts and industries. They paid to the king, or to the lord of the fee, a sum for the privilege of constituting and exercising their gild, and this payment became an important source of revenue. In 1166, Louis the Seventh gave five gilds, namely, those of the leather dressers, the purse-makers, the belt-makers, the shoemakers, and the cobblers to the wife of Yves Lacohe and her heirs, and a century later five craft gilds were made the property of a woman named Marian by virtue of a letter of the king, and a decree of his parliament promulgated in 1287.† Whilst the craft gilds were under the orders of the Provost of Paris, the "merchants of the water" had at their head a provost of merchants from whom emanated all orders relating to the river commerce and the police supervision of the goods imported.‡

As towns in the South of England borrowed apparently from the Normans, and as Newcastle borrowed some of the regulations of its gild from Winchester,§ a town much frequented by foreign merchants, so Newcastle lent its customs to the Scottish boroughs which were being formed in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries. Amongst the documents which were transmitted to Scotland from Newcastle, set out in the Acts of Parliament for Scotland, || is one entitled "These are the laws and customs which the Burgesses of Newcastle-upon-Tyne had in the time of Henry King of England and ought to have." A different version is set out in Brand ¶ from a manuscript which was formerly at Tynemouth

§ See the references to Winchester customs contained in the charter granted by King John to Newcastle-upon-Tyne in 1215-16, set out at p. 281. and is still in the custody of the Duke of Northumberland at Syon House.

From it we find that in the reign of Henry the First, the following laws existed in Newcastle:—(1) If a dispute should arise between a burgess and a merchant stranger it had to be determined within three days. (2) All merchandise had to be brought to land except salt and herrings, which might be sold on board. (3) No merchant stranger, not being a burgess, could buy wool, or hides, or other merchandise without the borough, or within it except from a burgess. (4) None but a burgess could buy webs for dyeing, or make them up, or cut them.

From a table of tolls attached to this document we find that the articles of export included, besides wool and hides, the skins of foxes, martens, sables, beavers, goats and squirrels, feathers and lead. The only imports specially mentioned are alum, pepper, and ginger.*

The statement shows that already in the reign of Henry I. (1100-1135) provision had been made for the speedy settlement of disputes between the burgesses and strange merchants, and that the burgesses had already obtained exclusive privileges of trading. The last regulation is evidence that the wool of the country was not generally manufactured at home, but was sent abroad and re-imported in the web. This practice was afterwards prohibited in order to encourage the domestic manufacture, and in the fourth year of the reign of King John, the burgesses paid a fine of twenty-five marks for liberty to buy and sell woollen cloth as in the time of King Henry the First.†

In 1215-16 King John, by the fifth of his charters to the town of Newcastle-upon-Tyne,‡ granted to the burgesses a gild merchant

‡ Notwithstanding the numerous references which exist in local histories to King John's charters to the town of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, some uncertainty prevails as to their number, dates, and contents. They were as follows:—

(1) A charter dated at Newcastle-upon-Tyne, 9 February 1200-1, which confirmed to the King's "burgesses" the freedom from tolls and imposts in any part of his dominions granted to them by the charter of his father Henry II.

(2) A charter also dated at Newcastle, 9 February 1200-1, which granted to the King's "burgesses" the fee farm of the town for £60 per annum "for which they formerly rendered £50."

(3) A charter dated at Alnwick, 12 February 1200-1, which granted to the King's "burgesses" of Newcastle-upon-Tyne the fee farm of the town for £60 per annum, and provided that they should also pay 110s. 6d. for escheats, to wit, 51s. 0½d. from the land which the monks of that town held of the gift of King David, and 39s. 5d. from the land which the hospitallers held of the gift of King David, and 20s. 0½d. from the land which belonged to Gervasius Medicus which he had of the gift of the said King.

(4) A charter dated at Stockton, 5 February 1212-13, which granted to the King's "honest men" of Newcastle-upon-Tyne the fee farm of the town for £100; excepting his prizes and assizes in the port of the same (gildam mercatoriam), and exempted its members from pleading anywhere without the walls of the town to any plea, except that concerning foreign tenures. He also released them from tolls and dues in all his seaports, as well abroad as at home,* and empowered the Provost of Newcastle and the Sheriff of Northumberland to give them reparation for tolls and customs wrongly exacted from members of the gild by distraining the goods in Newcastle of those who violated their privileges.

There is no record of the course which the burgesses of Newcastle took when they received this charter from King John; but fifteen years previously † the town of Ipswich had also received from King John a charter granting them a gild merchant and other similar privileges, and a document is still extant, describing what the burgesses of Ipswich did after receiving their charter. The whole community met in the churchyard of St. Mary of the Tower and elected two bailiffs and four coroners, and directed that there should be twelve sworn capital portmen for the government of the borough. They also directed that by the common council of the town, consisting of such twelve portmen, there should be appointed an alderman of the gild merchant, that four approved men should be associated with him, and that he and his four assistants should be sworn to maintain the gild. No burgess, if he was a merchant, was to be quit of custom on his wares in the town, unless he was in lot and scot in the common taxes and business of the town, and the alderman and his four assistants proclaimed that all who were of the freedom of the town should come before them, on a day to be thereafter made known, in order to constitute the gild, and to give their hanse or contribution to the gild. The bailiffs, coroners, portmen, and whole community then ordained, that no inhabitant of Ipswich should buy or sell, within the bounds of the said town, any wares, except only the alderman of the gild, for the use and profit town; and he remitted them the escheat rent of 110s. 6d. to be divided amongst those who lost rents by the foss and new works made under the castle towards the water, and exempted them from being answerable for their goods to the sheriff or the constable; and the King willed that his aforesaid men should hold the said town at the fee farm aforesaid with all the liberties and customs which they had in the time of his father King Henry II., saving the liberty of the City of London.

(5) The charter above referred to, dated at Durham 28th January 1215-16, which granted the King's "burgesses" a gild merchant. A translation of this charter is set out on page 281 of this volume.

* It was usual for the merchants of a town so freed from tolls to take with them to the towns to which they traded a memorandum under their town's seal, setting out the clause of their charter, freeing them from tolls, and this memorandum was entered on the rolls of each town to which they traded, as evidence of their being free from tolls and other customs. A large number of such memoranda evidencing the charters granted to other towns and to religious houses appear on the Court Rolls of Great Yarmouth, and many of them are set out in Swinden's History of Great Yarmouth, pp. 28 to 38.

of the fraternity, under penalty of forfeiting all the merchandise bought or sold.*

It will be observed that it was only merchants who paid their taxes, and who also paid their hanse or contribution to the gild, who formed the gild merchant. All who would do so at its first establishment, had a right to come in, and the whole of the buying and selling of wares was given over to the gild, and the wares were to be bought by the alderman on behalf of the whole gild, the members of which would afterwards take their respective shares at the common price, and derive their benefit from the retailing of the shares so assigned to them.

Within a century after the creation of the gild merchant in Newcastle, its members had evidently formed an exclusive class, for, in or about the year 1308, William Sadeler, Thomas Richardson and others, the poor burgesses of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, recovered £50 damages in the Court of the Exchequer against Nicolas de Carliol and the other burgesses of the merchant gild of the said town.†

As, in the hundred years between the reigns of Henry I. and John, a distinction had grown up between the burgesses generally and the burgesses who were merchants, so in the hundred years between the reign of John and the reign of Edward III., the merchants appear to have developed into at least three branches, engaged in different classes of business; the merchants of woollen cloth, the mercers or dealers in small wares generally, and the boothmen or corn merchants.

In February, 1341-42, the whole community of Newcastle-upon-Tyne met in full gild (which I take to be distinct from the merchant gild, and another name for the whole body of the freemen assembled in the original folk-mote of the borough) and agreed on articles concerning the government of the town, which were confirmed by a charter of Edward III. in the following month of October.‡

Owing to the growing size of the town, to which the hamlet of Pandon had been added a few years previously, it was probably found inconvenient in Newcastle, as it had been in London about the same time, to conduct the affairs of the borough by the general voice of the people. By that time the system of association into gilds had so spread that most of the inhabitants belonged to the gild of their occupation or craft, and amongst the articles so agreed on and confirmed was one (article 3) that twenty-four burgesses (who were to choose in a roundabout manner the mayor and bailiffs and other officers of the town, and were to share with them in the government of the town) were to be elected by and out of the twelve most "honourable decent and honest" occupations or mysteries in the town. These twelve mysteries included three companies of merchants, who all belonged to the merchant gild, namely, the merchants of woollen cloth, the mercers, and the merchants of corn; and nine of the craft gilds, namely, the skinners, tailors, saddlers, bakers, tanners, cordwainers, butchers, smiths, and fullers.

By another article of the same convention (article 2) it was provided that all burgesses, as well poor as rich, might buy the merchandise necessary for themselves and their families, either direct from the ship, or if the cargo was bought wholesale by a merchant, then from the merchant, at prime cost. This, says Brand, was an infringement of the immunities granted to the merchant gild; and in 1357 Edward III. by his charter confirmed the privileges granted to the merchants by King John,* but in 1371 the articles of 1342 were again confirmed to the town by Edward III., and in 1378 by Richard II.

From this time forward until the books of the Merchants' Company begin in 1477, there is little direct evidence of the continued existence of the merchant gild, but a strong inference in favour of its continuance may be gathered from the flourishing condition of the merchants of Newcastle during the interval.

In 1353† the staple of wool—that is to say, the port to which the wool was to be carried, to be weighed and cleared of customs and excise duties, and to be sold wholesale to exporters or retailers—was removed from Calais and directed to be confined to ten English ports, of which Newcastle-upon-Tyne was the first named. The making of Newcastle a staple town greatly increased the export business of the merchants. From time to time the staple was again removed to Calais, but always with the result that it was brought back again to Newcastle; and, during the period of which we are speaking, Newcastle's greatest merchant, Roger Thornton, made his fortune and perpetuated his name by the benefits he conferred upon the town in which he had made it. He came to Newcastle some time previous to the year 1394, and he died there in January 1430.‡

It was one of the privileges of gilds that they might make ordinances or by-laws for the rule and government of their members. In the year 1436 an Act of Parliament was passed,§ that the masters, wardens and fellowship of every gild, fraternity, or company incorporate, should register of record, before justices of the peace in counties, and before the chief governors in cities, boroughs, and towns, all their letters patent and charters; and that they should thenceforth make no ordinance, unless it should be first discussed and approved as good and reasonable by the justices of the peace or the chief governors aforesaid, and should be before them entered of record. Immediately after this statute was passed, we find that many of the craft guilds of Newcastle (although they had existed, as we have seen, at least a century previously) obtained fresh ordinaries with the approval of the town authorities. The Smiths' ordinary is dated 14th January 1436-37; the Grocers', 20th January 1436-37; the Skinners', 20th January 1437-38; the Barber Surgeons', 10th October 1442; the Slaters', 12th March 1451-52; the Saddlers', 6th March 1459-60; and in 1480 the merchant gild met together and resolved upon the new ordinances with which this present volume begins.

The new ordinaries of the craft guilds were assented to by the mayor, aldermen, and sheriff, the justices of the peace, and that common gild of the town by which it was still governed until a common council was appointed by virtue of the great charter of Elizabeth; but these new ordinances of the merchants' company were made apparently without any such sanction; probably because, whilst the craft guilds had only been sanctioned by the government of the town, the merchant gild was deemed to be already legally constituted under the charter of King John. It will be seen, on reference to the first paragraph on p. 1, that it was contemplated that the ordinances of the merchants' company should remain in force for six years only, and they may have been little more than a repetition of similar ordinances which had been promulgated in preceding years, but subsequently to the year 1436.

In the first ordinance of 1480, the fraternity calls itself "the fellowship of merchants." It is probable that, in the course of 260 years, the word "gild" had dropped out of the ordinary modes of expression, and that the word "fellowship" had taken its place; but this fellowship of merchants was still the gild merchant of the town, for, on the 28th May 1506, King Henry VII. granted to it, under the name of the governors and merchants of the gild merchant of Newcastle-upon-Tyne (gubernatoribus et mercatoribus gildæ mercatorice ville Novi Castri), the right to buy wools, the growth of the surrounding district, and ship them to foreign ports, paying certain export duties for that right.

The fellowship had certainly existed previously to 1480, when its members met together and re-enacted the principal ordinances under which they were governed, for the earliest entries in their minutes are dated in 1477-78 [p. 81]* and are headed "Fynes taken by the Feloship of Marchaunts of crafftes-men for occupying the occupacion of marchaunts withouten licens of the said marchaunts." These entries show that, at that date, they were still exercising and insisting upon the exclusive right of buying and selling merchandise which had been conferred upon the gild-merchant by the charter of King John [pp. 81 and 82].

The first ordinance of 1480 [p. 1] provided that the fellowship should have a monthly meeting-day, and that further meeting-days should be appointed by the "said nine persons." These said nine persons are not before alluded to; and this expression, and similar expressions which run through the ordinances of 1480, seem to indicate that the provisions at the commencement of the oldest extant book of the fellowship are but a repetition or a continuation of other ordinances which had formerly existed.

The second ordinance of 1480 [p. 2] restricted the members to having but two apprentices at the same time. It prescribed the term of apprenticeship, and directed that each apprentice's indentures should be enrolled before the master of the fellowship; that an entrance fee should be then paid, and that an admittance fee should afterwards be paid at the end of the term; upon payment of which the apprentice should be free of the fellowship. The provisions of this ordinance resemble closely those contained in the modern statute of 1888* relating to apprentices to solicitors, the only persons still compelled by law to serve a term of apprenticeship before exercising their calling.

The system of apprenticeship had, by the twelfth century, become universal on the Continent, as the ordinary prelude to admission to a merchant or craft gild. It is almost the only regulation of which a counterpart cannot be found in the regulations of the similar associations which existed in the older civilisation of Greece and Rome. A large number of the later ordinances of the fellowship of merchants consist of new regulations for keeping the apprentices in order. By an Act of Parliament of 1405, repeated in 1562,† the apprentices were to be sons of men possessed of landed property, and they probably required for their good government a strictness on the part of the masters which the latter were anxious to justify by written regulations of the fellowship, the mere citation of which, in many instances, might be sufficient to preserve order without actual resort to their enforcement. Many of these regulations seem absurdly severe and absurdly detailed, but it must be remembered that, at that time, the apprentices were living in the same houses with their masters; that their masters had all, or almost all of them, been apprentices themselves; and that the modern practice of Englishmen with regard to apparel has confirmed the judgment of these old masters, in attempting to put down the extravagance of dress which existed during the period over which the records range. In the words of the recital of the ordinance of 1554 [p. 21] what they looked for was "honest and vertuous masters to succede us in this worshipecfull Feoloshipe."

The next ordinance of 1480 [p. 2] provided that "no act made by the said nine persons be registered until it is understood and affirmed by the whole fellowship." This short but broad-based provision is to be found also a century earlier, in the returns of the religious gilds made in 1388-89.*

The next ordinance of 1480 [p. 3] related to the colouring of an unfreeman's goods.† This regulation is constantly found in merchant gilds and craft gilds, and seems to have been constantly evaded. We have seen that it existed in the gilds of Constantinople, and in the gild of the Parisian merchants of the water. By the fifteenth century, when it appears in the Newcastle merchants' books, the punishment for it had become less severe than whipping ‡ or expulsion from the community ;§ but there was evidently as great a temptation as ever to indulge in the practice of colouring, and attempts to stop the practice by ordinances, fines and boycotting run throughout the whole period covered by the Company's books [pp. 33, 36, 42, 44, 62, 83, 113, 148, 218].

When the Municipal Corporations Reform Act, 1835, abolished that exemption from tolls and dues which had up to that time been the privilege of the freemen of the town of Newcastle and of other towns, an exception was made by which the privilege was preserved in favour of (1) freemen then living, (2) their children born on or before the 5th June 1835, and (3) apprentices to them who were bound at that date.|| Under this exception the privilege lasted almost through the present century ; so that the practice of colouring, or using the names of freemen in order to avoid the payment of tolls or dues, may have existed in Newcastle up to a very recent date.

After ordinances for ensuring good behaviour at the meetings of the fellowship [p. 3], and for payment of dues to the fellowship by shipowners shipping merchandise, and for giving a preference to freighters who were officials of the fellowship [p. 3], appears an ordinance [p. 4] which provided that no freeman of the fellowship should sue any member of the fellowship at common law, neither on this side the sea nor beyond the sea, until the dispute had been submitted to the Master of the Fellowship, or his deputy, or to two of the assistants of the fellowship. Shortly afterwards, namely, in 1503, an Act of Parliament was passed which was intended to put an end to the control of the companies over the litigation of their members. It provided (19 Henry VII. c. 7, s. 7) that no gild, fraternity, or corporate company should make any ordinance to restrain any person to sue to the king or any of his courts. According to a contemporary account by the Common Clerk of the Merchant Taylors' Company this act was obtained by the City Recorder of London to give more business to the lawyers. He perceived, we are told, that the "discreet justice" that was "ministered among fellowships" "grew to the prejudice of the learned men of the city." *

The next ordinance of 1480 provided [p. 4] that every man of the fellowship within the town should take part in the solemn procession of all the gilds which took place every Corpus Christi day. The celebration of that day was first enjoined by Urban IV., who was Pope from 1261 to 1264; and in very many towns there was a Corpus Christi gild which embraced most of the mysteries of the town, and these mysteries took part in the pageant plays, and in the procession of the Corpus Christi brotherhood. An account of the Corpus Christi procession will be found in Brand,[†] and in Walker and Richardson's Armorial Bearings of the Incorporated Companies of Newcastle-upon-Tyne.[‡]

I have not investigated whether there was an actual Corpus Christi gild in Newcastle, but to the writ of inquiry upon religious gilds, it is returned that "the society of Corpus Christi of Great Yarmouth is not a gild, in that it has not provisions, ordinances, or constitutions, nor any oath taken amongst its members; but, by the consent of the community, they give and sustain honestly the light about the body of Christ, annually on Corpus Christi day. They have no rent and possessions, nor any chattel in common." § Probably the only Corpus Christi gild at Newcastle was a similar voluntary and indefinite association.

The next important ordinance of 1480 is that [p. 5] headed, "A nact mayd that no artefer occupy no manner of merchantdis bod as myche as is nessessary for hym for exhibecion of his hows." By the words of the ordinance, after reciting that craftsmen buy other merchandise than victual only, and retail the same again, it is provided that the Clerk give knowledge to the Master of the Fellowship of all merchandise present in the chamber, so that, the price thereof made, it may be distributed truly amongst the fellowship, having consideration to every man's ability and occupying in merchandise, and in especial in costs bearing for the fellowship. This ordinance continued the system of buying and selling "for the use and profit of the fraternity," which, as we have seen, was adopted in the Ipswich gild in 1201, and its heading throws important light upon the relation of the craft gilds to the merchant gild in Newcastle.

§ Gross, i. p. 118. Note 6.

In many towns on the Continent a struggle took place during the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries, between the merchants organised in their merchant gilds, and the artisans organised in their craft gilds; the craftsmen fighting first for the right of having gilds of their own, then for a share in the government of the town, and lastly for freedom from the trading monopoly of the gild merchant. According to Dr. Gross no such struggle took place in England, and he declares that any suggestion of a quarrel between the crafts and the merchants from the twelfth to the fifteenth centuries in England must be looked upon as "a myth." He also states that not a single unmistakable example of such a conflict has ever been adduced.*

Dr. Gross's contention is supported by Hibbert † and by Cunningham, ‡ whilst Dr. Brentano's contrary contention that there was such a conflict in England § is supported by Mrs. Green, || Prince Kropotkin, ¶ and many others.

The records of the merchants of Newcastle throw considerable light upon the subject. There are certainly evidences that such a struggle did go on in Newcastle from 1342, when Edward III. confirmed the agreement of the full gild, to the effect that all the more important occupations, whether in merchandise or handicraft, were to share in the government of the town, and that every burgess, whether poor or rich, was to have the opportunity of buying the merchandise necessary for himself and his family at prime cost, down to 1730, when the bill of the merchants to establish their custom to seize the goods of free craftsmen bought otherwise than through the agency of the merchants, was dismissed by the Court of Exchequer [p. 255].

On the 21st May 1515, Henry VIII. issued his writ to Edward Ratcliffe, knight, and John Bentley, to take evidence and inquire into the disputes of the Mayor and Aldermen and certain honest members of the community of the town of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, with the artificers, burgesses, and gild merchants of the same town. †† The evidence taken in this action is unfortunately lost, but the decree of the Star Chamber is enrolled, and is set out nearly in full in Dr. Gross's book. ‡‡ It is dated 2nd May 1516.

It recites that great variances, strifes, debates, discords, and dissensions had lately occurred between the Mercers, Drapers, Boothmen, and Spicers, Burgesses and Merchants of the town of Newcastle-upon-Tyne on the one part, and the Craftsmen, Artificers, and Burgesses of the said town on the other part, whether any burgess should occupy the "feate" of buying and selling but only for their family and household, and not to be sold again, other than the said Merchants; and whether any burgess should occupy any other craft than that he was of; and as to the manner of election of the Mayor, Aldermen, Sheriff, Chamberlain, and other officers of the town; and the decree then proceeds to record that the said Star Chamber, calling to them the King's Justices of either Bench, did on the 17th April 1516, declare, by the consent of all parties, that none of the twenty-six "fellowships or crafts" enumerated in the decree, should occupy or use the craft, mystery, or occupation of Mercers, Boothmen, Drapers, or Spicers, or any of them, or any other craft in the said town, but only their own proper crafts, unless they would change and renounce their crafts; in which case they could be admitted to the craft or occupation that they desired to occupy upon making certain payments mentioned in the decree. The decree further adjudged that the Mayor, Aldermen, Sheriff, Chamberlain, and other officers of the town should be elected by the same twelve mysteries as are mentioned in, and in very much the same manner as was provided by, the confirmed articles of 1342.

According to the minutes extracted on pages 81 and 82, the merchants, previously to this decree, had prevented craftsmen from opening shops or retailing merchandise; and in January 1514-15, immediately before these legal proceedings had been instituted, appears an important minute [p. 82], which recites that there had been a great grudge between the merchants and craftsmen of the town, for occupying the occupation of merchants and boothmen; and records that Thomas Lyghtton, smith, and Richard Stotte, glover, entered into bonds never again to occupy the occupation of merchants and boothmen; and that they and John Ratt, "the saler," and Henry Tayllor, smith, were fined for carrying on the occupation of merchants; whilst Robert Horneby, merchant, and Henry Bednell, merchant, were fined for buying iron from smiths against the constitution of the fellowship of merchants. (See also pp. 47, 86, 111, and 138.)

On page 67 appears an ordinance, dated 1554, that every brother, being warned, shall go to church with his brother. It recites that, amongst all other occupations, as well as amongst that fellowship of merchants, it had been thought most godly and most loving neighbourhood that every brother free of the fellowship should attend at every free brother's marrying and burial. Numerous references will be found throughout this work to the custom which existed, for members of the fellowship to attend the funerals of their deceased fellow members [pp. 63, 67, 68, 192, 232, 233, 242, 258, 263]. This custom was observed in gilds of all kinds. In the regulations of a Roman gild of the time of Hadrian (A.D. 133), contributions from the members were provided for the burial of the dead, and members chosen from their number were to take charge of the funeral* ; and in the Anglo-Saxon religious gild at Abbotsbury, dated about 1026, similar contributions were provided for ; and the rules of that gild proceeded to declare as follows :—“ And if he (the member) die in this present place, let the steward have warning to what place the corpse is to go ; and let the steward warn the brethren, the greatest number that he can ride or send to, that they come thither, and worthily accompany the corpse, and bear it to the minster, and earnestly pray there for his soul. It is rightly ordained a gildship if we do thus, and well fitting it is both towards God and man, for we know not which of us shall first depart.” †

On page 51 will be found, under the dates of 1518 and 1548, two ordinances forbidding hostmen, free of the fellowship, from buying any merchandise of their hosts ; and the second of those ordinances provides that merchandise brought within the town by any host, shall be viewed by pricemakers, and distributed amongst the brethren of the fellowship, beginning at the oldest first, according to the rates of shipping.

In the accounts of the Company in the reign of Henry VIII., which will appear in the second volume of this work, there are numerous entries of the payment of “hostmen’s money.” References to “hostmen” are to be found throughout the early statutes of the realm. In 1285 ‡ it was enacted that no man should lodge in the suburbs without his “hoste” should answer for him. In 1357 § it was enacted that, when fishers should sell their merchandise at Yarmouth, they should have their “hostelers” with them. In 1403 ¶ it was enacted that, in every city where stranger merchants repaired, sufficient “hostes” should be assigned to them, and that the said merchants should dwell with their “hostes.” In 1439 ¶ it was enacted that the chief officer of every borough, whither any merchant alien should repair, should assign to every such alien an host or surveyor, who should survey all his buyings and sellings, and register them in a book, and certify them into the exchequer, and should have two pence in the pound for all merchandise by him bought or sold. In 1483  it was enacted that no merchant stranger should be an host to another merchant stranger, unless he were of the same nation.

called "hosts," as in France they were alike called compagnons. The fraternity of Hostmen, on the 3rd February 1600, ordered "that no free brother of this fellowship go, or send, to talk, or speak, with the owner, master or purser of any ship, hoy, or other vessel, to learn whose oaste he is, thereby to procure him to be his oaste, or to withdraw him from his old oaste."*

In accordance with the tendency which then prevailed for all persons having the same occupation to form themselves into an association to protect their privileges, the Hostmen of Newcastle appear at an early date to have formed an association of their own within the Merchant Gild. At that time the business of exporting coals was in its infancy. When the merchant and craft gilds were formed, as they undoubtedly were, on the lines of similar gilds in other towns, no special place was found for the coal trade, and it is reasonable to suppose that it thus fell to the Hostmen of Newcastle as one of the privileges of their position. For when they became incorporated by the great charter which Queen Elizabeth granted to the town of Newcastle, it was recited in the charter that the Mayor and Burgesses, time out of mind of man, had had a gild or fraternity, commonly called the Hoastmen, for the discharging and better disposing of sea-coals and pit-coals, grind-stones, rub-stones, and whet-stones, and the privilege of loading and unloading any of those articles anywhere on the Tyne between Newcastle and Spar Hawk, was by the charter expressly assigned to the Hostmen's Company. From that time forth those articles cease to appear in the books of the Merchants' Company as commodities dealt in by that Company.

All of the twelve leading mysteries of the town appear to have had the right to be admitted into the fraternity of Hostmen. That right was not mentioned in Queen Elizabeth's charter to the town, and disputes arose shortly afterwards, which were referred to the Lord President and Council of the North. The tribunal at York decreed in 1603, in favour of the right of admittance of the members of the mysteries to the Hostmen's Company, in consequence of which great numbers out of the mysteries were admitted free hosts.†

In accordance with that decree, when the charter of the hostmen was renewed in the second year of James I., the right of admittance was confirmed to the mysteries; but a century afterwards when the hostmen had (owing to the growing predominance of the trade in which they were engaged) increased in prosperity more than any other of the Newcastle companies, they again refused admittance to members of the merchants' company, and the mysteries once more took joint action to enforce their rights of admittance to the host-men's company. The minutes relating to these proceedings will be found on pages 259, 260, and 261.

Individual merchants who went to other countries as visiting hosts no doubt found themselves the subjects of extortion and imposition. The tendency on their part to defend their privileges by association was much stronger than that of the hosts who entertained them; and in many towns, both in England and on the Continent, associations were formed by foreign merchants visiting strange towns. The Germans had early established a branch of the great Hanseatic League in London. The English merchants had had privileges granted to them at Antwerp and elsewhere, and by charters of Henry IV. and succeeding monarchs, authority had been given to an English Company of Merchant Adventurers to assemble themselves in any convenient place beyond the seas (being in amity), and choose certain sufficient and able persons amongst them to be their governors, and every merchant, subject to the Crown of England, exercising the occupation of a Merchant Adventurer, was to be in all things contributory and obedient to the ordinances of that Company.

A large trade then existed in the export of wool and skins from Newcastle to France, Flanders and Hamburg, and amongst the articles mentioned in the proclamation of Henry VII. in January 1504-5 * granting a free mart at Calais, Newcastle wool is expressly mentioned. Henry VII., as we have seen before, granted in 1506, to the Newcastle Merchants' Gild the right to buy and ship wools in the surrounding district. In the reign of Henry VIII. the Newcastle Merchants' Gild made a composition with the London Company of Merchant Adventurers to pay the latter £8 per annum by way of impositions, in the name and for the due of all those of the fellowship of Newcastle Merchants residing and dwelling in the town of Newcastle-upon-Tyne. In the reign of Edward VI. the same privilege of buying and selling wools was granted in the same words by royal charter [p. 292] to the merchants of Newcastle who were members of the London Company of Merchant Adventurers, and those Newcastle merchants were, by the same charter, incorporated under a new name as the "Governor, Assistants, Wardens and Fellowship of the Merchant Adventurers of Newcastle-upon-Tyne."

This was the first charter which the merchants of Newcastle had obtained in wider terms than the general, and by that time obscure, charter of John, which granted a gild merchant to the town. Unlike that charter, it prescribed in full and particular terms the rights granted. The Society was to be a corporate body with a perpetual succession; it was to have a governor, twelve assistants, two wardens, a clerk and a beadle. It was to have a seal, and to have power to hold lands, to make by-laws, and to punish offenders; but the only trading right expressly given or confirmed to it was this right to buy and ship wools and skins, the produce of the surrounding district.

From that time forth the Newcastle Merchants' Company conducted its business under the provisions of the new charter of Edward VI.; but the men to whom the charter was granted were the same men who up to that time formed the older merchant gild; and the Merchants' Company went on exercising the functions granted by both charters, and still continued to control as a merchant gild, under the charter of John, the domestic trade of the town, as well as to exercise the monopoly of buying and shipping the important articles of export which were named in the charter of Edward VI. It restrained inhabitants, not free of the company, from trading (see pp. 30, 97, 130, 143, 144, 152, 184, 223); it withheld the public weighing beam and scale from strangers [p. 101]; and it maintained the co-operative method of trading which it had practised as a merchant gild (see pp. 5, 6, 52, 53, 54, 85, 104, 107).*

The relationship which existed between the Newcastle Company of Merchant Adventurers and the London Company styled "The Merchant Adventurers of England," will be shown in the second volume of this work; but it will be well to give here a short account of the London Company, in order that the allusions to it which are contained in this volume may be understood by the reader.

The London Company, which played a large part in English commercial transactions in the fifteenth, sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, and usurped much of the foreign trade previously carried on by means of the Hanseatic League and the Company of the Merchants of the Staple, appears to have arisen from the gild of mercers of the City of London. Down to 1526 the minutes of both companies were kept in the same book, and the Mercers' Hall was the headquarters of the London Merchant Adventurers until the fire of 1666.†

The London Company, in 1296, obtained privileges from John, Duke of Brabant, and established themselves at Antwerp, joining in society with them all other English merchants resorting thither. In 1358 they also received from Louis, Count of Flanders, the privilege of fixing a house or staple for English woollen cloth at Bruges. Whilst the more ancient Company of the Merchants of the Staple dealt in unmanufactured wool, the London Merchant Adventurers began to send to Bruges English-made cloth, which after this time was exported in great quantities. The London Company received charters from Henry IV., Henry V. and Edward IV. empowering them to organise themselves in the manner we have previously stated, but their early charters did not give them, in express terms, any exclusive powers to trade. The London Company, however, by laying taxes on the goods imported from England, and by means of their powerful combination, at length assumed the power of excluding all others from trading at their continental mart towns, unless the traders were admitted into their fellowship, for which privilege large fines were exacted.*

In 1496 an Act of Parliament † was passed which recited that the fellowship of the mercers and other merchants and adventurers, dwelling and being free within the City of London, had, contrary to law, reason, charity, right, and conscience, made an ordinance that no Englishman, resorting to the foreign marts mentioned in the act, should buy or sell goods, wares, or merchandise except he should first compound and make fine with the said fellowship; which fine had been formerly of the value of half an old noble sterling, and had been afterwards increased to one hundred shillings, and had then amounted to £40: and the statute enacted that every Englishman might have free recourse to the coasts of Flanders, Holland, Zealand, Brabant, and other places thereto adjoining, without exaction or fine, except only ten marks.

Although the fine was thus limited, it was, by this statute, established at law in favour of the London Company of Merchant Adventurers, who soon after that time assumed the appellation of the Merchant Adventurers of England. They are styled "The Fellowship of Merchant Adventurers of England" in a charter granted to them by Henry VII. in 1503, and by that charter all merchant adventurers are enjoined to come into the freedom of the fellowship. The privileges granted to them by Henry VII. were confirmed by Henry VIII.; and by his charters, and those of Elizabeth, they obtained the exclusive right of trading on the coasts opposite England.

All the English merchants in the various English coast towns were thus forced to join the London Company, and it had branches at Newcastle, York, Hull, Norwich, Ipswich, Exeter, and elsewhere. In 1519 the Newcastle Merchants' Company had made the agreement with the London Company which has before been mentioned, to pay that company a composition of £8 per annum; and although in 1547 the Newcastle Merchants obtained their own charter as Merchant Adventurers, they still continued to pay to the London Company that composition of £8 per annum in lieu of impositions upon their individual members. On the 19th November 1601 the composition is mentioned in their records [p. 110], and it appears to have been collected from the individual members of the Newcastle Company, for they complained of the rate of exchange charged to them. In 1636 the London Company repudiated the composition, and endeavoured to charge the merchants belonging to the Newcastle Company with individual impositions in lieu of, or in addition to, the composition of £8. This course was resisted by the Newcastle Company, and the claim and its resistance resulted in lawsuits between the London Company and the Newcastle Company which extended over thirty years. The various details of the negotiations and proceedings are carefully recorded in the Newcastle Company's books, and will form a portion of the second volume of this work.

During the time over which the minutes extracted in the present volume extend, the London Company, to which the Newcastle Company was thus affiliated, attained a great position. In 1550 (according to John Wheeler, a secretary of the London Company) the English Merchant Adventurers maintained or employed at least 20,000 persons in the City of Antwerp alone, besides 30,000 more in other parts of the Netherlands. In 1560, Queen Elizabeth, in order to pay for her preparations for war, borrowed of the London Company £30,000, to which all the members, including those in Newcastle-upon-Tyne, were contributory [p. 89]. In 1568 she seized Spanish treasure in ships at Plymouth. The Duke of Alva retaliated upon the English merchants at Antwerp, and thus obliged them to leave that city. In 1586 Queen Elizabeth granted the London Company a new charter to exercise their trade in Germany as amply as they had formerly done in the Netherlands, and strictly prohibited all not free of that company to trade within their limits.* In 1601, at the time when John Wheeler, the secretary of the company, wrote his work,† the ports to which they traded were the towns and ports lying between the River of Somme in France, and the Skaw in Denmark. "Not into all at once, or at each man's pleasure, but unto one or two towns at the most within the above said limits which they commonly call the mart town or towns."

In 1622 Malynes‡ complained that all the trade of English merchants was in the power of the Merchant Adventurers only. In 1639 their chief mart town was at Rotterdam. In 1650 Bruges and Hamburg both invited them to settle in their cities; the fear of a religious persecution induced them to reject the offer of Bruges; great privileges were offered to them by the magistrates of Hamburg, and they repaired thither in 1650, and were thenceforth called and known by the name of the "Hamburgh Company." Their other and more proper name of the Merchant Adventurers of England fell into disuse, and was only used in deeds and writings.

To return to the Newcastle Company, it will be remembered that four subsidiary fraternities — namely, the mercers, drapers, boothmen, and spicers — formed the gild merchant at the time of the Star Chamber decree in 1516. In 1363 an Act of Parliament had been passed that no merchant should use but one sort of merchandise which he should elect between the date of the act and the feast of Chaundelaure then next; and two merchants of each merchandise in each city and borough and county were to be appointed to carry the act into execution.* The act was repealed in the next year,† but it shows that already the process of the separation of different trades in merchandise had taken place; and indeed in 1342, as we have already seen, three of these four subsidiary companies had a separate existence.

The mercers were the general merchants, and merceries seem to have included not only small wares, but also such goods as linen and canvas. In 1378, in an act of Parliament relating to merchants,‡ occur the expressions, “all mannér of small wares, as silk, gold wire or silver wire, coverchiefs, and other such petites merceries, and also all other great wares, such as cloth of gold and silver, silk, sendal, napery, linen cloth, canvas, and other such gross merceries.” The term “mercier” afterwards became restricted to dealers in haberdashery and silk wares.§ No ordinary, from either the Crown or the Corporation, appears to have ever existed for the Mercers’ Company; probably because its existence was justified under King John’s charter, and because its members formed part of the gild or corporation established by it.

The merchant drapers, who also formed a branch of the Merchants’ Company, were no doubt originally the merchants of woollen cloth mentioned in the articles and charter of 1342.|| By the sixteenth century a distinction had apparently grown up between merchants of woollen cloth, who were then styled merchants, and the retailers of woollen cloth, who were then styled drapers. These retail drapers occupied an intermediate position between the merchants and the craftsmen, and they appear to have had a separate ordinary granted to them in 1512.¶ This led in time to dissensions between the merchant drapers’ branch of the Merchants’ Company and the outside drapers, of which mention will be found in numerous extracts in this volume between the years 1650 and 1724 [pp. 162, 164, 182, 184, 186, 187, 193, 194, 208, 253]. The quarrel was whether the merchant drapers within the Merchants’ Company, or the drapers claiming under the ordinary of 1512, were the Society of Drapers having the right, under the eighteenth clause of the charter of 2 James I. to the town, to choose auditors for the town. The merchant drapers rightly gained this point, for they were undoubtedly the representatives of those merchants of woollen cloth who first appeared amongst the twelve leading mysteries named in the prior town charters, but in consequence of the ordinary of 1512 the Merchants' Company were unable to stop the trading of the retail drapers. They prosecuted all persons outside the Company who attempted to trade as mercers or boothmen, but they never appear to have been able to prosecute any person, outside of the Company, trading as a draper. Throughout the period covered by the records there were drapers outside the Merchants' Company. There are instances of the admittance of two of them to the privileges of the Company. In 1544 Edmund Stott, burgess and draper, was admitted into the fellowship of mercers [p. 84]; and in 1649 Thomas Bonner, "he being then Mayor," who was described in 1645 as a draper [p. 31], and in 1646 as an interloper [p. 140], was, "by great grace and favour," admitted to his personal freedom of the Newcastle Company of Merchant Adventurers [p. 152].

Mr. Thomas Bonner was very grateful for the honour conferred upon him, for in the following year he presented the Company "with three large silver cups with covers double gilt, manifesting thereby his thankfulness for the foresaid favour" [p. 161].

These silver cups are still in the possession of the Company. They are described in the Proceedings of the Newcastle Society of Antiquaries, N.S., vol. i. p. 323, as follows:—

"Three silver cups. London, 1649-50. 'The gift of Thomas Bonner, Esq., Mayor of Newcastle-upon-Tyne to the Company of Merchante Adventurers of that town. Anno Dom. 1649.' On the feet, 'Repaired and new gilded at the expense of Matthew Ridley, Esq., Governor, 1745.' The corresponding ladles are modern, 1866.

"The surface of these very fine cups is embossed with boldly designed fleurs-de-lis. A pegasus, the crest of the company, is placed on the top of each cover."

The embers of the feud between the two bodies of drapers still smouldered in Alderman Hornby's day, for, writing in 1774, he says: "The Company of Cappers style themselves Drapers, though in the Town Books they are called Cappers, and the term Draper is not admitted to belong to them by the Merchants' Company. Anciently this must have been a considerable trade when all ranks of men wore caps (before the invention and use of felt hats)." * Brand states they were very improperly called Cappers.† He was favoured with a sight of their records, then in the possession of Mr. Rutter, Attorney-at-law. M. A. Richardson, in 1848, quotes their ordinary,‡ but I have been unable to trace where their records are now.

The boothmen or corn-merchants, like the mercers, continue their clear connection with the Company from 1342 to the present day. The name of "boothmen" is an unusual one. It is, no doubt, connected with the booths, used at fairs, and bothagium was a tribute paid to the Lord of the Manor for the erection of such booths, but I know of no instance of any special connection of the word with the sale of corn, unless it is connected with the booting corn, which was formerly paid by the tenants of a manor to the Prior of Rochester.* The boothmen had no separate ordinary, probably for the same reason as the mercers—namely, that they were always deemed to be within the gild authorised by King John's charter.

The spicers, as a branch of the Merchants' Company, are only found in the Star Chamber decree in 1516, but a separate oath for them, under the date of 1517, appears in the books of the Merchants' Company. They are not mentioned in the charter of 1342, although they possibly may have been deemed one of the lesser mysteries not included in the twelve to whom the government of the town was committed. More probably their goods were deemed to be within the class privileged to be sold by the mercers or merchants generally, between 1342 and 1516, as they certainly were so deemed to be after that last date, and onwards, well into the middle of the eighteenth century [pp. 151, 256].

The question raised in the recitals preceding the operative part of the Star Chamber decree of 1516, "whether any of the burgesses of the town should occupy the feate of buying and selling other than the said merchants," was evidently considered to have been settled by that decree in favour of the Merchants' Company. Both before and after that decree even persons "free of the town" if not "free of the fellowship" were debarred from trading [pp. 30, 81, 82, 157]. Taking literally the words "foreign bought and foreign sold," which appear throughout these records, and in the records of other towns and gilds, they do not go so far as to prohibit the sale of goods by other freemen of the town; and, according to Gardner, it was only people not free of the town who were reputed foreigners.† But in the town itself the right of the Merchants' Company to control the entire trade of the town, even as against the freemen of the town, seems never to have been seriously disputed until the Exchequer trial in the eighteenth century [p. 255]. The custom of "foreign bought and foreign sold" was confirmed to the town of Newcastle by the Great Charter of 42 Elizabeth, before alluded to.‡ The charter confirmed all the former liberties of the town, gave to the common council power to make by-laws for all merchants, artificers, and others residing in the town, and by clause 33 granted that no merchant, if a foreigner or stranger from the liberty of the town of Newcastle, shall sell any of his merchandise within the said town (except victuals, and excepting in the markets and fairs) to any foreign merchant, neither shall such foreign merchant buy any merchandise (except as before excepted) from any foreign merchant within the same town, upon pain of forfeiture of those merchandises to the public use and benefit of the mayor and burgesses for the time being, by them and their officers to be seized, in as ample a manner as in the same town had been theretofore lawfully used.

The rights so granted or confirmed were evidently considered to have been granted or confirmed in favour of the Merchants' Company. In the hard cases mentioned in Gardner's *England's Grievance it is always two merchants who make the seizure. The same merchants who are mentioned in Gardner are also mentioned in the books of the Merchants' Company; and in 1645 George Dobson and John Stranguish, who were appointed by the Merchants' Company to seize upon goods "foreign bought and foreign sold," desired the Company's seal for the further strengthening of their commission on that behalf [p. 138].

This right of seizure was most extensively exercised, and instances of it will be found throughout the volume [pp. 124, 150, 151, 152, 157, 158, 163, 183, 199, 201, 207, 253].

Where, for some reason a distress was not available, the merchants enforced their rights by legal proceedings;† and where neither distress nor prosecution availed them, the Merchants' Company had no scruple in boycotting those who offended against their rights or privileges. From the beginning to the end of their career, so far as it is set out in the pages of this volume, they indulged largely in that resource of injured communities [pp. 32, 83, 84, 86, 141, 219, 225].

The Company's proceedings were strengthened in 1648, by an ordinance under the hand and seal of the Mayor, prohibiting foreigners to the freedom of the town from selling such commodities as any free mercer or boothman did sell [p. 146], and by an ordinance of the common council in 1717, prohibiting persons not free of the

The poor people petitioned Sir Arthur Heislerigge for the same, who interceded hard with them for the restauration thereof, but it was refused, yet they, fearing Sir Arthur's displeasure, sold the tobacco for thirty pound, and restored to the poor owner but fifteen pounds thereof.—Gardner's England's Grievance, p. 99.

Company of Merchant Adventurers from selling goods, wares, and merchandise, which, by custom time out of mind, had been sold by freemen of that Company only [p. 249].

Notwithstanding strong protests on the part of the growing community of unprivileged inhabitants, the members of the Merchants' Company, appear by the means above stated, to have maintained their privileges practically intact throughout the whole of the seventeenth century. Similar privileges were not then uncommon in England. The Newcastle Corporation, in its answer to Gardner's imputations, said:—"They justify the seizing of goods, foreign bought and foreign sold, by all custom used in the same town time out of mind; and the said custom is practised in the cities of London and York, and in many other cities and towns within this nation, and such custom is adjudged to be a good custom in law."*

Towards the end of the seventeenth century the current in favour of greater freedom in trading was setting in strongly. In 1677 Mr. Ralph Elstob and other mercers of the Company commenced a suit against George Ayrey of Gateshead, for exercising the trade of a mercer "contrary to the statute," and had cast the said Ayrey at the then last Assizes at Durham; but in 1678 he and Mr. Nathaniel Ord moved the Court of the Merchants' Company for their assistance in the management of a new suit of law against George Ayrey and others, wherein they had expended a considerable sum of money, and it was carried that the sum of £20 should be paid to them. In the same year a committee was chosen to take into consideration by what means the market might be supplied, since the restraint of peddlers by the Company from setting up their booths upon the Sandhill, and it was decided that these peddlers should be allowed to conduct their business on certain conditions [pp. 220, 222, 224].

And further the same Mayor and Burgesses say that within the aforesaid town and the suburbs limits and precincts of the same town there is such a Custom held, and from the time of the Contrary Whereof it is not in the memory of man, there was such a custom held and Used, that if any Merchant being a Stranger from the Liberty and freedom of the aforesaid Town of Newcastle aforesaid hath sold any his Merchandizes Within the said Town and the precincts and libertys of the same (Except it be Victualls and Except in the ffairs held within the aforesaid Town the libertys and limitts of the same) To any fforeign Merchant or Tradesman or that such fforeign Merchant hath bought such Merchandizes or Wares (Except before excepted) of any other fforeign Merchant Within the same Town the libertys and precincts of the same, otherwise than in Gross and by Whole Sale; Then the same Merchandizes and Wares so sold and bought were forfeited to the publick Use behoof and profit of the aforesaid Town, And that such Merchandizes so bought and sold as afore specified Within the aforesaid Town and the libertys of the same by fforeigners, being found after such buying and selling Within the aforesaid Town and the libertys of the same, have been Used to be levied had and seized by the aforesaid Mayor and Burgesses of that Town or their Officers of the aforesaid Town to the Use and profit of the aforesaid Town. —MS. in the possession of the Literary and Philosophical Society of Newcastle-upon-Tyne.

In 1685 Edward Clark sold a parcel of rod iron to two smiths, which was seized by the clerk and beadle as "foreign sold and bought." Thirty years before that date the iron would have been entirely confiscated [p. 150], but in this case it was resolved that it should be restored to the smiths, and that Edward Clark, who was a master mariner, should be set off from being employed by any brother or sister of the fellowship for the space of three years [p. 230]. Mrs. Abigail Smith and Mrs. Ann Blenkinsop, who in 1685 and 1686 respectively, were keeping open shop and selling merchandise contrary to the Company's privileges, were each allowed six months to dispose of their goods [pp. 230, 232]. In 1695 a similar complaint is made against Mrs. England, and in this case instead of dealing with her summarily, a committee is chosen to consider the complaint [p. 239].

As time went on this committee had plenty to do. In 1701 it reported "that divers persons not free of this fellowship presume to keep open shop and sell divers wares and merchandise, as well groceries as mercers' goods by retail, having only a glass window placed before the shop" [p. 241]; and in 1713 they met with an awkward customer in Cuthbert Ogle, confectioner. He had been indicted at the then last sessions in Newcastle for exercising the trade of a grocer, and as the sale of groceries was not a craft, this was considered to be an infringement of the privileges of the Merchants' Company. Since his indictment he had been spoken to by some of the members of the Merchants' Company, to admonish him to forbear selling figs. But the irreverent interloper gave for answer: "That if he could make a profit, he would not only sell figs, but sugars also, and that after the figs he had were sold, he would order to London for twenty barrels more," which was so great an affront to the liberties and privileges of the fellowship, that the Merchants' Court thereupon ordered "that no brother of this fellowship, servant, agent or other person, for himself or any of his friends or acquaintance, do, after the date hereof, buy of the said Cuthbert Ogle, his wife, servant, or agent, any wet or dry sweetmeats, comfits, or other confectionery goods whatsoever, until the said Cuthbert Ogle shall first make his submission to the satisfaction of the Company" [pp. 248, 249].

Counsel advised that for the better suppressing of the growing encroachments of the privileges of the merchants, the Merchants' Company should act in concert with the Corporation; and the complacent Corporation accordingly made, in 1717, a strong act of common council in the Company's favour, to which we have already referred; but notwithstanding this reinforcement, the usurpers of the exclusive privileges of the Company became more numerous. In June 1726 the Committee had laid before them by the Wardens a list of no fewer than 114 persons who kept shops, most of them not free of the town, and many of them selling by retail goods properly belonging to the Merchants' Company ; and, worst of all, the Committee complained against Mr. William Leighton, merchant, for telling several of the retailers that he would ensure them against any penalty they should suffer ; and Mr. Leighton "being in court, did partly deny same, but was ordered to let those persons know that he was mistaken in offering any such thing to them" [p. 253].

The crisis came when, in December 1726, Mr. Robert Johnson and Mr. Thomas Partis, the wardens of the Company, seized fourteen barrels of tar belonging to Mr. Edward Ord, "foreign bought and foreign sold" ; twenty-four bushels of wheat belonging to James Brankston, hostman, sold to Robert Dalston, starchmaker ; and eight bolls belonging to John Robinson, junior, hostman, and sold by him to members of the Company of Bakers and Brewers. The Merchants' Company thanked Mr. Robert Johnson and Mr. Thomas Partis for their diligence, and unanimously agreed that if any action should be commenced against the wardens for the seizures aforementioned, the expense should be met by the Merchants' Company. Mr. Chaloner Cooper, a more far-seeing merchant, had told Mr. Robert Johnson, apparently in language more forcible than polite, that he had acted imprudently in seizing the wheat ; but the Governor "modestly reprehended" Mr. Cooper, and his fault was passed over [p. 254]. It will be seen, on reference to the note on page 255, that the Company of Bakers and Brewers took up the case for their member, Mr. William Dixon, a buyer from Mr. John Robinson, junior, whose wheat had been seized. They caused an action to be brought against the said Robert Johnson, and this action was pending for trial at the York Assizes when the Merchant Adventurers took steps on their part to restrain the action, and to establish their rights, and filed a bill for that purpose on the Equity side of the Court of Exchequer, a proceeding which had apparently been advised by "George Grey, Esquire, counsellor-at-law."

It was, however, a bad time for getting an English Court to establish or strengthen an exclusive custom of the sort. Twenty years before, Sir Joshua Child, one of the early economists of the new school, had expressed the opinion "that all restrictions on trade are naught ; and that no Company whatever, whether they trade in a joint stock, or under regulations called regulated companies, can be for public good, except it be made easy for all or any of His Majesty's subjects to be admitted into them."* In 1705 the Mayor of Winchester had brought an action against one Wilks, alleging that it was not lawful for him to exercise a trade in that town, as he was not free of the Winchester gild merchant. Mr. Justice Powell said that a custom to exclude people from exercising a trade was a strange custom; and Chief-Justice Holt said that it was a point not determined whether such a custom was good outside the City of London. Finally judgment was stayed, on the technical ground that the action should have been brought by the gild and not by the Mayor, and the Court declined saying anything on the merits of the action.*

Possibly Mr. George Grey thought that the Judges on the Chancery side of the Exchequer would lean more favourably to vested rights than the Justices of the Queen's Bench had done. Instead of that, they dismissed the bill of the Merchant Adventurers of Newcastle-upon-Tyne [p. 255], and from that time forth the familiar expression of "foreign bought and foreign sold" disappears from their books.†

Their domestic trade being thus apparently thrown open to all the freemen of the town, it became easy for outsiders to trade in the name of a freeman of some other company. The foreign rights of the Company had suffered by the abrogation of the exclusive rights of the Merchant Adventurers of England; and, with the accession of William III., wars with the French on the Continent were begun, which lasted, with intermissions, for more than a century. During the eighteenth century most of the ports of Europe were shut, at one time or another, to English trade, and English merchants turned their thoughts of profit to other channels, such as trade with the American Colonies, or with the East Indies, where a strong exclusive company had been established and was prospering.

I do not find the English Company of Merchant Adventurers mentioned in history after the treaty of Hamburg in 1719, which provided that English herrings should be allowed to be imported into Hamburg, and that the senders should be at liberty to choose their factors either from among the laudable English Company (i.e. the Merchant Adventurers) residing in the town or else among the burghers.‡ Anderson states that when he wrote, in 1763, the London Company was still carrying on a great commerce; but Maitland, in his History of London, written in 1756, states that the London Company, since the laying open of their trade in the reign of William III., had been greatly reduced; and he apprehended, from the fact of the Hamburgers having engrossed nearly all the trade from Great Britain to that city, that in a few years the English Merchant Adventurers' Company would cease to exist.§ In 1774 the divorce between the Newcastle Merchants and the Hamburg Merchants was so complete that in the parliamentary contest for Newcastle in † Almost immediately afterwards the pendulum of judicial decision began to swing in the other direction, and very similar rights of exclusive trading were held to exist in Colchester in 1732, in Devizes in 1748, and in Bath in 1766.—1 Wilson's Reports, 233, 237. 4 Burrows' Reports, p. 1951.

that year, whilst on the one hand, Sir Walter Calverley Blackett and Sir Matthew White Ridley, two of the candidates, used, as stewards of the Merchants' Company, the Merchants' Hall for their tally-room, it was, on the other hand, alleged by their party as an objection to their opponent, Mr. Thomas Delaval, that he was "an Hamburg merchant." *

Although after the judgment in the Bakers and Brewers' case,† no further mention occurs in the Company's books of the doctrine of "foreign bought and foreign sold," yet it will be seen from the entries extracted in this volume that the Merchants' Company still continued, even after that judgment, to restrain persons from trading in the town who were not free of the Merchants' Company. They did this under the provisions of the statute of Elizabeth relating to artificers, labourers, servants of husbandry and apprentices. Section 31 of that statute enacted that it should not be lawful for any person to set up, occupy, use or exercise any craft, mystery or occupation then used or occupied within England or Wales except he should have been brought up therein seven years at least as an apprentice.‡ Throughout the first three quarters of the eighteenth century the records of the Newcastle Quarter Sessions contain entries of persons prosecuted for exercising trades without being first apprenticed thereto, contrary to that statute.§

* Murray's The Burgesses' Poll, p. 12, and The Contest, p. 39.

† After the decision in this case the custom grew prevalent for craftsmen to open shops; but this was still considered to be such a departure from their proper business, that the opening of a shop by a tailor was sufficient ground for a claim on the part of his apprentice to be discharged from his apprenticeship, because he had been employed at waiting in the shop instead of at learning his trade:—

"James Johnson petitioned setting forth that he was by Indentures of Apprenticeship bearing date the 29 Jan. 1738 bound apprentice to Matthew Stephenson Taylor and that the said Matthew Stephenson for some years last past hath kept and doth now keep shop for the selling of cloth and other drapery goods and that the said James Johnson by the order and directions of his said master hath been mostly employed in attending and taking care of the shop and has not by means of such attendance been instructed in the said business of a Taylor and hath therefore moved by Mr. Brown his attorney to be discharged from his said master and to be at liberty to chuse another master to which the said Matthew Stephenson by Mr. Richardson his attorney doth consent and agree. It is therefore ordered that the said James Johnson be accordingly discharged from his said master [and that the Indenture be delivered up.]"—Newcastle Quarter Sessions Records, Michs. 1743.

‡ 5 Elizabeth, cap. 4, sect. 31. The intent of this statute was that no persons should take upon them any art, mystery, or trade but such wherein they had skill and knowledge.—Dalton's Justice of the Peace, p. 125.

§ The following is a note of some of the persons so prosecuted:—

|-------|--|---------------------------|
| 1735. | Joe Bulman for exercising the trade of a felt-maker. | |
| 1736. | William Moffit and seven others . | grocer. |
| 1736. | John Slater | joyner (not a true bill). |
| 1736. | Leonard Umfrevile | printer. |
| 1737. | William Watson | baker. |
| 1739. | Andrew Robson and four others . | grocer. |

It will be observed from the wording of the records extracted [p. 263] that although the complaints, as minuted in the Merchants' books, were that persons exercised the trade of a merchant, yet when these persons were prosecuted or asked for the licence of the Company it was for exercising the trade of a grocer. The reason for the variance was, that it had been held at law that the Act only extended to such trades as implied mystery and craft, and that therefore merchants, husbandmen, gardeners, etc., were not within the statute.* There had been no such decision with regard to the trade of a grocer, although by analogy that trade also would be exempt, as it consisted merely in buying and selling a certain class of merchandise, and did not imply mystery or craft; but as the magistrates on the Quarter Sessions bench, and the jury who tried the cases there, were all members of either the Merchants' Company, the Hostmen's Company, or one of the Craft Mysteries, the question, if raised, would probably have been decided against the offender. It appears never to have been raised; and until 1771 there are numerous records of prosecutions instituted by the Merchants' Company against persons who exercised the trade of a grocer. These prosecutions were, in many cases, withdrawn where the offenders acknowledged the right of the Merchants' Company to forbid the trading, and petitioned for the licence of the Company. In some cases licences were granted by the Merchants' Company [pp. 262, 263], and such licences were deemed sufficient to authorise the trading as grocers by persons who had not been apprenticed. This is an indication that the Merchants' Company was considered to be a merchant gild having not only the right to restrain persons from trading but also the right to authorise such trading by persons not free of the gild on a payment being made to the gild (see ante, p. xvii).

The last prosecutions, as we have said, were in 1771. In 1774 Alderman Hornby wrote that the burgesses' claim to exclusive trading was at that date "no longer rigidly insisted upon," and that "in many cases it had been given up."† In 1777 John Collier published his Essay on Charters, which contained a catechism written to show the illusive benefit of the freemen's privileges. Exclusive trading is not mentioned amongst the privileges enumerated in this catechism, and does not seem to have been at that time sufficiently in force to be the subject of attack by him.

In 1786 a committee of the Merchants' Company, appointed to inquire into infringements and also as to outstanding arrears, reported that the wardens had waited upon various persons who were keeping shop, and the committee reported also the replies of the persons so waited on. Some of them were still willing to submit to the Company, some refused to do so, and others alleged that they have carried on business a sufficiently long time to make them free of the statute.* Upon the report being read, the committee was ordered to meet again to consider the further steps necessary to be taken to get in the arrears of subscriptions, but no further order was given to the committee to attack or deal with the persons reported by them to have been so trading [pp. 267, 268]. In fact, the Company from that time dropped the question, and abandoned for ever their claim to exclusive trading privileges.

In 1814 the section of the statute of Elizabeth requiring apprenticeship as a preliminary to the exercise of a calling was repealed. There was considerable opposition to its total repeal. It was true that the condition of things before the repeal had become unsatisfactory, and that whilst the law was nominally in force, it had ceased to be practically observed. All agreed that a new law had become necessary, but many wished for the amendment of the section instead of its total repeal. Petitions were presented to Parliament by the supporters of both views; and whilst 300,000 persons petitioned for the maintenance of the section, there were but 2,000 signatures for its repeal. All the witnesses examined before the Parliamentary Committee were against the repeal. The workmen, who wished for the amendment rather than the repeal of the section, urged that a journeyman lawfully educated for his trade had acquired a right similar to property, and that the effect of the repeal of the section would be to deprive him of that property. But the pressure of the master-manufacturers of that day for the repeal of the section was too strong, and an Act of Parliament was passed which made apprenticeship no longer necessary in any trade.†

The rights and privileges of the Merchants' Company had, as we have seen, become obsolete and disused before the close of the eighteenth century. They were finally abrogated by Section 14 of the Municipal Corporations Reform Act, 1835, which enacted that every person in any borough might keep any shop and use every lawful trade and occupation within any borough.‡ M. A. Richardson, writing in 1838, says:—"The Merchant Adventurers' and Hostmen's Companies before noticed have ceased to exercise any influence over the commerce of Newcastle, and as Companies have no share in carrying on the immense trade that has just past under review." *

The anonymous author who, two hundred years ago, wrote the Memoirs of Ambrose Barnes, said:—"Whether it be from the soil, or from some invisible powers that preside in every place, it is known that Newcastle has always been as tenacious of antiquities, as Athens of old was curious of novelties." † And this still holds good. In the closing years of the nineteenth century, the octroi duty of the thorough toll, abolished in almost every other town in England, is still collected on all goods entering the city. The Court of Piepowder, established when the fairs were granted six hundred years ago, is still proclaimed twice a year, at the site of the market cross, which once formed the centre of an agricultural village. A Jacobus or a Carolus is still presented by the city at every Assize to the Judges of Queen Victoria, just as "two old spurr riolls" were given by the town in 1595 to the Assize Judges of Queen Elizabeth, and "two rose nobles" in 1659 to the Assize Judges of the Commonwealth. Three times a year the bell from the city belfry calls the free burgesses to that common gild by which they governed the town before it had a common council; on each occasion the Mayor still meets the freemen in the gild, and hears their grievances (although for two hundred years the Mayor, to protect the rights of the common council, has refused to put any motion from the chair); ‡ and notwithstanding that one hundred years have passed since the actual, and sixty years since the legal extinction of their exclusive rights, the Merchants' Company still hold their annual court on the site of the Maison de Dieu built by the most illustrious member of their Company four hundred and eighty years ago.

Roger Thornton, in 1403, obtained a licence from the Crown to convey to the Corporation of the town a piece of land where poor persons were to be provided with meat and clothing in a "House of God" to be built thereon by him, and the hospital when completed, was licensed by the name of the "Hospital of St. Katherine." Above this building the merchants were holding their meetings when the extracted ordinances began in 1480. Grey, writing in notwithstanding any such Custom or Bye Law, every Person in any Borough may keep any Shop for the Sale of all lawful Wares and Merchandizes by Wholesale or Retail, and use every lawful Trade, Occupation, Mystery, and Handicraft, for Hire, Gain, Sale, or otherwise, within any Borough."—5 & 6 William IV. c. 76, section 14.

1649, tells us that above this building (the Maison de Dieu) is the stately court of the Merchant Adventurers. The Lumleys, Earls of Scarborough, mentioned in the extracts from the records, were descendants in the female line of Roger Thornton, the son of the founder.*

Alderman Hornby, writing in 1774, tells us that "the Court of the Merchant Adventurers is held by the Company of the Corporation. The Corporation of Newcastle purchased this building which when I first remembered it consisted of a large room arched with stone, over which was the Merchants' Court, and beneath, a cellar roofed in the same manner; on the north side there was an ancient stone building covered with lead in which there were shops."†

At the parliamentary election in the same year of 1774, Sir Matthew White Ridley stated as a justification for the use of the Merchants' Court by his colleagues and himself as their tally-room, "that it was not the Town Hall they used for that purpose, but the Company of Merchants' meeting-house; which, though under the same roof, and entered by the same way as the Town Hall, yet belonged solely to that Company; neither the Sheriff as returning-officer, nor himself as Mayor, had anything to do with it. But himself, as one of the stewards of that Company, assumed a right with the consent of his partner, which every other Company's stewards did, that of letting the hall to whom, and for what use he pleased; and therefore did use it as a tally-room for Sir Walter Blackett and himself."‡ In the year 1823 the Company permitted the Corporation to pull down the old Merchants' Court with a view to public improvement, on the condition (which was duly observed by the Corporation) that it should be rebuilt in the same situation, and that the ancient ornaments and furniture should be preserved and replaced.§

The chief ornament of the room is some fine carved wainscoting executed by skilful artificers, and bearing date the year 1636. The principal carvings represent the Miraculous Draught of Fishes, the Judgment of Solomon, Christ restoring sight to the blind, Judas betraying Christ, Mary Magdalene washing Christ's feet, and the miracle of feeding the multitude with loaves and fishes. The room is oak-panelled throughout, and a light and graceful carved or stuccoed frieze of the same dark colour as the panels runs round the room, representing chariots drawn by birds and horses. A woodcut showing the interior of the room, from a sketch by Mr. Knowles, appears on page 14 of Knowles and Boyle's Vestiges of Old Newcastle and Gateshead.

Besides the arms of past benefactors and governors of the Company, which are placed round the top of the frieze, there is over the governor's chair a fine escutcheon showing in colours the arms of the Merchant Adventurers of Newcastle. They differ but slightly from those of the London Company, from which they were probably adopted, and they are emblazoned as follows:—

ARMS—“Barry undée of six arg. and az., a chief quartered gu. and or; in the first and fourth quarters a lion of England, and in the second and third quarters two Lancastrian roses.”

CREST—“On a crown or, a pegasus issuant charged on each wing with two roses of the shield, and holding a split banner gu., ensigned with a cross arg.”

SUPPORTERS—“Two pegasuses charged in like manner.”

MOTTO—“Deus sit noster amicus.”

The meaning of the shield is clear. The wavy lines white and blue (which are also to be found on the shield of the Merchants of the Staple of Calais) represent the sea, whilst the bearings on the chief give the national character, and recall the line of kings from whom the most important privileges of the parent Company were obtained. Two seals of the Company, each bearing a similar coat of arms (but without crest, supporters or motto) are engraved in Brand, vol. ii., on the plate facing p. 142.

There are some differences, however, as well in the shield as in the crest, supporters, and motto, between the heraldic bearings of the Newcastle Company given by Brand and those given by Walker and Richardson, whilst both their accounts also differ in detail from the description above contained. These differences probably arise from there having been no authentic grant of arms by the Heralds' College to the Newcastle Company. If there is no such recorded grant, the above-mentioned escutcheon, placed as it is in the hall of the Company, seems to be the best guide to the arms which the Company claims to bear.

The Corporation of Newcastle-upon-Tyne still receive periodically the bequest under Sir Thomas White's will, an extract from which is set out in a note to pp. 229, 230. The bequest is payable to each town or company mentioned in the list given on p. 229, in every twenty-fourth year, on St. Bartholomew's day (24th August).

There are perhaps other entries in this volume to which attention might be called, but it is time to end this too-hurried sketch of an institution which fostered the early growth of the commerce of the Tyne,—a commerce which now spreads its network over wide seas and distant continents, and looks back with amused wonder at the tightness of the swaddling-clothes which enwrapped its baby form. Let us not regard with too much scorn the restrictions which these records disclose. When the institution was founded, the time had not come for the free play of individual enterprise. What was then wanted was the discipline and the order that should build up a strong organised body, able to protect its members against the encroachments of the lawless and the violence of the great. With all its faults, the gild system tended to produce a good article at a remunerative price, and such a system probably satisfied the needs of the time when it was organised. Regulations which were at first reasonable and beneficent gradually became inexpedient and impracticable. So soon as the associations of the Middle Ages became exclusive, their power began to totter. To the jealousy between the merchants and the crafts in the fourteenth, fifteenth, and sixteenth centuries was added, in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, the jealousy of the inhabitants outside the merchant and artisan families who had monopolised both trade and manufacture, until at last the surrounding forces grew too strong, and the holders of the ancient rights had to capitulate completely. The founders of these privileged bodies could not foresee that the larger growth of modern ideas would require freer scope; and, in like manner, the advocates of the present doctrine of complete individual freedom have imagined that their principles are eternal. But already the need has been felt for some of that esprit de corps, that careful workmanship, and that social sentiment which characterised the older associations. It is beginning to be dimly discerned that social science has not yet reached its final goal of wisdom; that something may even be gained from the experience of the past in directing the efforts of the future. If that be so, it may be useful, as well as interesting, to turn to the entries in this volume, to find causes for the early prosperity and the subsequent decay of the gild system, as adopted and practised by the founders of the ancient borough and modern city of Newcastle-upon-Tyne.

* The earliest ordinances of the Society of Merchants which have been preserved are contained in the first six pages of the large folio volume, mentioned in the Preface as Book I. These ordinances constitute the first five pages of the printed extracts, and contain all the enactments which the Merchants' Company, in 1479-80, considered necessary for their guidance and government. Experience soon convinced them of the need of other laws, and these were framed from time to time. But during a very considerable period the members of the Society seem to have been influenced by a love of legislating, and their bye-laws increased to an unnecessary and perplexing extent. The ordinances adopted in 1479-80 have been printed together, but the chronological sequence of those which follow has been sacrificed with a view to bringing all those which relate to the same subject under one head.

[ORDINANCES RELATING TO APPRENTICES.]

[29 March, 1515.]

The fredome of prentises and of there occupying.

It is assented, accordit, and agreed, by thys hole Feloship of Merchaunts, the xxix day of Marche, in the sixt yere of our soveraigne lorde Kyng Henre the viijth, Thomas Horsley then beyng Master of the Feloship, That no manne's apprentice shalbe free with this Feloship except that he have served his master fully the space of vij yeres affter the day of his fyrst entrise, and regestered in this booke, upon payn of servyng vij yere affter his entrys, when so ever it shalbe presented, and thar to pay hys fyrst fourty pens. And the said prentice not to occupye no maner of merchaundyse to he have served his master v yere, and then yff it please his master to gyff hym licens to occupy. Always forsene that he occupye not above v mark stoke, upon payn of forfatur of his goods, and the one halffe to the Feloship, and the other halffe to the taker therof.

An acte concernyng occupying of apprentices.

Forsomuche as dyvers and sundry brethren of this Fellowship, havynge apprentices, do permytt and suffer theym, even in theyr furst yeres, to occupie gret sumes of money to there owne use and commoditie, under the clocke and cover of theyr mayster's trade, wherby the said apprentices, being at no nedefull chargs nor expenses, do not onely become hawtie mynded, highe stomoked, and wanton condycyoned, but also become les obedyent and serviabile to theyr maysters, not knowing there dewtie to theyr superyours; the whiche liberty undoubtedly is boith the corrupting of theymselves, and also the gret hurte and hyndrance to the whole Fellowshipe. For reformatyon wherof it is enacted, &c., That from henceforthe no brother of this Fellowshipe shall suffer or permytt his apprentice to occupye or trafique anything to his owne use or commoditye, before the said apprentice have served his mayster the space of fyve yeres at the least. And from thensforth to thend of his apprentishode not above tenn pounds, or xx marks at the most. Upone payne that the mayster of every suche apprentice, as shall be knowen to have offended contrary to the trew meanyng of this acte, shall forfayt to thuse of this Fellowshipe x^ls. for every x^{li}. so occupied by his apprentice, contrary to the order aforesaid. And for the better disclosyng of the forsaid disordered occupying of apprentices, it shall be lawfull for the Governoure of this Fellowshipe, or his deputie, for the tyme beyng, to put any brother of the same to his othe, concernyng the occupying of any apprentice. Also th' appryntice offending contrary to this order, before he enyoie his fredome, shall pay and undergo suche fyne as by the said Fellowship he shalbe assigned, according to the gretnes of his occupying.

An acte concerning the occupieng by apprentices.

[Recites the act just given, and proceeds:]

Which acte, to the effect as aforesaid made, as it is presentlie thought that it hath been a redres to a great parte of the disorders as aforesaid used in apprenticeis, so hath the same not fullie cured the abuseis and enormities reigning in our apprentizeis at theis daies, and as newe diseases require newe remedies, so the misbehaviours of our apprenticeis at this time neede to be provided for, and redres to be prepared for the same; wherefore it is enacted, &c., That from hensforth it shall not be lawfull for any broother of this Feoloship to permit or suffer his or their apprentizeis to occupie or to have traffiques with any somme or sommes of monnye, be it les or more, before the said apprentizeis have fullie served his master by the space of five yeres as aforesaid. And that and from thensforth it shalbe lawfull to all and singuler suche apprenticeis of this Feoloship, having served his or their master five yeres as abovesaid, to occupie all suche somme or sommes of monnie as the said apprentizeis shalbe hable to have, of his or their owne proper goods, being occupied by the consent of his or their maister or maisters, in iointe stocke with the same his maister or maisters, in any commoditie (except wooll and fell), so that the sommes or somme, so occupied by suche apprentize or apprentizeis, in joint stocke with his maister or maisters, having served as aforesaid fullie fyve yeres, doo not exceede aboove twentie pounds of lawfull monnye of Englande; untill he have served fullie eight yeres of apprentishoode, and than from those eight yeres, to have libertie to occupie fortie pounds of lawfull monnie of Englande, in joint stocke with his or their maister or maisters, as aforesaid, unto the ende of his or their yeres: upon pain everie apprentize in theis Feoloship dooeng and offending contrarie to this acte, to forfaitt and losse all suche terme of yeres as he hath served. And that it shalbe lawfull to the Governour of this said Feoloship for the time beeng, in open corte to examen and purge by othe, all and singuler bretheren of this Feoloship having had suche apprenticeis, or any other of this Feoloship having had dealing with suche apprentice or apprenticeis, suspected for any offence as aforesaid.

And further it is enacted, &c., That from hensforth none appren-tize in this Feoloship, aforesaid, nor anie free mens' sonnes of the said Feoloship, being not free of this Feoloship, shall occupie or trafficque for and to his owne use any commoditie prohibited, or herafter to be prohibited, upon pain before he shall have his freedome to undergoo all suche pains, fines, and penalties, as anie other free broother of this Feoloshipe shoolde or owght to undergoo, for any suche like offence.

[26 Oct. 1655.]

An act prohibitinge aprentices to trade in cloath and lead.

Whereas by the prudence, foresight, and great care of our ancestors, divers laudable, convenient, and necessary acts have beene made for the well ordringe of aprentices in their trade, lymitinge them to a certaine some of money at certaine yeares, and prohibitinge them from tradinge in some sortes of goods, and not in any other then in joynt stocke with their master, as by an act of the first of Aprill, 1574, doth and may more fully appeare: And whereas by the sayd act aprentices were restrayned from tradinge in wooll and woolfells (the great commodities of this Company), as beinge more fit for the maister alone, then for his servant in partnership: And whereas, in the tyme of Kynge James, the sayd trade of wooll and woolfells, for great reasons of state, was taken away from this Company, though granted to us by charter, and reserved to us by severall statutes, whereby the trade of the Company is much altered, and caried on in cloath and lead, &c.: And whereas divers apprentices of late, not regardinge the orders of this Company, have not onely traded for greater somes of money then allowed by the acts of this Company, and, to be feared, not in joynt stocke with their maisters, but have and doe deale in great quantities of cloath, the principall comoditie of this Company, so that great quantityes thereof hath beene by apprentices shipped, and great returnes made in severall sorts of goods, whereby the Company is not onely wronged in their profit, but even those aprentices by the profit thereof, makeinge an ill use of it, grow haughty and insolent in their cariages, vayne and ridiculous in their apparell, scandalous and vitious in their lives, and stubborne and disobedient to their masters, to the great dishonour of God, discredit of this Company, greif to their masters, and utter undoinge of themselves. Therefore this Company, takinge into their serious consideration the matters afforesayd, do order, &c., That, from the 25th day of December next, no aprentice shall trade in cloath or leade, duringe the whole tyme of his aprentiship, nor for any greater some, nor at other tymes, nor in any other way, then by the afforesayd act of the first of Aprill, 1574, is lymitted; upon the penalty that every aprentice that shall trade in cloath or lead, directly or indirectly, shall forfeit the whole tyme he hath served, and shall not receive the freedome of this Company, without new indentures for the ordinary tyme, to beginne when he traded in cloath or lead as afforesayd. And that every master takinge his apprentice, during the time of his aprentiship, into joynt trade with hym for cloath or lead, shall, upon due prooffe thereof, pay to the use of this Company the some of one hundred pounds for every such offence, without grace or favour of court. And that every other brother that shall cleare the cloath, lead, or other goods belonging to any aprentice as his owne, or become partner with hym, shall, for the first offence, forfeit to the use of the Company one hundred pounds; and for the second offence be disfranchized. And that this act be read every first court after the eleccion of officers; and every master is to give notice hereof to his aprentices, to the intent that it may be the better observed, and that none may plead ignorance thereof.

Whereas by antient acts of this Company, perticularly in the yeare of our Lord 1574 and 1655, apprentices are admitted to trade in joynt stock with their maisters, after five yeares the summe of twenty pounds, after eight yeares the summe of forty pounds, not to excede, (cloth and lead excepted), under certaine penaltys, as by the said acts will fully appeare: And whereas there have some disputes arisen as to the purport of the said acts, whether they may reach to a liberty as to a shopp trade with their maisters, and also as to the suitableness of some penaltys in the said acts: Wherefore it is enacted, &c., That from henceforth it shall not be lawfull for any brother or sister of this Fellowship to admitt his or her apprentice into joynt stocke with them in any shopp trade by retaile or other ways, or to admitt his or hir apprentices into joynt stocke for any greater summe or summes then in the said acts mentioned, upon penalty that every brother or sister soe offending shall forfeit to the use of this Fellowship the summe of one hundred pounds, by conviction, confession or otherwise, as by the said acts is lymitted and apointed.

[20 Sep. 1693.]

Whereas complaints were made against some sisters of this Fellowship, for permitting their apprentices to trade, contrary to the laudable acts of this Company, for redress whereof, it is enacted, &c., That noe sister shall have the benefitt of any apprentice to be sett over to hir, till shee first give security to observe the laudable acts and orders of this Company.

[8 March, 1520.]

It is enacted, &c., That non of the said Feloship, from hynsforth, shall have bot one prentyce, at the most, except master mayor and hys brethren, and thos that hathe bene sheryffs.* And that no man beyng fre of this Feloship, comyng in by redempcon, shall nother ship woll ne skyn, nor thay shall have no prentices. And that no yong man, goyng forthe of hys prentysship, shall take no prentice whill he present hym be fore the master of the Feloship, in the hole cowrt, and the viij, which shall be chosen for the Feloship, thay for to se yff he be abyll to have aprentice or not. And that non apprentice be taken to servys onder the termes of vij yeres compleyt, and what tyme as any apprentyce entred on to servyce with any of the said Feloship.

An acte that no man shall have but one prentice at once.

It is enacted, &c., That no man shall from henceforthe take no prentyce, but one at once, untill the furst aprentyce have served v yeres, except it be a man's son of the town, and suche a one as be fre of the said Feloweshipe, excet he be lycenced by the Governour, and the whole Feloweship, or the most parte of them; and that they shall thinke him able to occupye mo.

It ys agreed, &c., That no man, being fre of the said Fellyshipe, shall take any apprentice in servyce to him unlesse he bynde him for the space of tenne yeres, to serve him all the said term as apprentyce.

Wheras heretofore dyvers and sundry bretherne of this Feoliship have taken apprentyces bounde by indenture, some for vij, other some for eight yeares, by reasone of the shortnes of the whiche appren-tyshod the number of this Felowship is so agmented, and dayly doith increase, that if spedie remedie in this case were not provided it wold be the utter distruction of this hole Felowship; for reformatyon wherof it is enacted, &c., That from hensforthe no brother, fre of the same, shall tayke any apprentyce to serve for lesse tyme or fewer yeres then for tenne yeres; otherwyse bounde not to be allowed for any apprentice. [Also it is further enacted, &c., That from hensforth no brother tayke any apprentice bounde by indenture for x yeres as before said, before the said apprentice be xvj yeres old at the least. Upon payn that every brother whiche shall do contrary to the trewe meanyng of this acte shall forfeitt to thuse of the Felowshippe the som of xx^{li}., and the apprentice shall lose all the tyme served before he be complened upon.*]

That no man shall tayk apprentice tyl he hav ben maryed on year.

It ys lykewise agreed, &c., That no brother of this Fellyshipe Feloship and the assistans, who that thai shall best thynke by ther dyscrecyons, and is abull by ther occupying, to have mo, then the said Master and assistans to apoynt evere man how many thai shall have."

* In a later hand.

take any apprentyce unto that he have bene married by the space of one yere, and that no brother of this Fellyshipe to take any monye or other goods or marchaundice with his prentyses, by any way of covenant, upon paine of x^{li}., to be forfeited to this Fellyshipe, and that none shall have any mo prentices but one, onles he take a fre brother's sonnes of this Fellyshipe, or that his former apprentice have served full sexe yeres or he take another, upon paine of x^{li}.

An acte for making of apprenticeis.

Whereas at suche tyme as Mr. Robert Anderson being governour of this Feoloship of Merchaunts, an acte was made that no moo apprentics shoulde be taken by the bretheren of the Feoloship than alredie thei than had, for and duringe certen yeres mencioned in the same acte; which acte, as it cannot be denied, hath doon mooche good to this Feoloship, in avoideng a superfluous noumber, that wolde rather have augmented and encreased the noumber, than otherwise to have proffited theimselfs, or the rest of the Feoloship; so hath a certen discommoditie than not perceived, (as everie commoditie draweth his discommoditie therwith), arrisen and growen by vertue and force of that acte; which is, that he who cannot have an apprentice (be he never so well hable), and hath occasion to doo his feate in merchandize beyonde see or at home, he is constreigned either to doo it himself or ells to make some attornye. Perhaps he is of that callinge, and charged with either office, or other necessarie affaiers at home, as he cannot in person applie his feate of merchandize abroad, so that he is enforced to make somme attornye in the same, to doo his busynes. Yf he make any other servaunte of his, not free of this Feoloship, to be agent or attornye, that is not his apprentice, or other strainger, it is thowght he dooth not well by reason he traneth and practizeth those that are not free, in knowledge of occupieng and trade of merchandize, to the greate preiudize of the Feoloship aforesaid. Yf he make certen of this Feoloship to be his attourneye, (as lawfull is), their reconings retourned are thowght not to be so good as was hoped by them that did putt them in trust, by reson of their owne affairs, which thei seemed rather to applie than others that credited them. To avoide theis inconveniencis, as it is thowght the beste to be, to repell, disanull, and make voide the said former acte, and to take apprentics again duringe certen space, and than to restraign again as juste cawse shalbe offered. Wherefore it is nowe enacted, &c., That, duringe the space of tenne yeres next followeng the makinge of this acte, everie broother maye take one apprentice for suche terme of yeres as usuallie, by the acts of this Feoloship, was and hath been established. And that none other newe apprentice to be taken before the elder apprentice shall have served eight yeres of his apprentishoode, which apprentice so taken shall remain here within this towne, or beyonde see, aboote his master's lawfull affairs, or otherwhere aboote merchandize, upon pain the master of the apprentize to forfaitt tenne pounds of lawfull monnye of Englande to the use of this said Feoloship, and the same apprentice to forfait his yeres.

[After reciting the act of 10 November, 1575, for taking apprentices, &c., it was ordered]

That every brother of this Fellowship maie be permitted to take two apprentices within the tearme of eighte yeares; that is to saie, the first apprentice to have served three yeares before hee take the second apprentice, and then the first haveing so served to take a second apprentice, and hee to serve his said master five yeares before hee take another. And no brother of this Companie to be allowed to take any more apprentices then two, as aforesaid, untill his first apprentice have served eighte yeares, and his second five yeares, if they so long live. And further that all such apprentices as are bound in such manner as aforesaid and not enrowled maie be enrowled, there masters payeing all suche debtes or impositions as they owe or be indebted to this Fellowship before the said apprentices bee enrowled.

Whereas our predecessors have heretofore made many lawdable and profitable acts for this Fellowship in relation to the taking of apprentices, the execucion whereof having of late yeares beene too much neglected, hath occasioned the number of apprentices soe to abound, and consequently the number of merchants soe to encrease, that the trade is not sufficient to support them; the which we, the present Governor, assistants and Fellowship, taking into our serious consideracions, as our duty is, and foreseeing what unavoydable inconveniences are lickly to fall upon this ancient Society, unlesse a present reformation be indevored; We doe therefore order and enact that, from the day of the date hereof, noe brother of this Fellowship whatsoever, shall take any second apprentice before his first hath served three yeares, and his first apprentice having soe served he may take a second, and the second apprentice to serve his master five yeares, before he take a third; and noe brother to be permitted to take any more till his apprentice last taken hath served five yeares, unlesse they or any of his said apprentices shall dye within his tearme, or otherwise be removed for his misdemeanors. And whereas diverse bretheren of this Companey, who have had noe trade, have, aswell as others of great imployment, taken apprentices, to the great harme and preiudice of this Society, it is therefore ordered that hereafter not any such brother of this Fellowship be permitted to take any apprentice, untill he petition the Companey and have their concent therein. And whereas of late yeares some bretheren who were great traders have prevayled with this Company upon fines to take apprentices sooner then the tyme lymited, it is therefore further ordered that hereafter noe brother be permitted to take any apprentice upon any fine or otherwise contrary to this acte.

[11 Feb. 1733.]

The committe takeing into consideration the great number of apprentices taken of late years and the present increase of them, which has been and (unlesse restrained) will continue to be a very great loss and prejudice to this Societie, wee find that a good and antient order of the Company, made for the preventing any members from takeing too great a number of apprentices, grounded upon the best and most substantiall resons, is evaded and rendred ineffectuall by an act of the Company relateing to turn overs, by vertue whereof untradeing breethren take apprentices bound to themselves and sett them over to tradeing brothers, who, haveing allready their full number of apprentices, are not otherways qualified to take such apprentices, by which meanes any one brother (if not remedied) may have and entertaine as many apprentices as he pleases; and alltho, by an act of this Company, the members are restrained from entertaining and imploying in their trade and business foreigners as journeymen, or hired servants, yet for many years last past severall such have been frequently imployed, and may still be imployed without much damage to the Company, being not near of so ill consiquence to the Company as the increase thereof by takeing many apprentices: Wee therefore humbly recommend to the Court that the said act relateing to turn overs (being contradictory to and inconsistent with the said act relateing to apprentices) be repealed; but that still in case of the faileur or death of the master, the apprentice or apprentices shall and may, with the consent of the Company, be sett over to and taken by any other tradeing brother, and in case of the death of any apprentice, taken in pursueance of the acts of the Company, the master of such apprentice shall and may thereupon be att liberty to take another apprentice instead of him so dyeing. And wee desire that every brother takeing an apprentice contrary to the above act, may for every offence pay to the Merchants' Company fifty pounds sterling, without grace or favour of court, and that the indenture of apprentice so taken shall not be permitted to be enrolled.

[3 July, 1766.]

Ordered that, from henceforth, every trading brother be at liberty to take and have bound to him so many apprentices as he shall think necessary to have and employ, in the carrying on his business of a merchant or any branch thereof.

[15 Feb. 1645.]

It is ordered that no apprentices indentures shall be hereafter inrolled till there be a testimoniall produced from the minister of the parish where he was borne, or two sufficient men there, that the party is sixteene yeares of age who is to be bound.

[16 April, 1673.]

Whereas, by an ancient act of this Company, it was ordered, That noe person should be bound apprentice to any brother of this Society under the age of sixteene yeares; which hath been constantly attested by certyficat, under the hand of the keeper of the register where such apprentice was baptized; notwithstanding, in the late times some apprentices indentures have beene enrowled, who had noe such certificate, neither could they be procured by reason they were not baptized in any parish church, nor their names recorded in the church register, which sometimes occasioned much debate amongst the Company, for the prevention whereof, and that testimony for the future may be given of the age of such apprentices in some measure equivolent to the afforesaid certificate, it is ordered, &c., That noe indenture of any such apprentice shall be enrowled unlesse the parents or freinds, or one credible person at the least, shall declare upon oath before one of his Majestie's justices of peace, the place, parish, and county where, and the time when, such an apprentice was borne, and shall procure the same to be testyfyed under the hand and seale of the said justice of peace, and, with the indenture, presented to the Company. And if at any time after, before the expiration of the tearme of the said apprentice his said indenture, it shall be made appeare by the oath of any two or more credible wittnesses that the certificate was unduely procured, or that the testimony then given was false and untrue, that then such apprentice shall reape noe benefitt by the time served, but shall be voyd and of none effect.

[19 May, 1697.]

An act to prevent any apprentice to petition for his freedom of this Fellowship of Merchants Adventurers untill he have served nine years of his tearm of apprenticeship.

Whereas it has been observed by the brethren of this Fellowship, for some years last past, divers apprentices did petition this Company for their freedom, haveing two or more years of their tearm of apprenticeship unexpired; to prevent the same it was enacted, &c., That from and after the twenty second day of March, 1682, no petition of any apprentice for admission to his freedom of this Company should be read in open court untill the petitioner had served duly nine years of his tearm of apprenticeship.

It is further enacted, &c., That from and after this present nineteenth day of May, 1697, no apprentice shall be admitted to his freedom of this Society att any time dureing his tearm of apprenticeship under a fine of five pounds, and in case he shall have three months or longer to serve, then no fine shall be proposed by the Company, or put to hands by Mr. Governour, under a sune of forty shillings per mounth, as shall appeare by the date of his indenture in the Book of Enrolments.

The acte for apprentices comyng in by redempcon.

It is assented, &c., That no mane's apprentice, comyng in by redempcon, to brouke no fredom with this Feloship, nor that no bastard shalbe free with this Feloship, to he have served and beyn vij yer apprentyce. [Or yff any of this said Feloship do labor, or bryng in any of thos said apprentices to have them free with this Feloship, he to pay to fyne to this Feloship, xl^s.; and he to be dissamyssed frome this Feloship to the said fyne be levied and paid, withowt any forgyffnes.*]

A nact for prentyses and fre men's sons.

It is assentid, &c., That all aprentices, and fre men's sons, beinge forthe of prentishipe, and occupyng for them selves, befor that tha be maide fre, that thay shall paye for a fyn, xl^s.; befor that thay be maide fre; and yf thay do not pay it, to be dyssmysed from the Felloshipe, and from occupyng any merchaundryse, tyll he haithe payd bothe his fyn and for his fredom, accordinge as he shalbe sessyd by the Felloshipe.

It ys accorded, &c., That all apprentyces, being maide and to make fre of this Fellyshipe, shalbe enrolled of the ocupacion that his master ys of, by whome he receives his fredome beyonde the sees, and yet, nevertheles, all prentyses shalbe maide fre of that ocupacion his master whome he served was bounde by apprentishode, and not by the ocupacion that his master cometh unto by redemption, to enioye the libertye and enrollment thereof.

Entrynge or enrollynge of apprentyces within one yere after they be bounde.

And further it is enacted, &c., That from hensforthe every brother whiche haith or shall tayke any apprentice bounde for the terme of tenne yeres, according to th'order aforsaid, shall, within one yere after, bringe in the indenture of his said apprentice, and cause it to be regysterd or enrolled, before the Governoure and the whole Fellowship, in open courte, in the Clarke and wardens' books for the tyme beyng, paying therfor, to th'use of the same Fellowship, the some of xxij^s. vj^d., over and besydes x^d. for the ordynary fees of the Clarke and byddell. And if any brother do not enter or enroll his apprentice within one whole yere after he have receyved hym to service, according to th'order aforsaid, that then every brother so offending shall forfeit to the use of the Fellowship, for the furst yere x^ls., for the secounde yere iiij^li., and for the thirde yere x^li. And if the said master do not enter or enroll his forsaid apprentice within the said iiij yeres, then the said master, for his contempt and negligens, shall not onelie pay all the fynes and forfeitures in this present acte conteyned, but also shall be dymysed of his fredome, unto suche tyme as he submyt hym self unto the Fellowship; and shall further undergoe suche penaltie for his reconcylyacion as by theym shall be thought mete and convenyent.

And also, That all and singuler suche apprentices, having served their whole yeres, shall comme and make theim selfs free of this said Feoloship, within one yere and one daie next followeng the expiracion of his or their yeres, upon pain of tenne pounds to be forfaicted by the such apprentice so offendinge to the use of the said Feoloship.

[13 Oct. 1654.]

Upon complaynt made that diverse free men's sonnes and apprentices have taken upp their severall fredomes of this Fellowship, some of them neglecting for one yeare and more after to take their fredomes of the towne, which course being found preiudiciall to the towne and this Fellowship, it is this day ordered, That they who are capable of the fredome of the towne shall hereafter first take their fredomes there, before they be admitted into this Fellowship, and those that are out of their tearmes, before the Guild admitt them to be free of the towne, these are likewise ordered to take upp their fredome heer, within three monthes after they have their fredome of the towne, except in the intrim their occasions call them beyond seas; upon the forfeiture of forty shillings for every one trespassing against this acte.

It is ordered, That from henceforth every person having a right to his freedom of this Fellowship by servitude, who shall set up, use, follow and exercise the trade or business of a merchant or any branch thereof, shall, within twelve months next after exercising the same, apply and take his freedom of the said Fellowship, or in default thereof shall forfeit and pay on his being admitted the sum of £10 over and above the usual fees.

[22 Oct. 1562.]

An acte for settinge over off apprentices.

Further it is assented, &c., That if any brother, havynge an apprentice bounde by indenture for terme of yeres, according to th'order before mentyoned, chaunce to die, or fall into povertie, before his said apprentice shall have served and accomplyshed all the yeres of his apprenticeshod, that then the said apprentice, within xl days after the death of his forsaid master, or wardens of this Fellowshipe for the tyme being, requyring that he may serve forthe the rest of his apprenticeshode with some other brother of the Fellowshipe, or wedowe, beinge the layt wyfe of some brother deceased, according to the accustomed order: whereupon the said apprentice, the next court day then ensewing, by consent of the hole Fellowshipe, shall be appointed or assigned to some other of the Fellowship, with whom he may serve for the rest of his apprenticeshod; upon payne that if any apprentice shall do contrary to the trew meanyng of this acte he shall forfeit and begyn agayne all suche yeres as he haith alredy served. Further it is to be noted that every apprentice, which haith bene sett over and served his apprenticeshod with sundry maysters, shall, at the expyracion of his yeres, be mayd fre by his furst master to whom he was bounde by indenture, and in eleccions gyve his voice in the same scyens. Further it is to be noted that, if any brother of this Fellowshipe, being fre, either by service or by patrymonie, with any one of the iij scyenses, to wete, mercers, drapers, or boothmen, and doith also mayk hymself fre, by redemptyon, with either of th'other two scyenses, yet the apprentice or apprentices of any suche brother shall be bounde, entred, and mayd fre, of the same scyens that his or there mayster was fre off, by service or patrymony, and not of that scyens wherunto he came by redemptyone. Further it is to be noted that, if any apprentice be beyonde the sea, or els where absent in his master's affayres, at suche tyme as his mayster dieth, the said apprentice, within one month after his comyng home to this towne, shall come to the Governoure or wardens of this Fellowship for the tyme beinge, requyring that he may be assigned to serve fourth the rest of his apprentishode with some brother of this Fellowship, being of the same scyence that his layt master was free off, as is before mentioned; upon lyke payne as before is declared.

It is ordered, &c., That no brother shalbe allowed to have turned over unto him any apprentice, who hath beene the servant of any brother, unlesse he exercise the trade of a merchant; that the sayd apprentice may not, under pretence of such service, either live at randome, or otherwise preiudice the common weale of this Company.

It was ordered, That, immediately after the death of any brother or sister, the beadle should give notice to his or her apprentice or apprentices (if at that tyme they had any), that, by the acts of this Fellowship, they are to make choyce of a tradeing brother or sister, with whome they are to serve the residue of their apprenticeships, within forty dayes next after the death of his or there master or mistress, upon penalty of looseing all the tyme they had then served.

[22 March, 1682.]

This court having taken into consideration some late attempts of some apprentices to petition for their freedoms of this Fellowship, before they had served any considerable time of their apprenticeships, which, if not prevented, may give great incouradgment to careless apprentices to purchase their libertys, and great discouradgment to those that make true and faithfull service; It is therefore enacted, &c., That from and after this present 22nd day of March, 1682, noe petition of any apprentice for his freedome (within tearme) shall be admitted to be reade on any pretence whatsoever, untill they have duely and truely served nine yeares. And noe petition after the said tearme of nine yeares shall be admitted to be reade unlesse the maister of the said servant doe declare in open court he hath done him faithfull service, and the court [be] fully satisfied of his regular carriage and deportment.

[19 May, 1697.]

It is this day enacted, &c., That from and after this present 19th day of May, 1697, noe apprentice shall be admitted to his freedome, at any time dureing his tearme, under a fine of five pounds, and in case he shall have three moneths or longer to serve, then there shall be noe fine proposed by the Company, or put by Mr. Governour, under the summe of forty shillings per moneth, as shall appeare by the date of his indenture in the booke of enrolements.

[21 March, 1655.]

A motion being made against the unnecessarie charge of younge men, at their admission to their freedome, at taverns, in wyne and other extraordinaries, it was this day ordered, That none hereafter, upon any such occasion, shall invite any of this Fellowship to the taverne, upon paine that the infringers of this order shall pay to the use of this Fellowship tenne pounds.

An act prohibiting all freemen's sons of this Fellowship, or apprentices, to take upp their freedoms of Hambrough unduely.

Whereas, upon complaint made in open court, holden the twenty-first day of July, 1693, that severall apprentices have of late assumed the liberty of takeing up their freedoms of the Hambrough Company, without due certificate under the Governour's hand, and the Company's seale, contrary to antient and laudable custome of this Fellowship: Now the said Fellowship takeing the same into their serious considerations have thought fitt to prevent such irregular practices. It is this day therefore enacted, &c., That noe person, whether freemen's sons or apprentices, shall for the future presume to take up their freedoms of the Hambrough Company aforesaid, without the accustomed certificate under the Governor's hand and the Company's seale, upon the penalty of one C pounds sterling.

Whereas there is great and apparent abuse and disorder growen and likelie to continue, if reformation be not had and made to the contrarie, by the unlawfull serveinge of apprentices with maisters not capable, and unfre of this Fellowship, the said apprentices beinge bounde to fre brethren of this Fellowship, of which inconvenience the maisters of such apprentices, to whom they were first bound, are the principall cause, and cheffie to be blamed in assenting thereto, which giveth great occasion to suspect that the takeinge of such apprentices was but to be a shadowe and cullor for the obteyninge of their fredomes, albeit divers orders have in former tymes bene by generall consent proveded and ordeyned to prevent such colorable and unlawfull service, yet litle or no observacion or regard hath insued or bene had therof. It is therefore ordered, &c., That whatsoever apprentice, as shalbe hereafter reteyned, hired, or shall dwell and inhabite, with any person or persons not beinge a brother of this Fellowship, of purpose to gaine and wyne tyme for the cause aforesaid, for and dureinge the space of fortye dayes, shall forfeit his terme of yeares formerly run and by past, and never be admitted to have fredome emongst the said Fellowship, by force and vertue of his indentures formerly made for his service and apprenticeship. And it is further ordered, That every master of such apprentice, hereafter to be enrolled, shall before such enrollment of the indentures of his said apprentice, take a copie of this order for the informacion of himselfe and his said apprentice in this behalfe, to th'ende that neither the one nor the other pleade ignorance thereof. And that if any such master shall faill in not manifestinge and deliveringe the said copie to his said apprentice, in due tyme, such master to be disabled and hindered of the haveinge and takeinge of any apprentices afterward; further, That the master of all such apprentices as are alredie before this day taken, and enrollment therof made, to take notice that they make the former order knowen and manifested to their apprentice; upon payne and penaltie before declared.

An act against apprentices absenting from the service of their masters.

Whereas our predecessors, upon the 12th day of May, 1608, did make an act prohibiting apprentices to depart their masters' service for forty days, or to serve any not free of this Fellowship, which said act hath not been duly observed, but on the contrary, very much slighted and violated, by severall brethren of this Fellowship, by giveing liberty to their apprentices to goe beyond sea, and there remaine a long time, and not in their masters' actuall service; for the preventing such irregularitys and disorders for the future, it is enacted, &c., That from and after this present 24th day of July, 1701, noe brother or sister of this Fellowship shall be permitted to give his or her apprentice liberty to be out of his or her service above the space of forty days, nor shall grant him liberty to goe to any part beyond the seas or elsewhere, on any pretence whatsoever, and to remaine there, unless he be really dureing that time in the actuall service of his master, or some brother or sister of this Company. And it is further enacted, &c., That if any member of this Company shall offend herein, upon conviction of his or her offence, shall for a fine pay the sume of one hundred pounds. Provided allways, that it shall and may be lawfull for any brother or sister to grant the apprentice liberty to goe beyond sea, to such place or places where he may most conveniently and effectually learn the language of that country, and allso book-keeping if his master shall think fit, any one year of his apprentiship, provided he return to the service of his said master or mistress in Newcastle in the space of eighteen mounths after his departure.

An acte for the apperell of apyryntyses.

Whereas, in the educacion and bringing up of apprentices, no litle regarde and studye hath remaind in oure elders, that like as the dewtie of the apprentize was enstructed him to God, so was the same not forgotten, what reverence ought to be doone to the maister and mystres, what obedyence to there superiours, what honest loove unto there equalls, what temperaunce in meate, dryncke, and apparell; insomuche that theis vertuous masters, with good enstruccions, had no les good servaunts, obedyent unto the same, than, likewise, the servaunts, throughe the vertuous asignments and lessons of there good masters, have heretofore comme forward in the worlde, not to be doubted bothe to the glorye of God, and to the comferte of those whiche brought them up. But whan, as now, lewde libertye, in stede of the former vertuous life, haith taken place in apprentizes, and chiefelye of those as ar servyng in this worshipecfull Fellyshipe of Marchants, whether the occasion thereof ys imputable unto us masters, that by oure good lifes and wordes do not enstrucke oure apprentizes of there dewtie, or els to be ascribed unto the negligent or stubberne servaunt, that regardeth letle the good lessons of us there masters, (for never amonge apprentices, and chiefelye of this said Feoloshipe, hath bene more abused and inconvenyent behaviour than ys of them at this daye frequented, for what dyseng, cardeng and mumming; what typlinge, daunseng, and brasenge of harlots; what garded cotes, jagged hose, lyned with silke, and cutt shoes; what use of gitterns by nyght; what wearynge of berds, what daggers ys by theim worn crosse overthwarte theire backs, that theis theire dooings are more cumlye and decent for rageng ruffians than seemlye for honest apprentizes); So that yf unto theis enormyties spedye remedies be not provyded, let not in this Feoloshipe be looked from hensfoorth them to be honest and vertuous masters to succede us in this worshipecfull Feoloshipe for the mayntenan[ce] of the feats of marchaundize, whiche so ungodlye have bene brought up being apprentizes. For reformation whereof be it therefore enacted by Cuthberte Ellisone, Governor of this Feoloshipe, the assistants and brethren assembled at this courte, and by the authorytie of the same also establyshed, that no master in this Feoloshipe of Marchants aforesaid, havinge any apprentize, permytt or suffre his suche apprentize, duringe the tyme of his apprentishood, to daunse, dyse, carde or mum, or use any gytterns, or suffer him to wear any cut hose, cut shoes or pounced jerkens, nor to weare any berds; but that the same apprentizes maye be well and godlye brought up, in the feare and love of God, his duetye towards his master and mystres, to make reverence unto his superyors, and that they weare none other hoses than slopped, of course clothe, whereof the yarde not to excede ~~xiij~~^d. [ij^s. interlined], ~~theire shoes and~~ their cotes to be lake of course clothe, of houswife's making. And that thei shall weare no straitte hoose, but such as be playne, without cutts, pounseng, or gards, and the same to be woorn but upon the holye dayes, or whan as they shall ryde out of the towne, or otherwise attend upon their masters; upon payne the maister of every apprentize, permytting his apprentize to worke or do against any parte of th'effecte of this acte, to pay unto the use of the Feoloshipe aforesaid, for every tyme so offendinge of his apprentize, xl^s. And the apprentize to forfait those yeres whiche the said prentice shall have alredye served. Provyded alwaies, that this acte, nor any thinge therein conteigned, tooching th'apparell of apprentizes onelye, do not extende to any one of this Feoloshipe that hathe bene, or shalbe, Maiour, Alderman, or Sherief of this towne of Newcastle upon Tyne. But that he or theye shall apparell his apprentize as by their discrecions shalbe thought expedyent. And further, be it ordeigned by the authorytie aforesaid, that yf any apprentize of this said Feoloshipe commytt any fornicacion or adulterye, either within his master's house or without, duringe the terme of yeres for the whiche the same prentize standeth bounden in unto his maister, than the same apprentize, upon lawefull profe maide against him in that behalf, shall forfait, serve, and begynne againe, all suche terme of yeres that he alredye hathe served, or els to pay unto th'use of this Feoloshipe of Marchaunts, the some of fyve marks of lawfull money of England. And that upon the enrolment of every apprentize in the courte of this said Feoloshipe of Marchants, the clarke of the same Feoloshipe shall reede unto every of them, at there enrolment, this present acte. And than shall give unto every of the same apprentizes a copie of the effecte of the same acte, taking of every prentize, for the same, no more than viij^d.*

[10 Nov. 1603.]

Whereas greate disorder and abuses have been comitted and practised by manie of the apprentices belonginge the bretheren of this Fellowship of Merchants Adventurers, as well in their comon and outward behavior towards their superiors and betters, as also in excessive, extraordinarie, and costlie apparell, to the evill example of others of better quallitie and cariage; for reformation whereof yt is ordered, &c., That from henceforth no brother or sister of the same shall permitt or suffer his or her apprentice or apprentices to daunce, dice, carde, mum, or use anye musick eyther by night or daye in the streetes, neyther to weare anie undecent apparell, but plaine, and of clothe under x^s. the yarde, or fustian of or under iij^s. the yeard, nor to weare any velvate or lace, in or on his or ther apparell, in anie sorte or fashion whatsoever, neither anie silke garters, silk or velvat girdles, silk pointes, worsted or Jersey stockings, shoe strings of sylk, pumppes, pantofles, or corked shoes, hatts lyned with velvitt, nor double Cypres hatt bands, or silke strings, nor clokes and daggers,

* In the volume described in the Preface as Codex II. the foregoing curious ordinance occurs in a revised form. The revision contains many singular variations from the text of the original act, and for this reason I have printed it also.

An acte concer[n]yng the apperall and behavoure of apprentices, mayd in November Anno Domini, 1554.

Forso muche as, at this present, there is gret disorder, as well in the excessive apperrell as other mysbehaviours of apprentices, as in wearyng garded cotes, jagged hose, lyned or drawn out with sylke, cut shoes, daggers cros the backe, as also usyng of dyce, cards, mummyng, daunsyng, typplyng in alehouses, with other lyke suche mysbehaviours, so that these theyr mysbehaviors and insolent doyngs, ar rather fytt for ragyng ruffyanes then decent for honest apprentices. For reformatyon wherof it is enacted, &c., That from hensforth no brother shall permyt or suffer his apprentice to daunce, dyce, carde or mumme, or use any gyttens by nyght in the streats, or suffer his apprentice to weare any cutt hose, cots, or other apperell, which shalbe garded, styched, welted or layde with layce or drawne out with sarsnett, [or] taftay, either any kynde of sylke cutt shoes, cut or pounced jerkyngs, or any other suche curyous apperrell. Upon payne that if any brother do suffer his apprentice, duryng the tyme of his apprentyshode, to do any thing contrary the trew meanyng of this acte, he shall forfeit to the use of the Felowshippe, for every such offence of his apprentyce, the sum of xl^s., and the apprentyce so offending shall forfeat all suche yeares as he shall have alredy served. And further it is ordered, &c., That the clarke or secretary of the said Felowshipp for the tyme beyng at the entryng or enrolyng of every appryntyce shall delyver unto the master of the sayd appryntyce a cotype of this acte, to th'end that the apprentyce may have the better intelligence of the same, payd therfor eight pens. Provyded always, that all suche bretherne as are, or have bene, Maior, Alderman, or Sherif of this towne of Newcastle, shall be lycensed and permytted to gyve theyr apprentyces suche leveray cootes as by theyr discretyons shall be thought convenyent, and also hose, beyng playne or slopped, without gards, cutts, styches or weltes, any thing in this acte conteyned to the contrary notwithstanding.

neyther anie ruffed bands, but fallinge bands, plaine, withoute laice, stitche, or anie kinde of sown worck ; neither shall they weare their haire longe nor locks at their eares like ruffians ; and that they shall not passe by anie brother of this Fellowship, but do their dueties unto him or them, at leaste by uncoveringe their heades. And for the better orderinge and governinge of suche apprentices as shall misdemean themselves, either in contempt of anie part of this order, or otherwise, towards his master or mistress in their services, thair shalbe one speciall gaioll or prison within this towne, to be appointed by the presente Governour, wnto which all disobedyent apprentices, belonginge to anie brother or sister of this Fellowship, upon complainte, shalbe committed, ther to remaine untill order be gyven by the said Governor, his master or mistress, [blank in MS.] for his enlarg[ment] ; and the said apprentice or apprentices, to be releved at the charges of his said master or mistress, in some stricte manner, haveinge regarde to the preservacion of his or their healthes. And that for the more substantiall future observeinge of the true meaneinge of this act, one speciall officer likewise [is] to be appointed by the said Governour, whose charge shalbe to receyve the said apprentices into the said gaiolle or prison, beinge comitted as aforesaid, and there to see them saiflie kept accordinglie, not sufferinge them to plaie at anie ghamess whatsoever, or to have the companie of anie other person or persons, or to have anie conference with anie at all, without the speciall direction of the said Mr. Governour, the master of suche apprentice, or his mistress, not haveinge a master. And it is enacted that ther shalbe payd to the keper or gaioler of that prison yearelye, as a fee, forthe of the receipts belonginge to this said Fellowship, the some of fortye shillings, and that George Still, one of the bretheren of this same Fellowship, shalbe the keper of the said prison or gaiolle, and to have the same fee duringe the plesure of the Governour, assistants and Fellowshipp, or the greter parte of them.

[5 October, 1649.]

A reporte in writeinge from the committye of merchants, appointed for the better regulateing of apprentices in their hayre, apparell, and behaver was redd, and athorized to be inacted as followeth :—

Whearas our predecessors, the Merchant Adventurers of this towne and county of Newcastle upon Tyne, have out of their tender respects to the good of this Company, formerly made diverse good and lawdable acts, as doth appeare by the bookes and ancient records belonginge to this Felowshipp, for the regulatinge of the manners and apparell of the apprentices belonginge to the saide Fellowship, yett wee fynde little obedience or conformitie theirunto ; butt, on the contrary, abundance of disorder and pryde in them, which, if not tymely prevented, will prove the ruine of youth and a dishonour to this antient Societie ; wee therefore, the Governor, assistants, and Fellowship of the aforesaide Company of Merchant Adventurers of this towne, doe order and ordaine, and be itt ordered and ordained, that every apprentice, belonging to the bretheren of the saide Fellowship, shall cutt his haire from the crowne of the heade, keepe his forheade bare, his lockes (if any) shall not reache belowe the lapp of his eare, and the same length to be obser[v]ed behynd; and if in caise any be sicke, he shall weare a linnen capp and no other, and that without lace, and they shall weare no beaver hatts nor castors; if their hatts be blacke they shall have blacke bands, if gray hatts, then bands suetable, butt nother Gould nor silver woorke in any of them, nether fancies nor ribbins att their hatt bands: the cloath for their apparell shall nott excede fourteene or fifteene shillings the yerde; they shall weare no stuffe of silke or cammell haire; their clothes shall be made plaine up, without lace or any other trimmeinge, except buttens, and them onely in places needfull, and no better then of silke; there bands shalbe plaine without lace or scallope, they shall weare no cuffs, boothstopps, white [or cullered interlined] showes, or showes of Spannish lether, longe nebd showes or bootes; noe silke garters att all, nor showstrings better then ferrett or cotten ribbin, no gloves butt plaine, nor bootes, butt when they ride. Nor shall any apprentice pas by any free brother of this Company, without civill respecte, att least by uncovering his heade, and that not sleightlye, butt submissively: and every free brother of this Company, whose apprentice shall not, upon notice given by his master, conforme to this act, shall make complaint to the Governour, and if the Governour's advice do not reclayme him, his master shall complaine in open courte next after, or forfitt for the first offence 20^s. and for the second 40^s. And if the apprentice, after warneing given him in courte, shall not conforme himselfe in all and every of the saide particulers, according to the trew intent and meaneing of this acte, his haire and apparell and other misduymenors shall in open courte be corected and regulated, and such offenders shalbe made, by inflicteing such punnishment upon them, exemplary, as the Governor, assistants, and wardens shall thinke fitt; provided that this acte shall not extend to any apprentice that hath served seven yeares of his apprentishipp.

Whereas it hath bene formerly inacted and confirmed, at a courte holden the 5th day of October last, that all apprentices shalbe conformable in their apparell, hayre, and submissive behaviors, as it is at large specified in the said acte; but since being found that their irregularity is not curbed, partly by their severall masters' slownes in the observance of the said acte; as also considering the continuall trouble this Fellowship hath had, at every courte since holden, to bring them to conformity, by correcting some apprentices' superfluities

This Acte is nulled by voyces the 24th of January, 1649.

N.B. Not any thing to that purpose either mentioned or registered in the Journall as may appeare.

of hayre and apparell in open courte, yet seing there are many which have not yet conformed, therefor it is ordered and condiseded too at this present courte, That every master shall regulate his owne apprentices, according to the foremencioned acte, before the first of February next, or fayling, to forfitt three pounds for the first offence, and soe often after [as], upon the testimoney of any brother of this Companey, any apprentice shalbe presented as non conformable in open courte, a vew being taken, and found faulty, then for every trespasse soe found, it is ordered by the bretheren of the Companey that the master of that apprentice shall pay three pounds a tyme without forgivnes.

Whereas the Right Worshipfull Nicholas Fenwick, Esquire, Mayor of this Towne and County of Newcastle upon Tine, and allso Governour of the Fellowship of Merchants Adventurers of the same Towne and County, haveing represented to this court and Company, holden the 29th day of October, 1697, the many exorbitant practises of the apprentices of the members of this Society, by their extravagancy and profuceness in wiggs and apparrell, their indecency in their behaviour, and vainely mispending their time, which if not timely prevented will very much tend to the dishonour of God, disobedience to their maisters, and a greate affront to this Company in Generall. It is therefore thus enacted, &c., That noe apprentice, untill he hath served seaven yeares, shall be permitted to goe either to fenceing or danceings shooles, neither to any musicke houses, lottery, or play houses, neither shall keepe any sort of horses, doggs for hunting, or fighting cocks, nor after that time, without leave of their master. Noe apprentice shall use any gold or silver triming, either in their apparrell or hatts, neither the lyneing of any garment with any sort of silke. Noe apprentice shall weare any sort of poynt lace, or any imbrodiry att all, neither any ruffles att their breasts, necks or sleeves. Noe apprentice shall weare long wiggs, nor any short wiggs, above the price of fifteene shillings. Noe apprentice shall frequent either taverns or alehouses, neither shall absent himselfe from his maister's house at any time, upon any pretence, without leave. All apprentices allso shall conforme themselves in their behaviour towards all the members of this Fellowship, by uncovering their heads, and that not slightly but submissively, and all due respect. Noe apprentice shall in any kinde prophane the Lord's day. And further be it enacted, &c., That if at any time complaint shall be made against any of them for their nonconformity to all or any of the premises, and beeing convicted thereof by the maister, or any other credible person, upon his oath, that then he or they soe offending shall undergoe these following penaltys, vizt., for the first offence, twenty shillings, for the second offence, fourty shillings, for the third, foure pounds, for the fourth offence, five pounds, for the fifth, ten pounds; and this to be paid before they shall be admitted to their freedoms, without any grace or favour of court. And if after this, hee or they shall not conforme to this act, then to be left to the discretion of the Governour and Company to inflict such further punishments as they shall thinke convenient. And further, That all the bretheren of this Fellowship, who have one or more apprentices, shall have a copie of the moste materiall branches of this act, for their better information how to regulate their apprentices accordingly; and the clark to have twelve pence for the same.

An additional act concerneing apprentices traideing, as alsoe for their haire, apparell and behavior made at a Court holden the 8th of January 1661.

Whereas, by the two preceeding acts,* all apprentices to the bretheren and sisters of this Fellowship are restrained from traideing but in such commodities, for such sumes, in such wayes and at such tymes onely as is in the aforesayd acts prescribed; And alsoe whereas, by an act intituled, An Act concerneing apprentices apparell, haire, and behavior, every apprentice is bound to conforme himselfe to the sayd act upon the penalties therein expressed. And yet findeing, notwithstanding this good and wholesome act, noe conformity at all in most apprentices thereunto. We therefor, the Governor, &c., doe order, &c., That noe apprentice belonging to any of the bretheren or sisters of this Society shall have any benifit at all, by the former acts of traideing, but such onely as shall conforme themselves in apparell, haire, and behavior, according to the fore recited act. Neverthelesse it shall be lawfull for every apprentice to weare his haire two inches below the lapp of his eare, and noe longer, any thing in the aforesayd act to the contrary notwithstanding.

That no apprentyce shall committ fornycatyone.

For so muche as it was ordeyned, the xiiijth of November, anno Domini 1554, that every apprentice whiche may be knowen to be a fornycator shall forfeit and begynne againe all suche yeres as he haith served, or els to pay, to the use of this Fellowshipe, to be admytted agayne, the some of iij^{li}. vj^s. viij^d., the valew of the which som dyvers insolent apprentices litle esteemed, nether yet regarded the ende wherfor the said good order was appointed, namelie to restreine there wantone and lassyvyus mysbehaviours; for reformatyon whereof it is enacted, &c., That all and every appryntice of this Fellowshipe, which, by any meanes, may be knowen to be a fornycator or horemonger, during the tyme of his apprenticeshode, shall forfeit and begynne againe all suche yeres as the said apprentice shall have served, before the disclosyng of his forsaid fornycatyon, or els to pay to th'use of this Fellowshipe the some of thirtene pounce, sex shillings, eight pens.

Whereas this Fellowship hath made diverse good and wholesome acts in former tymes, for the curbinge and restrayninge of pride and other vices in aprentices, and by an act, dated the 22th of October, 1562, it was ordered that each aprentice, who should by any meanes be knowne to comitt fornication, duringe the tyme of his aprenticeshipp, should forfeit and begin againe all such yeares as hee, the said aprentice, shall have served, before the discoveringe of the sayd fornication, or else to pay to the use of this Fellowship the some of 13^{li}. 6^s. 8^d. And whereas this Fellowship hath found by woefull experience, especially in these later yeares, that the penalty before [named] is to them inconsiderable, as to the preventinge of these miscariages; and that, notwithstandinge all former acts and orders made to this end, diverse aprentices have not onely broken out into an intollerable height of pride in apparell, and insolency in behaviour, but have also fallen into that abominable sin of fornication, which tends very much to the dishonour of God, the reproach and shame of this Fellowship, and their owne ruine. It's therefore this present day ordered, &c., That every aprentice, who shall at any tyme hereafter, by any meanes, be knowne to committ fornication dureing the tyme of his aprentishipp, shall forfeit and loose all the tyme he hath served before the discovery thereof, or otherwise to pay to the use of the sayd Fellowship one hundred pounds of lawfull money of England, without any grace or favour of courte.

An acte concernynge the taken of a prentice beinge borne in Tyndall or Reddisdall.

It is assented, &c., That no fre brother of this Fellysshype shall, from hensfourthe, take non apprentice, to serve in this Fellyshype, of non suche as is or shalbe borne or brought up in Tyndall, Ryddisdall or anye other suche lycke places; in payne of xx^{li}.*

* A revision and amplification of this act reads as follows :—

That none shall tayke apprentices borne or brought uppe in Tyndayll or Redesdayll.

Also it is ordeyned, &c., That, from hensforthe, no brother of this Fellowship shall tayke to his apprentice any suche as have bene borne and brought upp in Tyndayll or Redesdayll, or any suche place, wheras the parties there brought upp ar knowen, either by educatyon or nature, not to be of honest conversatyon; neyther any bastarde or bayse begotten sonne whatsoever, or wheresoever he were bornne, upon payne, that what brother shall do or tayke any apprentice contrary the treu meaning of this acte, shall forfeit to the use of this Fellowship the som of xx^{li}.

And that no maner of person being borne in Tyndale, Riddesdale, Eskdale, or Levyn to be admitted to be an apprentice in this said Feoloship, upon pain everie brother to forfait to the use of this Feoloship, for everie apprentize so by him received, the somme of twentie pounds of lawfull monnie of Englande, and the yeres of everie suche apprentice to be utterlie voide and of none effecte. * * * And further be it enacted, &c., That from hensforth no maner of apprentice of this said Feoloship shalbe permitted to marrie with anie maner of woman, before the expiracion of his yeres wherin he remaineth so bounden, upon pain all the terme of yeres that he hath so served, before his suche mariage, to be utterlie voide and of none effecte. And that no broother from hensforth to be admitted to take anye apprentice, except the same broother doo and shall remain and enhabitt, for the moste parte, in this said towne of Newcastle, upon pain the yeres of suche apprentices so taken by indenture to be utterlie voide and of none effecte.

Whereas our predecessors have, from tyme to tyme, taken special care not onely of their apprentices carriadge and behavior, but also to prohibit every brother of this Company to take any apprentice borne in Tindale, or Riddesdale, or any other place, where the sayd apprentice was not knowne to be well educated and of

This act was repealed at a full court holden the 5th of February, 1676, onely for Tindall and Riddesdale.

This act was repealed at a full court holden the 6th of May, 1771, to every part thereof except that part which relates to taking apprentices who are Quakers or Papists.

This act was further repealed at a full court holden the 6th of May, 1771, so farr as relates to taking apprentices not known to be well educated, or any base born wheresoever he was born, or any crooked or lame, or any other way deformed.

honest conversation, or any base begotten, wheresoever he was borne or whatsoever he bee, and this upon the penalty of 20^{li}. for every brother so offending, and [sic, sed as] by an act made the 14th November, 1554, doth and may appeare. And whereas in these late tymes, wherein iniquity abounds, wee finde, by woefull experience, a great apostacy and fallinge of from the truth to popery, Quakisme, and all manner of heresy and unheard of blasphemy and profainenes, to the great dishonor of God, and the scandall of religion, wee, the Governor, &c., under a deepe sence hereof, and a desire, as much as in us lyes, to prevent the growth of these and other heresies amonge us, do finde it expedient and necessary to order, &c., That no brother whatsoever shall, from henceforth, take any apprentice, who in his judgment or practice, is a popish recusant, or Quaker, or any who shall not attend duely on his maister at the publicke ordinances, or any who is base begotten, crooked, lame, or any other way deformed, and if any brother shall offend herein, or doe anythinge contrary to the true intent and meaninge hereof, he shall, for every such offence, forfeit to the use of this sayd Fellowship, the some of one hundred marks, without grace or favour of court. And the sayd apprentice so taken shall loose what tyme he hath served, and never enioy any freedome of this Fellowship.

It was ordered, &c., That no brother of this Fellowship should be allowed at any time hereafter to take any bastard to his apprentice, but that the foregoinge act shall remayne in force.

[5 Feb. 1676.]

Whereas in the yeare of our Lord, 1554, Mr. Cuthbert Ellison beeing governour, in whose said time an act [was] passed, That none liveing or inhabiting within Tyndale or Riddesdale should be taken or bound an apprentice to any member of the said Society or Company; and forasmuch as this court hath thought it fitt and expedient to repeale part of the said act, in regard those parts are more civillized then formerly, yett neavertheless this court considering that there are many who yet ~~doe inhabit in the said parts and elsewhere that~~ doe committ frequent theffts and other felonys, soe that if this Company or any member thereof should admitt or take off their sons apprentices, proceeding from such leude and wicked progenitors, it will be noe small dishonoure to the said Company and members thereof. Be it therefore enacted, &c., That noe person or persons whatsoever that hath either beene or shall be either convicted or atainted of any felony, whereby hee ought to have the benifitt of the clergie, or ought or doth sufferr death for the same, that none of his sons shall by any member of the said Society be knowingly accepted, taken, or enroled, as an apprentice, and that every apprentice soe accepted, taken, or enroled, shall not have, receive, or reape, any benifitt by the same. And be it further enacted, That every member of the said Society accepting, takeing, or enroleing any such person as afforesaid, as an apprentice, shall, for every such offence as aforesaid, forfeite the sume of forty pounds, to be levied by such ways and meanes as shall seeme moste expedient to the Company to procure the same, according to the laudable custome of this Company.

[ORDINANCES RELATING TO EXPORT OF MERCHANDISE.]

The acte that no man shall ship above xv^{xx} yerds of canves at the moost.

It is assented, &c., That no man, beyng free of this Feloship, shall ship above xv score yerds of canves within the yere, and so to continew the space of thre yere, upon payn of forfature for every suche default so shipped, above the said some, a hundreth pounce of lawfull money of Ynglond, and the third part to be gewen to the presenters thereof.

At a corte holden the xiiijth daie of Julye, anno Domini 1581, upon complaint of divers of the bretheren of this Feoloship of Merchants Adventurers of Newcastle upon Tyne, that Mr. George Briggs of this said towne of Newcastle, fishmonger, and others of the same towne, have often and daillie doo occupie the trade of the said Feoloship in manye kinds of merchandizes, within the said towne and liberties therof, to the great preiudice, hurte, and hinderance of the said Feoloship, and imminent overthrowe and decaie of the Feoloship aforesaid, if the suche attempts of the said Mr. Briggs and others be not by times provided for and spedie redres to be had in that behalf. Yt is therefore enacted, &c., That no maner of parson or parsons, free of the said Feoloship of Merchants of this towne, shall from hensforth freight anye ship or shippes, or anye other vessell, to lode or medle or deale in anye maner of wise with the said George Briggs, or anye other inhabitant of this towne, not free of this said Feoloship, concerning anye maner of trade of merchandize, wherin the said George Briggs, or others not free of this Feoloship, shall have anye parte or parcell, owtwarde or inwarde, directlie or indirectlie. And further that no maner of parson or parsons, free of this said Feoloship of Merchants Adventurers, their factors or assigneis, shall assist, buye, or receive anye kinde of leade clothe or other commoditie whatsoever, or take anye monnye by exchaung of him, the said George Briggs, or anye other inhabitant of this towne, not free of this said Feoloship, their factors or assigneis, or anye of them; nor to deliver to the said George Briggs or others as aforesaid, not free of this Feoloship aforesaid, their factors or assigneis, or any of them, anye monnye by exchaunge for the furnisheng of anye voiage, or for deliverie of anye kinde of merchandize, or any part therof, to the said George Briggs, or others enhabiteng in this towne aforesaid, not free of this Feoloship, their factors or assigneis, or anye of them, coming from anye parts beyonde the seas, in this towne or the liberties therof, or any other place within this realme of Englande from whens the same shalbe browght to this towne, nor them or anye of them in anye maner of wise to assist in the same, or anye parte therof, upon pain that everie broother or any other person or persons, free of this Feoloship aforesaid, offendinge contrarye to the tenour and trewe meaninge of the poincts conteigned in this acte, shall forfaitt and paie, for everie suche offence, to the use of the said Feoloship of Merchaunts, the somme of one hunderd pounds of lafull monnye of Englande. Provided alwaies that this acte shall not in anye maner of wise tooche the maryners' foorings, but that the maryners maie and shall laye in the same foorings as thei have beene heretofore accustomed.

Wheras divers merchant straungers, in regarde of their private and perticuler gaine, do seeke by sundrie meanes to take away the trade, speciall occupie, and vente of some kynde of merchandizes, not onelie in deallinge and bargayninge within this towne, but also in transportinge, and cheiflie for the buyinge, caryinge away, and shippinge forth from hence great quantities of leade, and other comodities; for remedie wherof yt is this daie ordered, &c., That the present wardens for the tyme beinge shall, upon occasion offered, by the best waies and meanes they can, make staie of all such goods or merchandize, of what nature or kynde soever the same be, as shall in anie sorte be offered to be caried awaie or shipped by forreyners as aforesaid, and what charges or expences as shall hereafter aryse or growe by reason of anie suits which may come, or in anie sorte be attempted, ether against the said wardens or others by them appointed, dealinge therin on the behalf of this Felloshipp, shalbe annswered, borne, and discharged by this whole Felloshipp.

Wheras at this present tyme there are great complaints, by the trading brethren of this Company of Merchants Adventurers of this towne of Newcastle upon Tyne, touching great abuses, and insufferable iniuries which the said Company now groaneth under, through the great and ample trade of divers inhabitants of this towne, and other interloopers of the country not free of this Fellowship, as principally ~~Mr. Thomas Bonner of this towne draper and~~ Morgan Rollandson, of Bernerd Castle, who not only trade in the staple comodities of this kingdome outwards, but also inwards, in what merchandizes themselves please; and wheras this Company, at severall tymes heretofore, having bin abused and perplexed in the same kind with such interloopers, who have left us presidents of divers acts, made at severall tymes, for restraining of the like evils, especially two remarkable ones, whereof one in the yeare 1575, where it was enacted, that if any free of this Company should shipp any goods in the same bottoms with marchants strangers, should forfeit the third part of the vallue thereof, and in like manner by nother act made 1581, therby restraining every brother of this Fellowship from shipping any goods in the same vessells with George Briggs, or any other not free of this Company, upon payne of the forfeiture of 100^{li} for every such offence so committed, to the use of the said Fellowshipp. In consideration of which good acts and presedents, together with respect to this Company's present trade, and that these interloopers trade in the most staple commodities of this kingdome, as in lead, cloth, stockins, and other comodities outward, as also homeward in all marchandizes at their owne wills, and that for present there cannot be conceived any better meanes for the debarring and restraining of the said interloopers in this their ample trade, but only by restraining all the brethren of this our Fellowship, all tymes hereafter, from shipping any manner of goods outward or inward in any shipp or shippes, where the aforementioned persons or any other interlooper shall shipp any manner of goods whatsoever: It is therefore this day ordered, &c., That from and after the 25th day of December next, not any person or persons whatsoever, free of this Company, shall directly or indirectly shipp any manner of cloth, lead, stockins or other marchandize, in any shipp or shippes whatsoever, within this port of Newcastle, where any of the foresaid persons or other interloopers shall shipp any manner of marchandize, to be conveyed to any part beyond the seaes, under the goverment of the states of Holland ~~or~~ [blank in MS.] nor shall directly or indirectly lade any manner of marchandize, from any of the ports beyond the seaes, under the aforesaid goverment, in any shipp or shippes whatsoever, where any of the forenamed interloopers, or others not free of this Company, shall lade any of their marchandizes, upon paine that every brother who shall do in any wise contrary to this present act, shall for his first offence pay one sixt part of the value of his goods as they cost; for the second offence one fourth part of the value; and for his third offence shall pay the one halfe of the vallue of his goods as aforesaid. And because that maisters of shippes may much further the observeance of this act, wherein the welfare of this Company is so much concerned, and on the contrary may much preiudice the Fellowship by their connivance with the said interloopers, it is therefore further ordered by this present act, that all maisters of shippes, who hereafter shall shew their fathfullnes to this Fellowship, to the disheartning of all interloopers, not only in denying to take in any of their goods, but in discovering any such motion to the wardens of the Fellowship for the tyme being, shall be furthered with the employment of this Company as occasion offers, according to his or their merit, and, on the contrary, whatsoever master of shipp shall directly or indirectly, outwards or inwards, take in their shipp or shippes any manner of goods or marchandize belonging to any interlooper whatsoever, and shall be really convicted thereof before the Governor, shall not be employed by any person or persons free of this Company for the space of three years, upon further paine that if any brother or sister shall presume to imploy any of the said maisters, they shall forfeit to the use of this Fellowship 50^{li}. for every tyme so offending. And to the end that maisters of shippes, factors beyond the seaes, as also their severall sons and servants there, belonging to the brethren of this Company, may not plead ignorance herin, it is ordered that a coppie of this act be forthwith delivered to the maister of the Trynitie House of this towne, or his deputy, desiring it may be generally comunicated to all the members of that house, and also every brother of this Company to acquaint his son, servant, or factor beyond the seaes with the same, with all possible convenience, at his or their perills. And for the better discovering maisters of shippes offending contrary to this act, Mr. George Dawson, a member of this Company, is desired that he will cause his deputy in the Custome House, from tyme to tyme, to deliver, to the beadle of this Fellowship, the maister his name with the shipp's name, in which interloopers have shipped any goods, as well outward or inward, and the contents of the said goods as neere as he can, to the end that the said maister's name with his shipp's name may be recorded in the Companie's bookes, and the knowledge given to the brethren of this Fellowship, least they offend herin through ignorance. And that no brother of this Company, shall be lyable to the penalty or penalties aforesaid, untill they have notice thereof given them by one of the wardens or beadle of this Company.

Also it is assented, &c., That no merchaunt beyng free of this Feloship ship no maner of goods, nor make no maner of merchaundyse, within the town of Depe for the space of thre yere next ensuyng affter this date, upon payn of forfatur to the Feloship for every time so doying x^{li}.

[28 July, 1518.]

The acte for shippyng of other men's goods, not paying ther dewes unto the Feloship, and for color yng of it.

It is assented, &c., That no man, beyng free of this Feloship, shall ship nor colour non other manne's goods of this Feloship, but onely his owne proper goods; and for every poke woll so fon and proved, he to forfeit x^{li}., that is to say, to our soverayng lord the Kyng, iij^l. vj^s. viij^d., and to the Feloship, iij^l. vj^s. viij^d., and to the presenters thar of, iij^l. vj^s. viij^d.; and this to be leved with owten any forgyffnes, and to be disamyt out of the Compenny of this Feloship.

[8 March, 1520.]

Also it is asented, &c., That if any of this Feloship do lay any marchandyse in any stranger that he shall gyffe warnyng to the stewards, or ells he to pay for the said ship iij^s. iiij^d.

[15 Dec. year not stated.]

The act for freghttyng of shippes goyng over see.

It is assented, &c., That non of this Feloship do lay no goods in no ship to go over see, whyll the four which ar appoynted or shalbe apoynted to freght every ship, and the said four so appoynted, thay to se the ship and hyr takle, yff she be abull to serve the merchaunts or not. And who so doyeth the contrary to this act, thay to pay to this Feloship, vj^s. viij^d. [als of[t] as it shall require. [22 April, 1563.]

An acte for shipping.

It is enactyd, &c., That every owner of theis shipes that is nowe freighted to go into Flanders, shall cawsse thar porsars to bring in theyr bowks of everye shipe, and whatt everye brother haythe layde in everye shipe, bothe the nomber of woolles and felles, lead, clothe and all other marchandices, and theyr bowks so delyveryde to the stewards to be vewyd, and that no shipe shall depart beffore that everye brother of thys Fellyshipe that haythe shipid any merchandysses com in to the stewards, and present hymselffe by his bill, what he haythe shippid in every shipe, and to pay his impossecions, and what marke his goods haythe, and every man to gyve in his trewe marke, upon the payn of the penaltye contenyd in the formar act for shipping.

[29 April, 1574.]

Yt is enacted, &c., That no broother of the said Feoloship shall clier any ship or ships laden with wooll or fell in the Quein's Majestie's Custume Howse of this said towne of Newcastle, before the purser or owner of those ships, or the merchaunte fraighter, shall bringe to the wardens for the tyme beeng of this Feoloship, to the use of the same Feoloship, a true copie of all suche goods so shipped in everie of those shippes, upon pain everie broother so offending and dooeng contrarie to the tenor herof shall paie to the use of the said Feoloship, for everie time so offendinge, the somme of ij^s. vj^d. of everie hunderd skynnes, and of everie pockett or ballett of wooll iij^s. iiij^d. And also whatsoever broother of this Feoloship that shall privilie ship, by daie or night, either wooll or fell, to be conveyed into the parts of beyonde the see, and dooth not present the same wooll or fell so privilie shipped to the wardens of this Feoloship, before the said ship so departe owte of the river of Tyne, shall forfaitt to the use of this said Feoloship, for everie tyme so offendinge, xx^s. of everie hunderd fells, and of wooll according to the rate.

Also yt is ordered, &c., That if any free of this Felloship shall shipp any goods before they shall have paid such mony or debts as they are oweing to this Felloship, that it shall and may be lawll to and for the wardens of the same Felloship to make stay of all such goods so shipped, and to retaine the same untill they shall have well and trewly contented and paid the said monie and debts, so by him oweinge unto the said wardens, for and to the use of the said Felloshipp. And also that every one free of this Felloshipp that shall at any tyme hereafter sell any leade, to any marchant stranger, to be shipped [in any alian's bottome free interlined] from this porte, shall, before the shipping therof, geve under their hand wrytinge, unto the wardens of the said Felloship for the tyme beinge, a trew note specifyinge the number of the ffoothers of lead so by them sould and to be delivered, and also shall, before the shipping of the said leade, content and pay, or cause to be contented and paide, unto the said wardens of the said Fellowship for the tyme beinge, for and to the use of the said Felloshipp, for every ffoother of leade so sould and to be shipped, the some of twenty shillings of lawfull monie of England, upon paine that every brother of this Felloshipp, not geving a trew note and makeinge payment as aforesaid, shall pay for everie ffoother of leade lefte forth in his said note and not payd for, the some of forty shillings of lawfull mony of England.

It is assented, &c., That if any man take to freghe any ship or shippes to Bordeaux, Estland, or to any other place beyonde se, shall pay ther dewty to this Feloship accordyng unto hir burdyn, as hathe bene acostomed, except a man that do lade his owne ship with his owne proper goods.

The acte of the dewtyes to be taken of every wooll and fell [called shipmoney *].

It is assented, &c., That if any ship, what place as ever she be of, take to freght within this port any woll fells or lam fell, to sayll over se, into Holend, Seland, or Fraunce, or Flaunders, or to any other land, whatsoever it be, shall pay unto this Feloship, or tyme be he take any mercherds' goodes within the said ship, that is to say, if the ship be of ~~fourseore~~ [CC interlined] tonnes or more, he to pay to the Feloship x^s., and of every ship beyng of iiij score tonne, to pay vj^s. viij^d., and of every ship beyng under iiij scor, she to pay iij^s. iiij^d. And the owner or owners doyng contrary the said acte, to pay to this said Feloship, at over the forsaid dewty, for a fyne, x^s. And also that none of this said Feloship profer, nor do lay, any merchandice in any of the forsaid owner or owners' shippes, unto tyme he understonde the forsaid dewties to be paid to the stewards, upon payne of a fyne for every suche defawte, as often as it shall require, iij^s. iiij^d. And also if any of this Feloship do lay any merchandyse in any straunger as is aforesaid, that he shall gyff lawfull warnyng unto the stewards, or to on of them, that thay may levy the mony for the ship or shippes, other wyse he not gyffyng warnyng to the stewards shall pay the said mony at his owne parell.

And all brether that comythe not in at that daye, to be of the smawll sessement, orelles to be dyssmyssyd for shipping for this year, and thys act to conteneuwe for on holl yeare, and then to be orderyd as the Fellyshipe shall thinke meatt for the welthe of the holl Compannye. And ytt is forther enactyd and agreide, that all suche sessements as shall arysse, or that owght to be levid amongs the Fellyshipe, shalbe sett, sesscessyde, and levied according to the scessment and raytt of his shippinge of woolles and felles for this year next folowing. And for as moche as hereafter yt shall nott be dowtfull to annye of thys Fellyshipe the meanyng or entent of thys acte for shypinge, every man according to his raytt, yt is so mentt, ententyd, ande orderyd, by the holl Fellyshipe, that no fre brother of this Fellyshipe shall shype neyther wooll nor felles, nether to Fraunce nor to Flanders, otherwyes nor ys conteynyde and wryten in this act, befor nor from no haven nor cryke within this realme or domynyon, to no parts beyond the seas. And yt is further enactyde by the holl Fellyshipe aforsaid, that no fre brother shall neyther by hym self, his sarvant, nor non other parson for hym, by nor shipe no woolles, nor felles, neyther at Barwyke, Hartilpull, Stocton, nor no other town, haven, or cryke, nether within theis liberties nor without, to be caryed to annye port or haven beyond the seis in payn of forfeatoure.

And further it is ordeyned, That, for the more certayne knowlege of every man's shipping, two brethren of this Fellowshipe shall be assigned to every shippe whiche goith into Selande, there to mayke inquisytyon and searche, whether that every brother of this Fellowshipe have shipped for that present marte according to his bill of presentment or according to his rayt. And if any thing be founde shipped contrary and above his rayt or number the partie offending shall be fyned therfor as in the begynnyng of this acte is specified, the half of the whiche fyne shall be dew to the presenters mayking search for the same, and thother half to thuse of this Fellowshipe.

Yt is enacted, &c., That where Mr. Richard Hodshon (one of the aldermen of the said towne of Newcastle, one of the brethren also of the said Feoloshipe, beinge deputie governor for the said Mr. John Watson in the absence of the same Mr. Watson) did dispence with Nicolas Punder, a brother of this Feoloship, for shipping of halfe an hunderd skinnnes above his rate: Yet nevertheles it is enacted, &c., That, from hensforth, there shalbe no maner of dispensacion or licence given, in times to comme, to any broother or other free of this Feoloship, for shipping of wooll or fell, aboove the raits conteigned in the said acte alredy made for suche shippinge, and that the said acte to remain in full strength and vertue, accordinge to the effecte therof.

[26 Nov. 1607.]

Upon perusall and reading of diverse orders and actes, heretofore made and confirmed by the authoritie of this Fellowship, there appeareth sundrie defects and imperfecons to be in the same, which are generallie thought fitt by this Companie to be reformed. And, therfor, having had consideracon therof, we, the Governor, assistants, wardens, and Fellowship of Merchants Adventurers have condiscended thereunto as followeth (viz).

* * * * *

Likewise it is ordeined, &c., That from henceforth all the brethren and other persons fre of this Fellowship shall be devided in two severall fates of shipping woole and fells yearly: the first whereof as touching maryed men and widdowes fre of this Fellowship, not any one of them to exceed in shipping, in one yeare, above the number of two thousand sheepe skinnnes, or woole fells, and two hundreth more, which such maryed men and widdowes shall have allowed unto them by vertue of this order, being in the whole two thousand two hundreth at the utmost, and six hundred stones of woole. And for the second fate as concerning bachlers, that no one of them, being free of this Companie, shall shipp above the number of one thousand skinnnes or woole fells one yeare, without any further allowance at all, and foure hundreth threscore stones of woole for one yeare. And if any brother, or other person fre of this Fellowship, shall shipp any woole or woole fells contrarie to the true meaning of this act, to forfeit and pay to the use of this Fellowship, for every hundred skinnnes iij^{li}., and for every stone of woole iij^s., toties quoties. And to the end that the truth in this matter may more certainly be knowne, it is also ordeined, That at the end of every shipping it shall be lawfull for the Governor of this Fellowship, the assistants and wardens for the tyme being, to call before them any brother, or other person fre of the same, and to cause him to declare by his oath how much woole or fells he hath bought and shipped the yeare, or the shippinge then last past, and also how much remaineth in his or her hands unshipped, and if it can be duellie proved that the partie examined either bought, sould, shipped, or hath remaining, either wooles or skinnes, other or more then he or she hath deposed, he or she not onely to pay the fine as aforesaid, but also to be used therfor according to the acte of periurie. The third parte of which fine shall be paid after receipt therof to the presenter of such offender, and th'other two partes to the use of this Fellowship.

[A new act reciting the act of 26 Nov. 1607, as to the quantity of skins, etc., to be shipped by persons in each of the two rates of shipping, and providing that thenceforth] Yt shall and may be lawfull, by force hereof, to and for every married man and widowe, beinge free of this Fellowship, to shipp and lode every yeare three thousand and three hundreth shepe skynns, or wooll fells, and no more, and sixe hundreth stones of wooll; and for the second rate yt shall and may be lawfull to and for every bachelor, free of this said Companie, to shipp every yeare one thousand and fyve hundreth shepe skinns, or wooll fells, and no more, and fower hundreth and threescore stones of wooll.

At this present courte, for divers and sundrie good consideracons, heretofore had and taken by Mr. Governor, thassistentes and generallitie, as well for the further benefitinge and profitinge of this Fellowshipe, as for avoidinge of manie inconveniencies knowne to the said Fellowshipe, which they entendinge to eschewe, yt is therfor ordered, &c., That every one free of the said Fellowshipe shall, from this daie forward, paie unto the wardens of the said Societie for the time beinge, to and for the use of the said Fellowshipe, for every fother of leade by him, her, or their servantes, factors, or assignes, solde and delivered to any stranger, not free of the said Fellowshipe, and shipped forthe of this porte, the some of twentie shillings of corrant money of Englande, any acte, order, or decree heretofor maid and sett downe to be frustrate and voide, any thinge to the contrary hereof notwithstandinge. And that for the preventinge of such disordered persones as shall hereafter entende, and goe about to deceive the said Fellowshipe, of the said imposicon, in conceallinge and departinge forth of this said porte of Newcastle, without makinge notice and paiment to the said wardens, for any porcion of leade by them sold and delivered and shipte as aforesaid, yt is required at Mr. Governor's handes, that nowe is, which he hath promised to doe, that order shalbe geven unto the chamberlens of the Towne Chamber that they free, discharge, or cleare, no masters of shipes or other vessells whom theie shall by his othe perceive and finde to have received and loden into his shipe, or vessell, any porcione of leade, untill the said master of such shipe or vessell, or the purser therof, bringe unto them, the said chamberlens, a tikett or writinge under the hande of one of the stewards or wardens of this said Fellowshipe for the time beinge, for the clearinge of such shipe or vessell in that behalfe.

Foreasmuche, as well in respect that navigacion in many portes and places of this realme is decaied, by reason of the lacke of trade, by which manie of her Majestie's lovinge subiectes wer maintained, for that, that divers and sondrie merchantes and others of this lan[d], not respectinge the same, doe freight and lode for the most parte from porte to porte, in aliens' and strangers' bottomes, to the benefittin[g] of the said aliens and strangers, and to the hurte of them selves and their contrie; as also that divers personnes, free of this Fellowshipe of Merchantes, within the towne of Newcastle, doe coollorablie lode and shipe greate quantitie of leade and other marchandizes within this porte, contrarie to the actes and orders of the said Fellowshipe, maid and ordeined for the wealthe and benefitt of the said Fellowshipe; Yt is therfor, for reformation and restraint wherof emongest the said Fellowshipe, at this presente courte, upon good consideracions had and taken for that purposse, ordered and enacted, by the authoritie of the said cowrte, that from henceforthe noe persone or persones fre of the said Fellowshipe shall freight, shipe, or lode, or cause to be freighted, shipped, or loden, into any alien or strange bottome, shipe, vessell or craer whatsoever, anie porcion of wooll, fell, or leade, to be transported or caryed, ether from this porte, or ells wher, unto anie porte or place whersoever, upon paine that everie one doenge the contrarie shall forfe[it] and paie to the use of this Fellowshipe, for everie foorther of leade so lodden and shipped xl^{s.}, and for wooll and fell[s] accordinge to the same rate.

Yt is ordered that the act maide xxvjth of Julie, xxxv^o, toochin[g] the fyne of xx^{s.} imposed of everie one fre of this Companie for everie foorther of leade loden in any stranger's bottom, shalbe frustrate and of non effect.

[22 Oct. 1573.]

It is also enacted, &c., That everie broother of this Feoloship aforesaid, that shall buye and ship any whit lether, shall paie for imposition to the use of this Howse, twelve pence of everie hunderd of the same lether, before the departure of the ship so carieng the same lether from the Keye of this towne; and who that maketh not presentment of his suche lether so shipped, shall paie for everie hunderd, six shillings and eight pence for his offence, the one half to the presenter, the other half to the use of this Feoloship.

[4 April, 1622.]

Itt is ordered, &c., That whereas monies and golde (as is supposed), is in great quantities exported, by some of the breethren of this Fellowship, into forraigne parts, whereby great inconveniences have and daylie doe arise and ensew to this Fellowship, and the trade heretofore driven in the manufactures of this kingdome, by the said Fellowship, much impaired, as also that this abuse is a greate cause of want of coyne within these parts of the kingdome, and likewise repugnant to the good and wholesome lawes of this his Majestie's realme of England made in that behalfe. Therefore itt is this day enacted, &c., That no brother of this Fellowship, nor any other that are or shalbe capeable of the freedome of the same Fellowship, shall directlie or indirectlye, by himself or his servante, or servantes, or by anie others, convay or carrye awaye into forraigne parts any monie, golde, plate, or bullion of this kingdome, or any forraigne golde, or money, more then shalbe for his reasonable expences, and defrayeing the towles and customes for such clothe and other commodities as shalbe by the breethren of this Company exported from this porte and members. The which some and sommes of money or golde, so to be carried out for the defrayeing of his charges and towles as aforesaid, hee shall acquainte the Governour or one of the wardens of the said Companie therewith, and have his allowance under his hand for the same, whereby all fraudelent dealeing maie be avoided. And therefore what brother or brothers that shall doe contrarie to this act shalbe disfranchised and expelled out of the freedome of this Fellowship and privieledgs of the same. And for the discovering of secrett exportacion of money and gold as abovesaid, itt is further ordered that Mr. William Hall, Mr. Alexander Davison, Henry Bowes senior, John Butler, Lyonell Maddison the younger, Jacob Ferne-side, or any three of them, shall, from tyme to tyme, take true notice of all the entries of goodes, as well inwardes as outwardes, that shall, from after the day of the date hereof, be carried forth or brought into this porte and members, by the breethren of this Fellowship or others capeable of that freedome, or apprentices, and once every quarter, or oftener if there shalbe cause, to acquainte the wardens with all or any such abuses as shall happen in that tyme, and the names of the offenders therein (if any be) to make knowne, that thereby the parties may be called and dealt with accordeing to the validitie of this act, and the true meaneing thereof. And itt is further enacted and decreed that no brother of this Fellowship shalbe aydeing or assisteing to any stranger or strangers, or combyne himself with any stranger or strangers, for the carryeing or convayeing forth of this kingdome any monies or golde, nether culler any strangers goodes by entring them in the Custome Howse in his owne name. And further, that no brother buy any goodes or merchandizes of strangers secretlie, or be aydeing unto them in takeing upp any goodes or merchandizes, untill a true entrie be made unto the King's officers in the Custome Howse, and warrant from them for the landeing of the said goodes accordeing to the lawes in that case provided; for, by the cullerable landing of strangers' goodes, ether by day or by nighte, the merchant stranger getts his moneyes away for such goodes not entred, without makeing any imployment in the native commodities of this kingdome, whereby doth redoune greate hurt to the state in generall, and the marchants of this towne in particuler. And if any brother of this Fellowship shall enfringe, breake, or vioalate this act, upon the dew prooffe thereof, such brother offendeing shalbe disfranchised and expelled from the freedome of this Fellowship. And if any apprentice shall presume to offend herein, the said apprentice or apprentices so offendeing as before, shall never be capeable of any freedome of this Fellowship, butt his or there name or names so offendeing to be raised and putt forth of the booke of entries of apprentices of this Fellowship. And yf any fre brother of this Felloshipe do by annye wayres, merchandyce, or graynes, contrarye to this acte or order, to paye v^s. of every pownde wyth-owtte anny forgyvenes. Provydyd alwayes, that all suche grayns as comythe in, or shall com in here to be solde, that Mayster Maior shall have the dystribucion of as mutche of the saym for the comons of thys towne as maye serve them for ther hous and famylye.

Further, it is ordened that it shall not be lawfull for any brother of this Fellowshipe to bye or ingrosse into his hands any more, either wolls or fells, in one yere, but onely according to the rayt or number whiche for that yere he haith subscribed, save onely for j thousande skynnes j hundreth at the most and not above, and for v hundreth skynnes lx at the most and not above, and for other raits accordingly, upon payne to forfeit for doing contrary to the trewe meanyng of this acte as before is specified. And to the ende that the treuth in this matter may more certaynly be knowen, it is ordened that, at the end of every shipping, it shall be lawfull for the Governoure of this Fellowshipe, and the wardens for the tyme being, to call before them any brother of the same, and to cause hym declare by his othe booth how moche woll and fells he haith bought and shipped the yere, or the shipping then last past, and also howe moche remaneth in his hands unshipped. And if it can be otherwyse proved that he haith either bought, solde, shipped, or [hath] remayning either wooll or skynnes more then he haith deposed, he shall not onely pay the fyne as aforesaid, but also be used therfor according to the acte for periurye, the thirde parte of the whiche fyne shall be dew to the presenter of such offence, and th'other two parties to th'use of the Fellowshipe.

Forsomooche as it is to be consydered that no societie or companie canne be compacted or drawen togethers without somme respect and hope of commoditie and fruit to be had by the same wherby whan the pathe waie of the commoditie being alredie fownde forthe; as it is no litle wisdome to forsee to the conservacion of the same, so is it extreame folie to suffer others to enjoie that fruit and commoditie which canne but suffice onelie them selfs. How this Feoloship of Merchaunts is a companie encorroporated, and what fruit and commoditie hath arrisen to this Feoloship by reason of our trafficque in the same, none of our bretheren is or owght to be ignoraunt therof. And howe litle we of this Feoloship have regarded our owne fruict and comoditie it is not unknownen. Wharas soundrie of Gateshed in the countie of Durham and other forreners, being not free with us of this Feoloship, we suffer them to scrape to them selfs, as it were from our owne mootheres, our commodities and proffetts, which shoolde turne and comme unto our selfs if thei were hindered from the same. And this their gain is supposed also to be augmented by somme of our owne Feoloship, that use a kinde of traffique with those of Gateshed, to no litle detriment of the whole Feoloship, and so of them selfs if thei consyder it well. For reformation wherof it is enacted, &c., That from hensforth no broother of this Feoloship aforesaid shall buy, or cawse to be bowght, either by himself or by any other person or persons, man, woman, or childe, either for himselfe, or for any other person or personnes, either within this towne or without this towne dwelling, any maner of wares or merchandizes, which are to be bowght of Richard Natteres of Gateshed, chapman, Thomas Gilbert, pedler, presentlie dwelling within this towne, nor of any other chapman or pedler dwelling in this towne of Newcastle or Gateshed aforesaid, or that hereafter shall dwell eithir in this towne of Newcastle or Gateshed aforesaid, upon pain the offender in this behalf to paie to the use of this said Feoloship, for everie suche his offence, the somme of six shillings and eight pence. And further be it enacted, &c., That from hensforth no broother of this Feoloship aforesaid shalbe aiding or assisteng to any person or persons aboovewritten or mencioned for the carieng or conveieng of any of their commodities either by see, or lande, or water, either by himself or by any other person or persons, either man, woman, or childe, nor thereunto shall consent, by any manner of waies or meanes, upon pain that every broother of this Feoloship so offending contrary to the tenor of this acte shall forfaict and paie to the use of this said Feoloship, for everie suche his offence, the somme of tenne pounds of lawfull monnye of Englande, wherof the one half to the presenter of the offence, and the other half to the use of this Feoloship.

An acte consernyng the bying of wyne.

It is enactyde, &c., That annye free brother of this Fellyshipe that ys wylling, or wyl bye any of the wyynes now being present to be solde within this rever, shall have lycens to conferr and comai

Yt is enacted, &c., That no broother of this said Feoloship, from hensforth, shall in no manner of wise sett on woorke aboote any affair of merchandize, beyonde see, anie person or persons being not free of this Feoloship (except apprentices and free men's sonnes of this Feoloship aforesaid), upon pain that everie broother of this Feoloship, so offending, to paie for everie suche his offence, to the use of this Feoloship, twentie pounds of lawfull monnye of Englande; and that likewise no broother of this said Feoloship shall sett on woorke any person or personnes being not free of this Feoloship, aboote anie affaier of merchandize, that is to saie for bieng of wooll fells, leade, or clothe, on this side the see, except apprentices or freemen's sonnes of this said Feoloship, upon pain that everie broother of this Feoloship so offending, and dooeng contrarie to the tennor of this acte, to paie to the use of this Feoloship, for everie offence, five pounds of lawfull monnye of Englande.

Whereas by auntient acts of this Company it was ordered, That noe brother, or other person free of this Fellowship, shall in any manner of wise sett on worke any person or persons not free of this Fellowship about any affaires off merchandize, except apprentices or freemen's sons, upon penalty of five pounds toties quoties. And by reason these acts were restrained more peculiarly to some commodities then (but not now traded in) by bretheren of this Societie, yett hath since beene generally observed as to all sorts off merchandize; till of late complaints have beene made, and information given, that some bretheren of this Companie have and doe enterteine and imploy, in the affaires off merchandize, persons that are neither apprentices or free men's sons, contrary to the long practice, and to the great damage of this Society, and the discouradgment of such apprentices who pay considerable sumes and serve a long time that they may be instructed in the trade, and admitted to the priviledge of a merchant, when the other that are at noe charge and under noe obligation may (by beeing so imployed), gaine as much experience in merchandize. For the prevention whereof it is ordered, &c., That from henceforth noe person or persons whatsoever shall be sett on worke, or imployed, by any brother or sister of this Companie, in any affaires of merchandize, or the buying or selling of any commodities belonging to the trade of a merchant, within this towne of Newcastle, or libertys thereof, except apprentices and freemen's sons of this Society, upon penalty that every person for every time soe offending, and thereof convicted, shall pay for a fine to the Company the sume of ten pounds.

That no broother of this Feoloship shalbe bounden, by any obligacion or otherwise, to any person or personnes not beeng free of this Feoloship, for deliverie of leade in the scaill of the Waie Howse in Newcastle.

Yt is also enacted, &c., That no maner of broother of this Feoloship, or other parson free of the same, shalbe bounde, by any obligacion or otherwise, to any parson or parsonnes, not beeng free of this said Feoloship, for the deliverie to theim or any of theim of any leade in the scaill of the Waie Howse of Newcastle aforesaid, or elsewhere, within the same towne of Newcastle, or liberties of the same, to be delivered by any parson or parsonnes not free of this said Feoloship, upon payn everie broother of this Feoloship, and others free of the same, or any of theim, offendinge contrary to the tenour of this acte, to paie, for everie tyme of suche offence, to the use of this said Feoloship, the somme of xl^s. of everie foorther of suche leade as is entred in bonde for as is aforesaid.

Yt is enacted, &c., That everie [person] free of this Felloshipe, ether by themselves, their factors or servantes, shall from hence-forthe, upon the pament unto the wardens for the tyme beinge of anie money for anie thinge whatsoever due to the Felloshipe, (monethe pence excepted), sett and subscribe their handes unto the wardens' books of accoump[ts], menconing and declaringe the particulers for which they paie the same, otherwise to be holden and charged as debtors, for anie mony which shalbe challenged or required, for dueties or arrerags sett downe and expressed in the said wardens' books.

An act for lendingge the Companies plate.

It is ordered, &c., That the wardens of this Fellowship for the tyme beinge shall have the keepinge of the plate belonging to this Fellowship, and that every brother and sister of the same, at the burialls of themselves, their children or servants (and not otherwise), may have the use thereof, giveinge to the wardens of this Fellowship for the tyme beinge, good security to redeliver the same in the like condition they receive them. And if any hurt or damadge be done to the sayd cupps, every brother or sister so haveinge the benifit thereof are to repaire and make good againe the same. And the sayd cupps are not to be delivered to any other uses but as abovesayd, except it be upon speciall occasion at generall meetings or solemne feasts kept by the Company. It is further ordered that John Stobbs and Gawin Aidon, present wardens, shall in or upon the nineth day of October next, being the generall day of election of all officers of this Company, bringe into the Court the sayd cupps in cases and in one trunke, as now are delivered unto them, to the end they may be delivered to the succeedinge wardens that shalbe elected by this Company. And the sayd new wardens so elected are accordinge to the limitation of this order to use and dispose of the same and not otherwise. And it is further ordered the sayd cupps shall not be lent to any brother of this Company, but to such as dwell and inhabit in this towne of Newcastle, and not upon any occasion to be sent into the Country.

An addition to the sayd Act [11 Oct. 1632].

Now it is ordered, &c., That the brethren and sisters of this Company shall have the use of the foresayd plate at christenings, weddings and burialls of themselves, children, and servants, they performinge the foresayd order made the 27th January 1625; which is, that if hurt or damadge be done to the sayd plate, it shalbe repaired and amended by those who had the use thereof.

Diverse orders were presented by the bretheren appointed the last courte, redd and condiseded too, for regulating the Companey for sale or taking upp of rye out of shippes here, eyther in partnership or otherwise, which here follow (vidt) :

1. That every importer shall take his turne by standing at the planke's end, by himselfe or servant, his day aboute, and he that hath the greatest quantity to begin first, and to follow in order, upon payne of five shillings for every such neglect, to be paid to the Companey.

2. That noe buyer of rye from the importer shall have the benefitt of receiving any upp by ticketts, as to deliver it to any baker or milner or otherwise for money, but shall take it upp into their owne lofts first, and that none soe sould shalbe delivered under one chaldor at one tyme, untill their two thirds of all the corne be delivered, and after that proporcionably, upon payne of 12^d. per boule to be paid to the Company, by the importer, if he sell it to an unfree buyer by tickett from a bord; if to a free brother then the buyer to pay the stroffe.

3. That noe man shall send any ticketts unto the shippes for any corne, but for such as he shall that very day make the buyer thereof debtor for in his bookes, and for which he receives not present money, upon payne of 12^d. per boule to be paid to the Companey for every default.

4. That noe man sell at the planke's end, under the rate agreed upon, and sett by the maior parte of the loders, noe, though he by selling cheper would take it to his owne accompt, but shall make the full price good to the rest of the loaders.

5. That if any take up above his quantity or proporcion of corne, besides his parte of what is sould for money, he shall restore at the receiver's pleasure corne or money, as it was sould at planke's end upon the generall score, provided it be demaunded in three dayes after the shipp be out, otherwise to be at the restorer's pleasure whether to deliver in rye or money.

6. That every man shalbe accomptable for his servant that stands at planke's end, and shall doe good what the metter and Company doe affirme to be delivered that day, both corne and money for what is sould.

7. That in case it be discovered there be difference in corne aboard any shipp, that then every partner shall take upp his porcionable parte, and noe more, of both good and badd, upon payne of forty shillings to be paid to the Company for his default.

8. That noe man shall send doune his servant into hoole to trime in corne or use the shovell there, but it shalbe trimed in by the company of the said shipp, or such as they, the master, or greater parte of the loaders shall hire, and in case the corne prove foule with straues, then they may take a rake and nothing else to draw forth straues, upon payne of tenn shillings to be paid to the Company for every such default.

9. That he which hath the greatest quantity shall make upp the accompts within eight dayes after the shipp is all delivered, upon payne of tenn shillings to be paid to the Company for every neglect, and if diverse have equall proporcions in the said shipp, then the eldest brother is to make upp accompts.

10. That every partner or servant that stands at planke's end, shall every day, joyntly with the metter, give upp a particuler and true accompt of every daye's delivery to him that hath the greatest parte, or to him that is to make upp the accompt.

[The Company's arms not to be impaled.]

It is enacted that, at the buriall of every brother or sister, the Company's armes shall not be impaled in the same scuchion with their owne, neyther after this shall any armes be impaled with the Merchants, upon grave stones, but severally. For every default herein it is ordered that every executor to the deceased brother or sister shall forfitt 5^{li}. to the use of this Fellowship, and every brother, that is a carier, forevery default shall forfitt, 20^s., likewise for this Company's use. The beadle at burialls is required to take care that the armes be thus ordered.

[Remission of fines.]

It was ordered that everye brother that shall hereafter petition to have restored to him all or part of what fyne or fynes soever he hath payd in to the wardens, for the transgression of any act or acts of this Societie, and shall, upon such his petition or otherwise, have all or part of such fyne or fynes given him againe shall, for every twenty shillings soe restored, pay to the wardens twelve pence for the use of the poore.

[19 Feb. 1663-4.]

[Payment by apprentices of their masters' fines.]

Ordered that what brother soever, that now is, or hereafter shall be in arreare, or indebted to the Company any sume of money, either for pole money, loane money, impositions, or any other debt due to the Fellowship, and being lawfully demanded, shall refuse to pay the same, soe that any apprentice or servant to that brother be constrained before his admittance to his freedome to pay his master's arreares, which by the acts of this Company he is to pay before he be soe admitted, that brother refuseing to pay as afore-sayd, shall repay to his apprentice what sume or sumes of money he hath payd the Company for the arreares of his sayd master, before the master be permitted either to take an apprentice or have an apprentice sett over to him, neither shall be suffered to make sonne or servant free of this Societie.

[Election of town's auditors.]

It was ordered, &c., That all the brethren of this Society, as well Drapers as Mercers and Boothmen, shall meet yearely, at the accustomed tyme and place, to make choyce of there auditors for the towne's accounts, upon penalty that every brother that shall be found neglective herein shall, for every default, forfeit and pay the sume of twelve pence.

[23 Jan. 1660-1.]

[Members forbidden to come to Court in riding coats.]

Whereas some of the younger brethren of this Fellowship have of late come to the Court in rideing coates (a habit not becomeing any brother of this civill Society), It is thought fit and soe ordered, That noe brother whatsoever of this Fellowship shall, at any tyme hereafter, come into the Court without his cloake, upon paine of forfeitting to the use of this Fellowship, for every tyme he shall soe offend, five shillings without favour of Court.

[Gifts to the poor by new members.]

Ordered that all young men who shall come in for their freedoms shall put what money they shall give to the poore into a paper, with their severall names incerted therein, and the said money to be put into the poore box by the wardens.

[30 September 1669.]

[An act regulating methods of trade.]

Whereas divers bretheren of this Fellowship have made complaint of severall disorders, and unbeseeing words and actions used by severall members of this Court and their servants, not fitt for marchants to use, in selling their marchandize, for redressing of which and the like that may followe, it is ordered, &c., That noe brother or sister shall, either by themselves, their servants, or anie other person whatsoever, call too, or invite anie person, either by word or anie signe, to come to their shoppes or sellars, while such person is either speaking with another of this Fellowship or his servants, against their owne shoppes, sellar, or houses, or goeing with them to shew them anie commodity, or be present with them or anie of them; but shall dilligently attende their customers, coming to their owne shoppes and sellars. And that in their selling they shall not undervalue or disgrace their neighbours goods, but leaveing every chapman to his owne discretion in buying the goods he is to buy, and hath presented to him. Upon paine that every brother or sister soe offending shall forfeite, for the first offence, twenty shillings, for the second forty shillings, and for the third five pounds. Neverthelesse it is and may be lawfull that, if anie chapman have beene treating with anie brother or sister, or their servants, for the price of anie sortes of goods, and doe not agree, the said parties may goe or sende after them to lett them know they may have the goods as they proffered, or the lowest price they will sell att; provided the said chapman be not present with some brother or sister of this Fellowship, or their servants, nor goeing into the shopp of anie brother or sister of this Companie. And it was further ordered, that such person or persons who should truely informe against anie brother or sister, for their breach of the act afforesaid, or anie clause therein specified, should be gratified as the Company shall thinke fitt.

An act prohibiting the bretheren of this Fellowship to receive any deputation, order, or authority from the Muscovie, or any other Company, to receive any dutys upon goods.

Whereas, at a Court held the 9th day of Aprill, 1678, complaint was made, that Mr. Humphrey Pybus, a brother of this Fellowship, had demaunded dutys off goods from the Nerve, under pretence of some power or order from the Muscovia Company, (and for refusall a member hath beene prosecuted), and undertaken by him without the consent, privity, or knowledge of this Fellowship, which is highly prejudiciall to the members thereof, and tends greatly to the obstruction of trade to these parts, which hath in all times beene freely enjoyed, without lett or hinderance, or payment of any dutys or impositions whatsoever: to prevent the same for time to come, it is this day enacted, &c., That neither the said Mr. Pybus, nor any brother, shall from henceforth, directly or indirectly, either by themselves, their agents, substitutes or servants, for their use, take or receive any deputation, order, or authority from the said Muscovia Company, or any other Fellowship, to demand any dutys, or prosecute any member of this Fellowship, or continue correspondence to give encouragment, advice, or assistance, by word or writing, to the prejudice of this Fellowship; upon penalty that every member soe offending, (beeing convicted thereof), shall for his first offence forfeite to the use of this Fellowship, one hundred pounds, and for the second offence shall forfeite two hundred pounds, and for the third forfeite his freedome of this Company.

An act prohibiting the bretheren of this Fellowship to trade in joint stock with interlopers.

Whereas there hath beene complaints lately made to this Company of some of the bretheren, that have joyned in partnership, with persons not free of this Fellowship, in a trade of merchandize, contrary to the acts of this Society, which if not speedily prevented will very much tend both to the dishonoure of the Company in generall, and great prejudice of all the tradeing bretheren thereof. Whereupon, at a full court holden the sixteenth day of March 169^s/₉ it was ordered that a committee should be chosen, and to inspect, and allso take into their serious and due considerations, the acts of this Company, more especially concerning trade, which at severall times was performed, more perticularly the act made the second of December, anno 1645, prohibiting the bretheren to trade in partnership with some interlopers in perticular, and not all in generall, which was by the said committee thought to be very defficient, and therefore to be repealed, and steade thereof resolved to be enacted as followeth: It is therefore enacted, &c., That noe brother of this Fellowship shall be permitted to joyne in partnership with, or be assistant to, any person not free of this Fellowship, in any way of trade in merchandize that shall be imported into this port of Newcastle, more perticularly unfreemen of this towne and Gateside, or any person thirty miles distant from this towne. And it is further enacted, That every brother soe offending, being convicted thereof, shall pay a fine of 20 pounds for the first offence, and 50 pounds for the second offence, and for the third offence one hundred pounds. Provided allways, that it shall and may be lawfull for any brother of this Fellowship to joyne in partnership with any person whosoever, in any trade for any parts of the East and West Indias, the Leeward Ilands and the Streights. And be it further provided, That it may and shall be lawfull for any brother to sell and vend any sort of goods whatsoever that shall be consigned to him from any person, by way of comission. And be it further enacted &c., That noe apprentice shall be permitted to make and vend mault, or deale in any kinde of merchandize, otherwise the old act doth allow them, that is to say, all in joynt stocke with his maister. And if any apprentice shall be found guilty, by offending herein, being convicted, he shall be lyable to such fines as followeth, vizt., for his first offence, a penalty not exceeding fifty pounds and not under ten pounds, the second offence not to exceed one c pounds and not under fifty, and for the third offence, loss of freedome.

An act against hecklers.

Whereas complaint hath been made to this Court that divers persons, not free of this Fellowship, have of late sold great quantities of drest flax and hemp within this towne and the liberties thereof; which we conceive to be an invation of the franchises and priviledges of this Company, and to the great detriment and prejudice of the members thereof, for the preventing the like inconveniency for the future, it is hereby enacted, &c., That from and after the first day of August, 1701, no brother or sister of this Company shall imploy, or cause to be imployed, any person or persons in dressing or heckling of flax or hemp, except the said person or persons, so to be imployed, doe first give bond to this Company, in the penallty of twenty pounds, that he or she will not, directly or indirectly, by themselves, their agents, or servants, sell, or cause to be sold, any drest flax, hemp or tow, for his, her, or their proper account, or for the account of any other person, not free of this Fellowship, within the liberties of this town and county of Newcastle aforesaid, or within seaven miles of the same. And it is further enacted, &c., that from and after this present 24th day of July, 1701, no brother or sister of this Company shall sell, or cause to be sold, any rough flax or hemp to any person whatsoever, not free of this Fellowship, whome they shall know to exercise the trade or occupation of a dresser or heckler of flax or hemp, within the liberties of this Corporation, or within seaven miles of the same, nor to any other person for their use, he knowing it to be so, except the said heckler or dresser of flax have first given bond as abovesaid. And it is hereby further enacted, &c., That every member of this Company who shall offend against this act, and not give due obedience hereunto, according to the true intent and meaning hereof, (upon information and proof thereof made before this Company,) shall, for the first offence, pay to the use of this Company the sume of tenn pounds, and if, after conviction, the person offending continue obstinate, and not yield due obedience to this act, then the said person shall be lyable to such further penalty as this Court shall think fit to inflict for such their contempt and disobedience.

[Repayment of loans.]

Mr. Governour moved that this Company would make an order that, for the future, every brother that now has, or hereafter shall have, any money belonging to the Merchants' Company, that when term of years expires the brother gave bond for, and had the same gratis, that then the said brother shall pay the said money into the hutch of this town, to remaine there gratis till the same is obtained of this Company by petition, interim a receipt to be taken under the hand of the Chamber Clark, mencioning the time and the name of the person who payd the same, that thereby the said person may have his security given him by Mr. Governour. And further that every brother who, upon his petition, shall obtaine any moneys belonging to this Company then in the said hutch, Mr. Mayor and six aldermen be desired imediately to sign an order to the chamberlains to pay the same. And this Company does hereby order and confirm the same, and that order is hereby recorded accordingly.

[Trading freemen by patrimony.]

Whereas several persons, intituled by patrimony to their freedom of this Fellowship of Merchant Adventurers, do frequently set up the trade and business of a merchant, or some branch thereof, and do follow and exercise the same for some time before taking their freedom of the said Fellowship, to the hurt and prejudice of the same, it is therefore ordered that, from henceforth, every person, having a right to his freedom of this Fellowship by patrimony as aforesaid, who shall set up, use, follow and exercise the said trade and business of a merchant, or any branch thereof, shall, within twelve months next after exercising the same, apply and take his freedom of the said Fellowship, or in default thereof shall forfeit and pay, on his being admitted, the sum of £10 over and above the usual fees.

EXTRACTS FROM MINUTE BOOKS.*

Resaved of Henre Redpeth, tayllor, for a fyne for retaylling of lynt and other marchandises, iiij^s. iiij^d. ; John Coke then being Mayre and

* The present section consists chiefly of extracts from the Minute Books of the Merchants' Company. From these books it is undesirable, and well-nigh impracticable, to print more than a selection. To print them in extenso would fill several large volumes. The object which, in making his selection, the editor has constantly had in view, has been to afford the reader the material which will enable him to form an accurate conception of the internal life of an important and influential trade guild, though he has been careful to copy and print every entry which throws light on the history of the Company, of the town, or of any member of the fraternity whose name has come down to our times. But of those resolutions which occupy, in the original records, by far the greater amount of space, only typical examples have been copied, and when the student finds that, at one meeting, the merchants fined a brother for some offence which he had committed, and afterwards, at his petition, from time to time returned to him various instalments of the fine, until almost if not quite the whole had been refunded, he must remember that proceedings of the same kind occurred in every year, and almost at every meeting. The same remark applies to many other classes of minutes, which the reader will readily recognise.

The earliest books of the Society commence, as we have seen, in the year 1480, but for considerably more than a century after this date no separate minute book was kept. The less important resolutions do not seem to have been even recorded. The more significant ones were entered in the one volume which contained the whole of the Society's proceedings—legislative enactments, enrolments of apprentices, admissions of freemen, and yearly summaries of accounts. As the pages of this volume were gradually filled up new entries were crowded into any available space. There is evidence that the first Minute Book, recording the proceedings of each meeting of the Guild, commenced in or about the year 1604. Unfortunately, this book, several times mentioned in other volumes as the Old Court Book, or the Little Court Book, is lost. The earliest Minute Book now in the possession of the Society commences in the year 1639, and from that date to the present time the series is quite complete.

As will be seen, a large number of resolutions, of an earlier date than 1639, are printed in these pages. These have all been gleaned from Codices I. and II. For the period covered by the lost Minute Book our extracts are necessarily scanty, and only include such enactments as, on account of their legislative character, were either transcribed from the lost Minute Book into the Order Books, or were originally entered in the latter volumes. The more permanent ordinances for the same period have already been printed in the preceding section of this volume.

† The following entries down to and including those dated 9-12 Jan. 1514-5, as well as others printed on pages 83, 84, and 96, and dated 3 July 1523, 12 May 1524, 5 March 1528-9, 14 March 1531-2, and 22 March 1571-2, occur on a leaf at the end of Codex I., where they are headed: "Fynes taken, by the Feloship of Marchaunts, of crafftmen for occupying the occupacion of marchaunts withouten licens of the said marchaunts."

Accordinge to the purporte of this above written order, Christofer Mytforde lost his place of an assistant, and paid the some of xx^s. abovemenconed, [and] in his place Richard Stott was then presentlie elected.

Yt is ordered, &c., That, wheras it appeared that Mr. Henrie Chapman was indebted unto this Felloship, for divers and sondrie ymposicions, the some of fifteene pounds, two shillings, and sixe pence, as by due examinacion at this courte was founde, the said Mr. Chapman then presently paid in his said debte of arrerages, he had the fourth parte of the said debte by generall consent remitted him, and also foure poundes allowed him which the House, by the records of the same, stoode indebted unto him, and so all arrerages by him oweinge the House were clearly and fullie satisfied unto this presente day. It then appered also that this Fellowship stood indebted unto the said Mr. Chapman in twentie pounds, which he had disbursed at such tymes as he was imployed about the necessarie affairs of the same, whereby the Fellowship upon this account rested indeed indebted unto the said Mr. Chapman in the some of nyne pounds, or therabouts, which Mr. Chapman then desired to be repaid him, but upon the earnest request and sollicitacion of this whole Fellowship assembled, the said Mr. Chapman is content to be entreated to make the house so much beholden unto him as to disclame and release unto this Fellowship freely and of his owne benigne disposicion the said nyne pounds. In consideracion wherof the Fellowship do promise to make him the like freendly allowance, by reason of their now presente disabilitie to pay the same, when any fitt occasion of requitall shalbe offered.

[17 March 1599-1600.]

Yt is ordered, &c., That Cuthbert Kelsay (in lewe of such arrerages and debts as he was oweinge unto this Fellowship, for and concerninge the lodeinge, shippinge, and traffickinge, at severall tymes great number of skynnes above his due proporcion and rate) shall pay, for all fynes therof due, onely twentie pounds of lawfull English monie, so as he pay the same unto the wardens at or before the expiracion of xx daies now next followinge, and if he faile in the said payment, within the said limitted tyme, then we do further order that, for his contempt of not payment as aforesaid, he shall pay xx^{li.}, over and above the other xx^{li.}, without anie forgevenes in that behalf to be expected.

[12 May 1600.]

Yt is ordered, &c., That William Jackson, clarke to this Fellowship, shall go to London in Mr. Warmouth's place, who, since the tyme of his nominacion, is fallen sicke, and may not therfor undertake so great and dangerous a iorney, and that, besydes ordinarie allowance, horses for him and his man shalbe provided at the charge of this Fellowship, and he to be ioyned in commission, by letter of attorney under the seall of this Companie, with Mr. Chapman, who is appointed for the towne.

Yt is ordered, &c., That, towards the defreyinge of John Watson and George Liddell their charges, (now made choice of by this Felloship to repaire to Carlyle about the execucion of a commission in the suite depending at Yorke betwixt this companie and the glovers of Carlyle), there shalbe a presente levie and colleccion made of three shillings of everieone free of the same Felloship, and paid to the wardens of this Felloship, vizt., Roland Tempest and William Marley, with what expedicion may be, and if anie shall refuse to paie the said sesment, or anie other heretofore ymposed, then we authorishe the said wardens, with the beedle, John Pearson, or anie two of them, to go into anie the shop or houses of them that shall so refuse, and distreyne for the same, and the distresses so taken to sell, and make monie of.

Yt is likewise ordered, That Mr. Thomas Liddell, Mr. Frauncis Anderson, Mr. James Clavering, Mr. William Huntlie, Mr. William Warmouth, and Raiph Cock, shall enter into speech and conference with Mr. George Bowes, and, according to their best discrecions, bargaine and buie for the use of this Fellowship, to be proportioned as unto their discretions shall likewyse seme fitt, one hundreth footthers of leade, to be delivered at the common scale within this towne, at such daies as shalbe agreed of, so the said deliverie be made within one whole year now next ensueing, and so as the price do not exceed seven pounds thirtene shillings and foure pence per footther.

Whereas it is ordered this day, &c., That Mr. Wm. Riddell, Mr. Henry Chapman, Mr. George Farnabie, Mr. Frauncis Anderson, Mr. James Clavering, Mr. William Huntlie, and George Still, and fyve or foure of them, shall assesse everie brother of this Felloship by powle, accordinge to their discretions, and the particuler abilities and traffick of everie of the same brethren, for the raysinge and collectinge the some of fourescore pounds towards the charges of Mr. Warmoth, whom we do mak choise to be presently ymployed by warrant under the seall of this Felloship, about the affairs of the same at London, yt is ordered, that whosoever of the said Felloship shall refuse to pay such some of monie and assesment, as the above-named parties shall assesse him to pay, shall pay the same double, and that it shalbe lawfull for anie of the said wardens and beedell to go into his or their warehouses and shops, and distreyne for the same.

Yt is further ordered, That Mr. Thomas Riddell, Counsellor at lawe, sonne of Mr. William Riddell, alderman, shalbe admitted, accepted, and taken in to be a free brother of this Felloship, without payment of anie sesments, imposicons, or other generall dueties, or somes of monie hereafter to be levied, rayased, or collected, upon or emongst the same Felloship whatsoever, which we discharge and ease him of, in consideracon of his good advise and counsell henceforth to be geven in the matters and causes of the same Fellowship.

And it is likewise ordered, That whosoever of the said Fellowship shall refuse to accept, receive, or pay for, such porcion of leade as shalbe assigned to him for his parte of the bargaine or covenante made with Mr. Bowes, shall forfeit and pay to the use of this Fellowship, for everie his such refusall, the some of tenn shillings, to be levied, had, and taken up, by distresse or otherwise.

Yt is ordered, That what brother of this Fellowship as shall refuse to paie unto the wardens or beedell, or anie of them, demaunding the same, such sesment as alreadie is assessed by Mr. William Riddell, Mr. Henrie Chapman, Mr. George Farnabie, Mr. Frauncis Anderson, Mr. James Claveringe, Mr. William Huntlie, and George Still, and fyve or foure of them, shall pay for such his refusall, where the sesment is xx^s., the some of fyve pounds, and where the sesment is tenn shillings, the some of fifty shillings, without anie forgivenes. And no brother of this Fellowship shalbe suffered to make free anie sonne or apprentice, or be suffered to take anie apprentice, untill such tyme as the said fyne or fynes be first satisfied and paid, to the use of this Fellowship; and whosoever shall speake in the favour and behalf of anie who are to pay the fynes abovesaid, shall paie twentie shillings fyne for so speakeing, without anie forgivenes. Likewise whosoever refuseth to take and pay for such a porcion of leade as is or shalbe assigned unto him, of the bargaine made with Mr. Bowes, by Mr. Thomas Liddell, Mr. Frauncis Anderson, Mr. James Clavering, Mr. William Huntlie, and Raiph Cock, shall pay fyve pounds, to be paid as the other abovesaid. Provyded that the sonnes of such as are hereunder written shall not be further charged then with the payment of the principell sesment, and no further, albeit their fathers neglect the same.

And it is further ordered, that in case Mr. Warmouth, now ymployed at London about the affaires of this Fellowship, shall have occasion to disburse more monie then he hath alreadie received of this Companie, there shalbe assigned over unto him the twentie pounds due to this Fellowship upon the recognisance acknowledged by Thomas Chambers, to the use of the same, and he to be accountable to the Fellowship for the same.

[4 Nov. 1600.]

It is agreed, &c., That ther shalbe a present levie maid of vj^s. viij^d. per poulle of everie personne free of this Fellowshipe, towardes the payment and defrement of the charges to be laid forth and expended, in the present suite betwene thoes of Carlille and this Fellowshipe, and whosoever shall refuss to make payment of the same, upon demaunde, or within xxiiij houres after, to paie duple.

Copie of an acte made att the generall courte holden at Myddlebroughe, the xth of January, Anno 1600.

Forasmuch as many brethren of the Companie, especyallie such as trade wholie to the towne of Embden in Frysland, and into Germanie, have lytle regarde to observe the lawfull ordenances established for the goverment, rule, and maintenance of the saide Company, in there trade and feate of marchandize, and that the saide ordynances, by meanes of the stricktnes of a mandate, published by the Emperour, against the saide trade of Marchantes Adventurers, cannot nowe in Germanie be putt in execucion, And further, whereas the saide brethren ar and maie be indebted and owe unto the howse sondrie somes of money for dyvers causes, and namelie for imposition of clothes and other woollen comodytie by them shipped out, by tolleracion, of the abovesaide towne of Embden, and some other to Callaice in France, and which cannott be so fullie demaunded and collected as were convenyent, by reason of the abovemencioned cause, And that the saide brethren do not nor will not repaire to this towne of Myddlebroughe, where att this tyme, the aucthorytie and goverment of the Companie, as in the cheife courte, solie remayneth, althoughe they have been lauffullie summoned and warned so to do, to the end that they mighte gyve satisfaccion to the Courte in the premysses, and yet from tyme to tyme do sende there sonnes and servantes to be admytted to the Fredome of this Fellowship, to the losse and detryment of the Company, in their fynes, broaks, dueties, and ymposicions, and otherwise; for reformation whereof, and to thend that the howse maie not susteyne any losse or damage by the aforesaid causes, or at leaste as lytle as maie be, Yt is by the aucthorytie of Mr. Governor and the assistents, with the generallytie in ample number, ordeyned and enacted, That when any brother of this Fellowship shall sende over sonne or servante to be admytted into this freedome of the same, he shalbe bound to make Mr. Governor, or, in his absence, his deputye, or the treasurer of the Fellowship att London, or the Governor or Deputye in the cyttie or towne where he dwelleth, for the tyme beinge, acquainted therewith, and, from them or other of them, bringe a lettre or certyficatte, that he is not indebted unto the Felloshipp for impo[sitions] or other English comoditie whatsoever shipped out unto the abovesaide towne of Embden, or Callaice in France, or unto any parte in Germanie since the departure of those of the Fellowship from Stode* on the xxvijth of January, anno 1597, or any place in the Lowe Countries, or for any other cause by any thinge, which the saide Governor or his deputie or treasurer do knowe, or maye come to knowe of, by the oath or deposycion of the partie requyringe such note or certyficatte, which oath hereby they are athoryshed to requyre and mynister, or yf he be indebted as abovesaide, shall likewise bringe due notice and certyficatte of the same from the saide Governor, his deputie, or treasurer at London, or from the Governor or deputie in the cyttie or towne where he dwelleth for the tyme beinge, and make payment thereof to the treasurer of the Felloshipp on this syde the seas att the cheife courte, or otherwise geve contentment or satisfaccion to the saide courte for the same, att or before the admyssion of such sonne or servante, upon the payne for not bringinge such letter, note, or certyficatte, or not performinge the true content of this order, not to have such sonne or servante admytted before he have broughte such letter, note, or certyficatte, and performed dyrectlie, without fraude and guile, the true meaninge and contents of this order. Actum ut supra Middelburgi me presente.

[signed] J. Wheler, secretarie.

[3 Sep. 1601.]

Forasmuch as there is to be paid unto William Tonge, of London, for damage and charges lately recovered by him against Mr. George Farnabie, late Governour of this Companie, and Roland Tempest, one of the then stewards of the same, the some of lvj^{li}. xiijs. iiij^d; for raysinge and collectinge wherof it is, at this courte, ordered and sett downe, that everie one, free of this Felloshipp, shall upon demaunde, by the beadle, lende and defrey unto this Felloshipp, untill the Companie be able to repay it, the some of twentie shillings; the same to be collected by the said beedle, and whosoever neglect the payment therof, according to this order, shall pay the same duple, and that at the next court day it may appeare who hath then paid and who not.

Forasmuch as greate abuse is thoughte to have heretofor crepte in, by some of the offycers of this Felloshipp, in payment of the ymposicion in Flaunders, which is eighte pounce sterlinge or thereabouts by yeare, and is repaide here after the rate of twentie markes sterlinge, which is excessive allowance for layinge forth so much money, to no lytle damage of this saide Felloshipp and Company. Yt is therfor ordered, &c., That the saide ymposicion money, paide in Flaunders, shalbe repaide here, accordinge as the exchange shalbe on the other syde att duple usance.

* Stade, in the State of Hanover.

[3 Dec. 1601.]

Yt [is] ordered, &c., That there shalbe paide, as money shall aryse in the comon boxe of this saide Fellowship, unto George Lyddell, one of the same Fellowship, in consideracion of greate travell and paynes which he hath taken on the behalfe of this Fellowship in the severall suites, latelie determyned att Yorke, betwene this Company and the townesmen of Carlisle, the some of sixe pounes, thyrteen shillings, and fower pence of lawfull money of England.

[25 March 1601-2.]

It is further ordered, That where at this courte election is made of the said Lionell Greenwell to kepe the Chirnell House of this towne, and to have the benefitt and dueties accustomed, for goods and merchandize sold there, by the like officers his predecessors in the same place, he shall, with convenient speed, enter bonde with two sufficient suerties to kepe this Fellowship of anie suits [sic], damages, or encombrances that can aryse or growe to them or their successors, by anie meanes, for or concerninge anie such goods or merchandize by [him] or his assignes there to be solde betwixt the date of the said bonde, and the ixth day of October then next ensueinge.

generalitie of Merchants Adventurers of Newcastle upon Tyne.

Right worshipfull Sir and Sirs, Wheras ther is divers disorders and abuses committed by sondrie and divers artificers of this towne, as of others unfreemen, by takeinge upp into their houses all such goods as by straungers are brought hither to be sould, which goods are by them not onelie sould but also secretlie conveyed to Morpeth, Alnwick, Hexam, Durham, and other places, to the great preiudice and hurte of the said companie of Merchants of this Fellowship; may it therfor please your worships that I may be admitted and appointed, as your officer in this case, to cause all such goods as by straungers come hither, to be brought to such a place as by your worships shalbe thought meet and convenient, that therbie the Companie may have the benefitt therof and not be defrauded as heretofore they have bene; wherfore if it please you I will not onely reforme and redresse theis former abuses, but also will expell and dryve away all such pedlers which unlawfully do haunte and frequent this towne and markett. Provyded that for my paynes therin you will allow and appoint some yerelie fee or stipende, as shall by your worships be thought meete and convenient for and in the premisses.

Yours to use,

Geo. Brigham.

Yt is ordered, That George Brigham shall, accordinge to the contents of the peticon by him exhibited next abovewritten, have the execucon of what he craveth therin, duringe the pleasure of this Felloship, and have an anuytie or yerely consideracon of three pounds paid unto him by the Companie, for his paynes to be taken in the said place, so longe as it shall please the foresaid Societie to take lykinge of him therin.

Yt is ordered, &c., That ther shalbe collected and gathered of everie one free of this Felloshipe, for and in consideracon of Mr. Wheler his travell and furtherance, heretofor extended towards this Companie, in the causes of the same, the some of three shylinges iiij^d. [per pooll in margin] to be paid unto the beddell upon demande upon paine of vj^s. viij^d., the same to be collected as aforesaid, amountinge to the some of ten poundes sterlinge, to be delivered to Mr. War-mothe and Mr. Claveringe, who are appointed and required to paie over the same at Middlebroughe to the forenamed Mr. Wheler, as also to solicit some causes one the Companie's behalfe, aswell with the States as with the Companie ther.

Ordered, &c., That the fee of thre poundes, formerlie graunted to George Brigham, for gevinge of attendance about goodes, forraine bought and forrane sou[ld], to be forfett, shall from henceforth surceasse and be no more paid by this Felloshipe.

It is ordered, That the parties hereafter named, vizt., Mr. Mathew Chapman, Mr. James Claveringe, Mr. Francis Burrell, Rayffe Cock, Henrye Maddison, Heughe Selbye, Rowland Tempest, and Cuthbert Bewyck, or the moste parte of them, shall before ~~the next court~~ ^{daye} [the seconde daye of November nexte interlined], take speciall care and consideracon of the acte made touchinge the apparrell and behavior of apprentices, and in their discretion sett downe what shalbe thought most fitt for the better restrayninge hereafter, and kepinge in good order, the aforesaid apprentices in their apparells and behavior as appertayneth, as also for the punishmente of thoffenders of the same actes.

Whereas soundrye exceptions was made this daye, against the accompts audited the last yere, for certen payments sett downe by the wardens, and the same found good and fitt to be reformed, therefore it is ordered, &c., That Mr. Francis Anderson shalbe allowed vj^{li}. ij^s., which is one of the exceptions made by the awditors, for monye which he payd for lycence of veniger: Also that Christofer Mytforthe shall repaye the xvj^s. viij^d. which he tooke of the Companie for the some of xij^s. iiij^d. which he lentt to the Easterishe Companie, and iijs. iiij^d. for a sesment lent by him, which is another exception.

Also that the fees for the wardens, clarkes, and bedell of the Easterishe Companie ar allowed, and so ordered to be payd forthe of the Companie's treasurer, and that the wardens shall lawfullye call for the foresaid somes of monye and putt it to accompt.

Where yt appeareth to this Fellowship that George Johnson hath intermedeled and dealtt with Michaell Richardson, a forener, and not fre of the same Felloshipe, in buyeing collorably certen porcion of wyne, contrarie to his oath and duetie in that behalfe formerly taken. And where the said George Johnson alledgeth that he is ignorant of a speciall auntyent acte, made for reformation in such cases, and nowe redd openly unto him, which act, yf the same should be strictlie construed and extended against him, his meane estate considered, the execucion of the said act should be to his overthrowe. And therefore upon his humble submission, yt is ordered this presente daie by the Governour, assistents, wardens, and said Fellowship, that the said act shalbe dyspenced with (onlie) for this cause, and that the said George Johnson shall paie for a fyne xiiij^{li}. vijs. viij^d. to this Fellowship, the same to be paid before anie sonne or apprentice of his shalbe accepted or allowed into the said Fellowshipe.

It is ordered, That thes persons hereunder mencioned shall laie downe some materiall reasons and pointes necessarie to be inserted in a newe charter to be sought for, yf it be thought meet that anie such charter shalbe procured. This to be done indeleyedly, and to make certificat of there opinions and procedings acordinglye.

Whereas, upon deliberat consideracion first had and taken by us, the Governor, assistents, wardens and Fellowship of Merchants Adventurers, inhabitinge within the towne of Newcastle upon Tyne, in the countie of the same towne, that the charter of the said Fellowship should be renewed and enlarged, with suche further addicions or favorable graunts for the generall good and proffitt of the said Fellowship, yf it shall please the King's most excellent Majestie to inclyne therto, suche as shalbe advised and sett downe in certen instructions by wrytinge under the hands of the presente Governor, sixe assistents, and one warden of the said Fellowship at the least, for accomplishinge and effectinge whereof, yt is ordered and agreed by us the said Governor, assistents, wardens, and Fellowship, that Mr. Henrye Chapman, Mr. Thomas Riddell, aldermen, and William Jackson, towne clarck, or anie two or one of them, shall forthwith, at the common charges of this Fellowship and Corporacion, travell and repaire to the King's Majestie's Courte, and elsewhere, and be humble peticoners to His Highnes for and about the procureinge of the said charter to be renewed, most humblie craveinge also confirmation of all former liberties and graunts, by the King's Majestie's most noble progenitors heretofore made and confirmed to this said Fellowship and Corporacion, and for their warrantt in that behalfe one letter of attorney to be indeleyedlie made and confirmed under the sealle of the said Fellowship. And for the further effectinge of the premisses we do order and agree that the said persons shall take with them such charters belonginge this Fellowship, as the said Governor, six assistents, and one warden of the said Fellowship at the leaste shall delyver unto them.

Wheras, in the sixteenth yeare of the raigne of our late soveraigne ladie Quene Elizabeth, deceased, for some speciall reasons and causes toochinge the generall good of this Felloshipp, (wherin her highnes gracious favor beinge craved), yt pleased Her Majestie to grante unto this Felloshipp of Merchants Adventurers, under the greates seale of England, a speciall warrant or lycence to shipp and transporte from hence, unto the partes beyond seas, wooll and woollfells, payinge to Her Majestie's officers in the Custome House here, certen customes and dueties for the same, duringe Her Majestie's pleasure, as is therin more att large conteyned. Nowe forasmuch as, by her highnes death, the same warrant or licence is determyned, it is therefore thought fitt and so ordered, that Mr. Henry Chapman, alderman, one of the brethren of the said Felloshipp, shall have power and aucthorytie, under the seale of this said Felloshipp, to crave and entreate at His Majestie's handes, upon such reasons as the said Mr. Chapman shall laie downe and shewe in that behalfe, That yt wold please His Highnes to grante that the same warrant may be renued and confirmed unto us, under the great seale of England, at the publicke charges of this said Felloshipp. And forasmuch as the said Mr. Chapman is a comyssioner, emongst others, appoynted at the last parliament, to entreat and conferr of some speciall causes toochinge the generall good and peace of both Kingdomes, vizt., England and Scotland, it is thought fitt, and so ordered by the said Felloshipp, That the parties whose names ar hereunder written, shall meete and consult together, some tyme before the said Mr. Chapman's goeing to London, and upon consideracion sett downe with him, what perticuler things they thincke to bee needfull for the said Mr. Chapman to sue for, on the behalfe of the said Felloshipp, or otherwise, as need shall requyre, to make answer to such motions and demands as shalbe offered or made, which he shall thincke maie tend to the hurt of the said Fellowship.

Mr. Thomas Liddell, Mr. Fraunces Anderson, Mr. William Jennison, Mr. William Warmothe, Mr. James Claveringe, Mr. Frances Burrell, Roland Tempest, Raphe Cocke, Hugh Selbie, Robert Bewicke, and the two wardens.

[21 Jan. 1604-5.]

Whereas, by the grant and order of the late Quene Elizabeth, under the privie seale, in the three and thirtieth yeare of her Majesty's raigne, the Fellowship of Merchants of Hull, Exon, and this towne of Newcastle, and other places, had allowance of two shillings in the pound, and every fift cloath for a wrapper, in the custome of their clothes, which allowance being now denyed by His Majestie's customers here, as also the auntyent custome, payable to His Majestie, of woole and woole felles from hence to be transported, albeyt the same is confirmed and by speciall wordes expressed in sundry charters graunted, under the greate seale of England, to the sayd Fellowship here, as well by the sayd late Quene as by the Kinge's Majestie that now is. Upon consideracion whereof ytt is held fytt and so ordered, &c., That Robert Beckwith, one of the brethren of the sayd Fellowship, shall so soone as convenyentlie may be, make his repayre to London, and there or elsewhere, att the charges of the said Fellowship, ioyne with others of the townes and places aforesayd, who have the lyke cause, in petition and humble suit to His Majestie for the confirmacion of the auntyent rates and allowances to be made unto them of the perticuler goodes beforemencioned. And that, for the sayd Robert Beckwith his better proceeding therein, one letter of attorney to be made and confirmed unto him, under the common seale of the sayd Fellowship. Ytt is further ordered, &c., That, for the dyscharge of the sayd Robert Beckwith his expences, and other necessary disbursments in this suit, a present leavy to be made of five shillings per poull, through all the brethren of this sayd Fellowship, to be requyred forthwith and receyved by the bedell, the same to be unto them repayd by the wardens so soone as money shall aryse. And yf any of the sayd Fellowship shall not make payment of the sayd five shillings to the sayd bedell, before Thursday next, then to pay ten shillings to the use of the sayd Fellowship without forgivenes. Also ytt is agreed that warrant shall be geven to the said Robert Beckwith to requyre att London, att the handes of the Governor and Fellowship for Eastland, the some of a hundreth markes, which they owe unto this sayd Fellowship, and upon the receipt theirof to give an acquyttance, and that there shall be allowance made to him for his charges of six shillings, eight pence per day.

Wheras yt hath pleased his Majestie, by his Highnes' proclamation, made here of late, to prohibit all his lovinge subiects and others whatsoever, to shipe or lade into any vessell or barke, within anie porte or haven of his Highnes' Kingdomes, any wooll or wooll felles, to be exported or caried from porte to porte, either openly or privily, upon speciall penaltie therin expressed, as in and by the same proclamacion yt doth and may appeare. Now forasmuch as the observation of the tenor and effect of the same much impeach the charters and liberties granted to the Fellowship of Merchants here, and prejudice the most parte of the bretheren of the said Fellowship in there trade and facultie, yf the wooll of the grouth of theis contries, and skines from hence shipped, be within the compasse and meaninge of the said proclamacion; the same wooll and skines beinge the principall comodities to be had in theis partes, and to be transported beyond seas, and the onely meanes to furnish the adventurers therof with money, to buie forraine comodities, retornable and fitt for this contrie. Yt is therfor thought good, and so ordered, &c., That Mr. Alexander Davison, and Mr. Henry Bowes, two of the bretheren of this Fellowship, and William Jackson, Towne Clerke, shall forthwith travell to London, and there or elsewhere, at the charges of the fore-said Fellowship, become humble petitioners, either to his Majestie, or to the Lords of his Highnes' Privie Counsell, or both, as they or any two of them shalbe advised, that upon the particuler reasons, which they or any two of them shall, on our behalfe, yeild and deliver, his Majestie wilbe pleased to take consideracion of our pore trade and estates, and confirme unto us our ancient priviledges concerninge the primisses, the violacion wherof will greatly tend to the overthrowe of the most parte of the Fellowship, besydes the great hurt, which the contrie hereaboutes will therby susteine for lack of vent and saile of thoes comodities, which theis barren partes doth afforde, and unable them to maintaine ther charge and families. And we doe agree and order that a letter of attorney shalbe made and confirmed, under the seale of the said Fellowshipe, unto the said Mr. Davison, Mr. Bowes, and William Jackson, they or any two of them, to solicit and attend this buissines, and to proceede therin, as by learned counsell they or any two of them shalbe advised; and, that, for there better proceedinges therin, the gentlemen hereunder named, ar required to meete within three daies next, and to geve such reasons and instruccions in this matter, for the further informacion of the parties imployed, as in ther discretions shalbe thought requisite. And yt is further ordered, That a generall levie shalbe forthwith mayed emongest the said Fellowshipe, of tenn shillings the pole for and towards the charges to be expended in and about this buissines, to be repayed as the Companie shalbe able, and that whosoever shall refuse and denie the payment of the same to be debarred of all libertie or priviledge which formerly he or they were capable of, amongst the saide Fellowship, before the makinge of this order, any order or grant to the contrarie therof in any wise notwithstandinge.

Yt is also ordered, That the said Mr. Alexander Davison and Mr.

Henry Bowes, two of the brethren of this Fellowship, and William Jackson, Towne Clerke, shall take into their custodie and charge such grantees or charters belonging to the foresaid Fellowship, as Mr. Governor shall thinke, to be caried to London for the better satisfaction of such as unto whom yt shalbe needfull to shewe the same.

Mr. Francis Burrell, Mr. William Hall, Mr. Alexander Davison, Thomas Clerksonn, Henry Bowes, John Milbancks, Michael Kirkley, Jacob Fernesyde.

Upon consideration of the present state of the buisines laitle committed by this Fellowship to William Jackson, his sollicitacion to his Majestie and the Lordes of the Counsell, tooching the transportation from hence of wooll and wooll felles, of which his Highnes and said Counsell have taken notice, and therupon divers references have been made, as also hearinges, and no conclusion or ende given therunto, but deferred till Candlemes tearme next, as ys this day understoode by the relacion of the said William Jacksonn. Yt is therfor thought fytt, and so ordered, by the Governor and whole Fellowship, That so soone as convenientlie may be, humble suite shalbe made and continued at the comon charge of this Fellowship to the Lordes of his Highnes most honorable Privie Counsell, for the effectinge of the said buisines, accordinge to former instruccions given in that behalfe; and for that purpose the said William Jackson is required to take upon him soly the same, unto whose honest care and endeavour the matter ys wholly referred; and for his better warrant in that behalfe one letter of attorney shalbe made and confirmed unto him under the seale of the said Fellowship.

Yt is also ordered that the whole charge and burden of this particuler cause, which shall anie waie rise or growe tooching the same, shalbe hereafter raised, levied, and taken, at the discretion of the said Fellowship, forth of such wooll or wooll felles as shalbe from tyme to tyme shipped from hence, by any of the said Fellowship, to be duly payed (by the owners of the same) to the stewardest of the said Societie, for the tyme beinge, at the shippinge therof; and that the moneys so levied and taken to be restored and repaide to every person of the said Fellowship in equall manner, accordinge to there disbursments, who have or shall in the meane tyme paie and laie forth the charges requisit and necessarie to be expended, for and about the sollicitacion of the said suite.

After our very hartly comendacions. Wheras the maisters of the Trinitie House of that towne of Newcastle have heretofore complained tooching a duetie of primage deteyned from them by the merchants for these three yeares last past, which we have caused to be examined by Sir Henry Yelverton, knight, his Majestie's Attorney Generall, and that by his certificate it appeareth, that both parties havinge bene often before him, and the differences on both sides hard and debated at large, which was for threepence demaunded by the said masters of every last of corne brought into that porte by the merchants of Newcastle, as a duetie for primage. You shall nowe understande that both the saide parties first consentinge to abide his awarde, it was thought fitt by him, and is accordinglie allowed, ordered, and ratified by this board, viz., that the saide merchants of Newcastle shall henceforth paye to the said maisters of the Trinitie House, and their successors, for every last of corne brought into that porte, or the creekes or members therof, by the saide merchants there, three halfe pence [only interlined] and no more, because they maye not be discouraged to bringe in so great a comoditie for the good of the kingedome; which saide some of three halfe pence shalbe paied upon the delivery of the saide corne; as also that they shall make satisfaccion unto them for every last that they have brought in for the space of one yeare and a halfe last past, after the same rate of three halfe pence the last and no more. And that the saide merchants shall paie for all other merchandize, from henceforth brought in there, after threepence the last, as heretofore they have paied. But to all others not beinge free merchants inhabitinge in the saide towne, it is thought fitt, that they paie threepence for every last of corne, as well as other goods, as formerly they have paied. This beinge nowe the finall order of this board upon the differences aforementioned, wherunto both parties have consented, we hope their shalbe no further occacion of complaint. In which case nevertheles we do will and requier you to be aydinge and assistinge from tyme to tyme, by your authority, unto the parties that shalbe justly greived, and to see this order fully and duly executed, accordinge to the true meaninge therof, for which purpose you shall cause the same to be registered, that it maye remaine and appeare as an acte of this table, as well to you that are the present magistrats, as to your successors. And so we bidd you very hartely farewell, from Whitehall, this xvijth of November, 1617.

Wheras an humble petition was this daye exhibited to the board, in the name of the Merchaunt Adventurers of the towne of Newcastle upon Tyne, shewing that about three yeares since, upon informacion of the settinge upe of cloathing and drapery in the United Provinces, and the exportacion of great quantities of wooll into those partes, the supplicants were prohibited to cary out anye wooll or woollfells, as they had formerly done by vertue of severall charters, ancientlye granted to their corporacion, under the great seale of England, and which, upon mature advice and deliberacion, were confirmed unto them in her late Majesty's name, and likewise specially saved by provisoes in severall acts of Parliament made for restraint of exportacion in that kinde. To which prohibicion the petitioners havinge (as in duetie they ought) redilye conformed themselves, thoughe to their extreame losse and preiudice, and without anye materiall good effect of keepinge the fells within the kingdome, which nevertheles have bene exported by the merchants of Scotland, and caryed to the same places where the peticoners have used to vent the same, though yt be not there meaninge to give the least preiudice at all to the cloathing of the kingdome, or exporte either woolls or fells of heigh groweth, yet they make humble instance for lycense to transporte onlye such fells of lowe groweth as are gathered within the liberties granted to the petitioners, betwixt Michaelmes and Shrovetide, and are not fitt for cloathing, which is the rather desired, aswell for reparacion of the losses they have susteined dureinge this late restraint, amountinge, as they affirme, to 12,000^{li}. and upewards, as for the maintenance of navigacion and shippinge, which the petitioners have ever had and imployed to the good service of the kingdome.

There lordships upon deliberacion therof, in regarde the matter was of consequence, thought fitt, for the better preparacon of the same for a second hearinge, when the Lord Treasurer might be present, who was nowe absent, to order that Sir Thomas Lake, and Sir Robert Naunton, knights, his Majesty's principall Secretaries of State, Sir Fulke Grevill, knight, Chancelor of his Majesty's Exchequer, Sir Julius Cesar, knight, Master of the Rolles, and Sir Edward Coke, knight, or anie three or more of them, should call before them such of the peticoners as are nowe heare in towne, together with some such of the Merchant Adventurers of London as they shall thinke fitt, and take into their consideracion the petition of the saide merchants, and upon due informacion of the state of the cause, certifie their Lordships their opinion of the same, that such further order maye be taken as shalbe meete.

Lo. Zouche.	Sir Edward Coke.

Wheras the Merchants Adventurers of the towne of Newcastle upon Tyne have bene humble suitors unto this board, That foras-much as about three yeares past, upon informacion of the settinge upe of cloathing and drapery in the United Provinces, and exportacion of great quantities of wooll into those partes, the saide petitioners were prohibited to carye out wooll and woollfells; notwithstandinge that the saide libertye was auncientlie granted unto their corporacion by charters under the great seale of England, and confirmed unto them, in her late Majestie's tyme, by a speciall instrument under the seale of the Exchequer, and also saved unto them by speciall provisoes in severall acts of Parlament, heretofore made for the restraint of caryinge out wooll out of this realme. By which prohibicion they have bene greatlie preiudiced and damnified, and yett thend for which the saide restraint was at that tyme made not attayned unto, for that the fells have bene since bought up by the merchants of Scotland, and transported to the places where the petitioners have used to vent the same: That therfore their lordships wold be pleased, by an order of this board, to release them of the saide restraint or prohibicion, so farr forth as to geve them license and libertie to export onlie such fells of lowe groth as are gathered betwene Michaelmes and Shrovetide within the places assigned for that purpose by their charter or acte of Parlament, that is to saye, the counties of Northumberland, the countie of the towne of Newcastle, Cumberlande, Westmerland, Bishoprick of Durham, the liberties of Richmond and North Allerton sheire; which fells are not fitt for makinge of cloath. It pleased their lordships hereupon to referr the consideracion of their humble suite unto Sir Thomas Lake, and Sir Robert Naunton, knights, his Majestie's principall secretaries, Sir Fulke Grevill, knight, Chancelor of his Majestie's Exchequer, Sir Julius Cesar, knight, Master of the Roolles, and Sir Edward Coke, knight, one other of his Majestie's most honorable Previe Counsell, who, accordinge to their lordships' direccions, callinge before them such of the petitioners as were nowe hereabouts and some of the Marchants Adventurers of London, did, upon due informacion of the state of the cause, and with the consent and good likinge of the saide Merchants Adventurers of London, forsomuch as the matter had anie relacion to their trade, certifie unto their lordships their opinion that they held the petition to be modest, just, and reasonable. And that wheras the statute gave them libertye to transporte woolls as well as fells, of the groweth of those contries, if they were now permitted to transporte such fells onlie as were of the groweth aforesaide and gathered betwene Michaelmes and Shrovetyde, there could not in their opinions anie inconvenience happen therupon; which reporte, their lordships also well approvinge, for the reasons aforemencioned, and in favor of the petitioners, doe geve allowance, and order that yt shalbe lawfull for them henceforth to transporte such woollfells of lowe groweth, and gathered in that season, within the counties and liberties aforesaide, untill their appear unto the state anie further cause againe to restraine the same. And the Lord Treasurer of England to geve order and direccions accordinglie unto the officers of that porte, to suffer them to transporte such fells, anye former prohibicion to the contrary notwithstandinge. Provided that under coullor hereof they do not transporte anye woolls nor anie fells, other then before is mencioned, and hereby allowed, wherein the officers are to be stricktlye charged, by the Lord High Treasurer of England, to be very carefull that no such abuse be comitted.

After my harty comendacions: Upon the petition of the Merchants Adventurers of that towne of Newcastle, latelie exhibited unto the lords of his Maiesties Previe Counsell, for license to buye and transporte fells of lowe groweth, which are gathered betwene Michaelmas and Shrovetyde, within the counties of Northumberland, towne of Newcastle, Cumberland, Westmerland, Bishoprick of Durisme, Richmondshires and Northallerton, mencioned in a former charter granted unto them. Their lordships, after due consideracion of their saide suite, have yeilded therunto, and geven me order to writt unto you to permitt and suffer the same to be done accordinglie. Wherefore I have, for your better informacion in your proceedings toochinge this buisines, sent you herein closed a copie of their lordships' saide order, requiringe you to see the same observed and kept in all things as apperteineth; for which this shalbe your warrant. And so I bid you farewell. Suffolke House, the xvth of Maye, 1618,

Your lovinge frend,
[No name].

To my lovinge frends the officers and fermers' deputies for his maiesties customes in the porte of Newcastle upon Tyne.

Wheras, at a generall courte holden the fowerth day of June last, yt was ordered, &c., That Mr. James Claveringe, Mr. William Hall, Mr. Alexander Davison, Mr. Robert Bewick, Michaell Kirkley, Henry Bowes, Jacob Ferneside, Thomas Wynn, and John Milbancks, or any five, fower, or three of them, with the two wardens, or thone of them, shold mete together, and take into there knowledge, what some or somes of money the said company was indebted and oweinge, and upon such veiwe to make reporte and retorne an abstract therof at the next generall courte to be held for the said Company, together with there opinyons how and in what manner and fashon moneyes might be raised for the discharge of the said debts. All which moneys to be collected and gathered at the end of every moneth, next after the fynishinge of this act; and what brother should refuse to pay the same ymposicions, upon demand therof made by either of the wardens of this Company for the tyme beinge, should pay the same duple without forgiveness. The which there reporte and opinyons, the said Mr. Claveringe and the rest of the comyttees before named did retorne, as they were required, to the Company at there next generall courte, holden this present xxjth day of July, 1618, aforesaid, which was then and there openlye published and redd, and upon the publishinge therof, before the risinge of the said courte, it is now by a full and generall consent agreed, and so enacted, that the said reporte so made by the aforenamed comittees, as aforesaid, shall stand firm and stable, and be and contynue the deed and acte of the said Company, untill such tyme as all the debts of this said Felloshipp, before in theis presents recited, be fullie paid and discharged. And that every brother offendinge herein, or violatinge this acte, shall pay for a broge or fyne to the said Company the some of fyve poundes, for every severall offence he shall comytt, in not makinge payment of the ymposicions as before is sett downe.

Also at the said courte yt is enacted and ordered, by general consent, That yf any suite shalbe hereafter comensed against Henry Whitfeild, a brother and sergeant also of the said Company, or against the present Governor and wardens, or any of them, for the distreyninge, seizinge, or takinge away of stockings, or [anye interlined] other goodes, [wares, or marchaundize interlined] from certen pedlers, ordynarilie sellinge wares and merchandize on the Sandhill, as were latlie so taken there from some of them, the charge therof shalbe borne and defreyed by this said Felloshipp, and they and every of them therbie freed and saved harmles for the same.

And further, That yf the Governor, wardens, or Serjeant of this said Company, or any brother of the same, for the tyme beinge, shall, at any tyme hereafter, by direccion of the Governor and wardens of this said Felloshipp, take, seize, or distreyne any wares of any pedlers sellinge the same ~~unlawfully~~ on the Sandhill as aforesaid, then that they and every of them shalbe saved harmless by this said Felloshipp, and the charge of every or any suite which shall happen therbie to be borne and defreyed by this said Company.

Right worshipfull and welbeloved : findeing that most men from all places have of late sent their sonns and servaunts to be admitted into the freedome of this Fellowship, without a note from the secretary at Hambr.; whatt charges, brooks, or arrearages their fathers or maisters doe owe unto the House, which indeed ought to be answered and paid before the admission of such sonne or servaunt, and that, by reason hereof wee maie committ some errour and oversight in admitting such as are nott capeable of the freedome, and also for thatt itt hath brought much trouble unto our tresurer, and great intricacie in our accompts, which for want thereof cannott be charged with the dewtyes dew unto our Fellowship, butt divers matters must be left open and uncleared. Wee have therefore, for the preventing of the abovesaid inconvenienciez, att a generall courte there holden, le 30th presente, resolved that no sonne or servaunt of anie man, of what place soever, shall from henceforeward be admitted or received into the freedome of this Fellowship, before he have procured his saide charges from Hambrough, which wee thought good to acquaint you withall, that you might signifie the same unto ~~year~~ [the interlined] breethren there with you, and in your neighbour townes, namlie, Hull and York, that none send over their sonnes or servaunts for their freedome, before they have procured such a note, or els they will loose their labour, unles they will lye here at charges untill they can procure the same. And whereas you suppose, as we understand by your letter of the 31th Januarij, 1617, that we cold take such a course that you might be eased of that trouble and charge, for that you thinke wee have an abstract of all proceedings and charges of the breethren of this Fellowship, you are to take notice thatt all those books [are] att the cheife courte, which is now att Hambr.; and therefore we cannot in the least ease you or pleasure you herein, which otherwais we wold willinglie have donne. And thus nott haveinge wherewith further to enlarge att this tyme, wee end with our verie hartie commendacions, and committ you and all your affaires to the gracious guideing and proteccion of the Almightye. Middlebr. 31 Martij, &c., 1619.

Yours the deputie assistents and generalitye of the Fellowship of Marchaunts Adventurers.

Edward Bennet, Deputy.

To the right worshipfull the Governour, Assistents, and Fellowship of Marchaunts
Adventurers in Newcastle.

[26 May 1619.]

Whereas some fower yeares since, upon informacion made of the setting upp of clothing and draperie in the Unyted Provinces, and the exportacion of great quantities of wooll into those partes, his Majestie was pleased by his Highnes' proclamacion, bearing date in September, 1614, to prohibitt all his loveing subiects and others whatsoever to shipp or lade into anie vessell or barke, within any port or haven of his Highnes' kingdomes, anie wooll or wooll fells, to be exported or carried from port to port, either openlie or privilie, upon speciall penaltie therein expressed, as in and by the same proclamacion itt doth and may appeare; to which prohibicion this Fellowship, (as in dewtie they ought), though to their extreame losse, did readily conforme themselves, notwithstanding they have formerlie shipped great quantities of wooll and wooll fells, by vertue of severall charters aunciently graunted unto them, under the great seale of England, and also by the authoritie of severall provisoes confirmed upon mature deliberacion, in severall acts of Parliament: since which restraint, by severall petitions, this Company became humble sutors to the Lords of his Majestie's most honourable Privie Counsell, for lycence to transport onlie such fells of lowe growth, as are gathered in the liberties granted to this Fellowship, betwixt Michaelmas and Shrovetide, itt pleased their lordshipps hereupon to referre the consideracion of their humble suite unto Sir Thomas Lake, Sir Robert Naunton, knights, his Majestie's Secretaries of State, Sir Fulke Grevill, knight, Chauncelor of his Majestie's Exchequer, Sir Julius Cæsar, knight, Master of the Rolls, and Sir Edward Cooke, knight, one other of his Majestie's most honourable Privie Counsell, who, according to their lordshipps' direccions, callinge before them such of the petitioners as were now hereabouts, and some of the Marchaunts Adventurers of London, did, upon due informacion of the state of the cause, and with the consent and good likeing of the said Marchaunts Adventurers of London, forsomuch as the matter hadd any relacion to their trade, certifie unto their lordshipps their opinion that they held the petition to be modest, just, and reasonable, and thatt, whereas the statute gave them libertie to transport woolls, as well as fells, of the growth of those countreyes, if they were now permitted to transport such fells only as were of the growthe afforesaid, and gathered between Michaelmas and Shrovetide, their cold nott, in their opinions, any inconvenience happen thereupon; which report their lordshipps, also well approving for the reasons affore mencioned, and in favor of the peticoners, doe give allowance and order that itt shalbe lawfull for them henceforth to transport such wooll fells, of low growth, and gathered in that season, within the liberties affore mencioned, untill there appeare unto the state anie further cause again to restrain the same: Itt is therefore enacted, &c., That if any brother of the foresaid Fellowship hereafter shall shipp anie wooll or wooll fells, or buy any wooll or wooll fells, contrarie to the order of the Lordes of his Majestie's most honourable Privy Counsell, before mencioned, shall be and remain (ipso facto), from henceforth, utterlie disfranchised from his freedome of this Fellowship of Marchants, and nott receive any benifitt of his freedome in this said Fellowship.

Att a courte holden the seaventh of September last, William Skepper, apprentice to Mr. Robert Bewick, one of the bretheren of our Companey, then preferred a petition, wherein hee desired that his master, according to his promisse made to the peticoner's father, deceased, might bee entreated by this Companey to imploy the petitioner in the trade of merchandize beyond the seaes, or to give him liberty, att his owne charge, to repaire thether, to gaine language and experience in the trade of merchandize, duering the tearme of three yeares or thereabout of his apprentishipp as yet unexpired, as also to suffer him to have the factorye of such bretheren of this Society in Newcastle, as would imploy him. Upon reeding and debating of the said petition, the said master and servant beeing then both present in courte, it was by the courte then ordered that Mr. Bewick would bee pleased to give answer thereunto the next courte holden by the Fellowship of Merchants their; and likewise, att a courte holden the 13th day of December, 1627, the foresaid William Skepper did by a second petition then made to the Companey, make it appeare that, since the order made the 7th day of September, Mr. Bewicke, his master, att the request of some freind of the said William Skepper, was well pleased and content to grante and condisend unto what hee had desired in his former petition, provided that the said Mr. Bewick might have such consideracion for parting with his said apprentice for the tearme unexpired, as by fower indeferent persons, with one to be humpire, might bee thought fitt, which persons were to bee nominated by the Companey. In which petition the said William Skepper desired the Governor, assistents, and generallity then present, to take this his request into their consideracions, what he should give unto his said master for his free consent to bee had herein, which the Governor and Companey, according to the master his consent, and the desire of the peticoner and his freinds, did conferr thereof. And att a courte holden the 17th day of December, afforesaid, with the consent and approbacion of the said Mr. Bewick, were nominated and appointed by the Governor, assistents, and generallity of this Fellowship of Merchants Adventurers, Sir Peter Riddell, knight, Mr. William Warmoth, Mr. James Clavering, and Raphe Carr, and if they should not agree, then Sir Thomas Riddell, knight, to bee humpire, and to report att the next courte what composecion they thinke fitt to bee given by the said William Skepper to his said master, for his liberty in the premisses, and to returne their report att or before the 12th day of January next ensewing, which was performed by the said comitties, and reported att a courte holden the 4th day of January then next following, which was, that Mr. Bewick, his master, shall permitt and suffer his said apprentice, William Skepper, to have liberty as is required in the petitions; and for the master his grante and free consent therein, the said apprentice shall forthwith pay to his said master 26^{li}. 13^s. 04^d., which maketh upp the some formerly [paid] to his master att his bynding 66^{li}. 13^s. 4^d. And further, that if att any tyme, in the tearme of his yeares yet induring, his master shall have occasion to imploy this petitioner, in the place where hee shall make choise to live beyond the seas, in the trade of merchandize, that then this peticoner shall doe his master the best service hee cann, allowing to the said William Skepper such factorige as is used in such ymployments. Upon reeding of which report in courte the said Mr. Bewick was well satisfied and contented therewith, but desired that the said apprentice should not use his creditt beyond sea, and take upp moneys or commodities in his name, without his order, hee beeing lyable, as then hee alledged, to pay the same. Whereunto the said apprentice, beeing present then in courte, answered that hee could not give such sufficient bond as his master would require herein, did request that, whereas his master had noe other particuler but that to detaine and withould him from his ymployment beyond sea, that his master would bee content, and the courte bee pleased to grante him tyme untill the next courte day to make choise of a new master, which hee hoped would bee a meanes to free his said master of any hurt or preiudice to be donne therein by him; which request the courte did conseive to bee honest and reasnable, and thereupon did aske Mr. Bewick if hee were pleased and content that his apprentice should make choise of another master, which hee consented unto and agreed, and thereupon the companey did soe order the same. Now by the generall consent of this present courte, holden the 15th day of January, as before, and with the approbacion and good liking of his master, Mr. Robert Bewick, the said William Skepper hath made choise of Thomas Butler, a free brother of this Companey, and to him is att the same courte sett over to serve out the residue of his yeares of apprentishipp yet unexpired, with the said Thomas Butler, by the consent of the said Mr. Bewick, and the said William Skepper hath, according to former order, made payment unto the said Mr. Bewick in open courte of the some of forty markes, which his said master hath received, and doth acknowledge himselfe therewith fully satisfied, and hath engaged himselfe by promisse to this Companey, upon the receipt of the said some of forty markes, that hee will, according to covenant in his indenture made to the said William Skepper, make his said apprentice free, both here and beyond the seas, of all such companeyes as hee is capable, att the end and expiracion of his yeares of apprentishipp, contayned in his indenture of apprentishipp. And for that if any questions shall arrise hereafter betweene the said Mr. Bewick and late apprentice, William Skepper, the Governor, assistants, and Fellowship have caused the same to be made an acte, and registred in their booke of acts, and required the Governor to signe the same, as an acte of the Companey, and to bee certified at any tyme if the said Mr. Bewick or William Skepper shall require the same.

[Signed] Alexander Davyson, Governor.

Richard Hedworth petitioned for some reasonable satisfaction for his paynes which he hath takn in discoveringe the incroachers of our priviledges—answer referred till next court day.

A stronge motion was made about the newe imposition imposed by occasion of the great suite with those of London,* that seinge the same was brought to a stand, as the Companie supposeth, that therefore the Company might hereafter bee eased of the said impost, but the wardens alledged that the same cold not bee done till the Company was free of ingagement for moneys borrowed thereanent. Howsoever after long dispute it was with generall consent agreed that

Mr. Henry Lawson,	Mr. Henry Holme,
Mr. Leonard Carr,	Mr. Chr. Nicholson, senior, wardens' accounts, and that betwixt and Candlemas Day next, and at the next court after to signifie unto the said court what necescitie there may bee of the continuance of the same longer, upon which report the Company is to order as they shall see cause.

[11 June 1640.]

[Thomas Carr, late apprentice to Thomas Win, deceased, formerly turned over to Robert Arrowsmith, deceased] agreed and consented to serve forth the residew of his yeares to William Car (as was made knowne by some of the Company) before he departed for Eastland; though he now was absent it was condiscended that his absence should not prejudice him herein [and he was accordingly turned over to Carr].

[John Tomlinson, formerly turned over to Nicholas Cole] in regard his turninge over was supposed to be only under colour, [warned to appear at next court].

Whereas diverse brethren of this Company were importunate to have repaid unto them such moneys as they had formerly lent this Fellowship, the wardens alledged the same cold not be done unlesse the impositions behind were paid in; on the contrary some of the Company complained much of the greatnes and inequality of the new sesse, and withall desired that the accounts of the wardens might be perused, to see whether there were a necessity of the continuance of that sesse, yea or no, which was thought fittinge; howsoever all men were charged to pay in such impositions as they were behind before the next court, otherwise to pay doble.

The principal documents relating to this dispute will be found in the section which follows the present one, and the whole subject is dealt with in the second part of the Preface.

Richard Hedworth next court day to have an absolute end what he shall have concerninge his paines in the Companie's service.

[No meeting was held between Oct. 9, 1640 and Oct. 9, 1641.]

[15 Oct. 1641.]

Whereas the said Edward Archer [an apprentice admitted to freedom at this court] did not come within one yeare and a day after the expiration of his yeares, to receive his freedome, by which neglect, according to the stricktnes of the acte of the Company, he was liable to the fine of ten pounds, yet in regard there hath beene a discontinuance of courts, duringe the abode of the Scottish Armye here, and so no default in him, he was wholly freed of the said fine; and it is further ordered that, in regard of the sunderance of the said courte, all apprentizes that are delinquents in that kind, and not otherwise, shalbee likewise acquitted from the aforesaid penalty. And further, that all other apprentizes whose indentures are not inrowled, through default of the aforesaid courts in the aforesaid tyme, and for no other cause, that they and every of them shalbee inrowled as formerly they have beene, notwithstanding any former act or order made to the contrary.

Elizabeth Crooke, widow, late wife of John Crooke, a brother of this Fellowship, who died prisoner, and did leave the said Elizabeth in great poverty, and in regard she is indebted for his funerall expence, though this Company bee in greate dept, they ordered the wardens to give unto her fortie shillings.

Richard Hedworth, a brother of this Fellowship, who, since the begininge of August, 1639, hath beene appointed to take notice of all that doe intrench upon the priviledges of this Fellowship, and accordingly hath informed this Company of diverse persons so offendinge, for which hitherto he had only fortie shillings, and this day, in regard of the same, and in hope that hereafter he wilbee every day more and more diligent therein, the wardens of this Fellowship are this day ordered to pay unto him the some of five pounds more; and he is ordered and appointed att all tymes, upon occasion of the discovery of such offenders, to repayre to the wardens, and to acquaint them instantly thereof, and therein to follow their advice, in all which the Company doth expect his speciall diligenc and faithfulness, that hereafter the Company may reape more benefitt of his employment then hitherto they have done.

John Bags of London, merchant, who at this present resides in this towne, was complayned upon as a man that greatly offended against the priviledges of this Company, in his greate trade; and also Thomas Wilson, servant to Mr. John Clavering, alderman, and a brother of this Fellowship, that he had much commission goods, and sold them, as well to straungers as free men, as well by retaile as in grosse, and it was ordered that the wardens of this Fellowship shold repayre to the said Mr. Claveringe, and advize him to take course that his servant offend not hereafter in that kind, and in case he shall not accordingly take care therein, that then this said Fellowship will therein take a speedy course for the remidieng thereof.

[An apprentice to Ralph Cock is enrolled.] Though his former apprentice, John Atkinson, had not served fully three yeares, so that the said Mr. Raph Cock cold not have taken this apprentice without a greate fine, yett in regard he hath beene a good benefactor to this Company he only payd 10s.

Whereas the auditors reported that the Company was still indebted a great som of money, and that the brethren of this Company and others (who formerly had in the tyme of our neede lent their moneys towards the charges of the greate suite with the Merchant Adventurers of London) are earnest to have their said moneys repaid, which is thought most equall, for the future incouradgement of them and others in such like cases, and whereas, for the raisinge of the same, itt was formerly ordered by this Fellowship that there shold bee an imposition upon the powle of every free man of this Company, as also new impositions upon the merchandize exported and imported, and the same to continue till the charge was defraidd, itt is this day ordered, &c., that all impositions whatsoever, new or old, by powle or otherwise, that are arreare and behinde to this Fellowship be paid in to the wardens of this Company before the next court day, or att furthest whensoever they shalbee demaunded by the wardens, or either of them, and in case that any brother so indepted refuse to pay the same, that he shall pay them doble.

Robert White, a brother of this Fellowship, showed a letter from William Johnson, writt from Rotterdam, that his absolute freedome was there withstoode, in regard of his mariadge within terme, whereupon itt is ordered that a new certificate bee sent on his behalfe.

[William Blackett, apprentice to William Sherwood, was "set over" to Joane Carr, "a sister"] though great complaints were against him in regard of livinge with Michall Dawson, a straunger, not free of this Company.

[Thomas Carr, apprentice to Thomas Win, admitted on his petition, he having then two years and two months to serve, and he paying a fine of £66, 13s. 4d.] upon his miscariadges and great tradinge in the tyme of his apprentishipp, and upon the yeares not expired.

[4 Feb. 1641-2.]

Upon greate complaint made, that in regard of ill appearance (att all courts) of assistants, itt often hapneth through the want of a full number of assistants there cannot bee a complet court, so that the Governour and others of the Company meetinge, not only loose their tyme, but the Companeye's affaires are much neglected, to the preiudice of the said Fellowship; and whereas it was alledged that Mr. John Blakiston, one of the assistants for this yeare, beinge now one of our burgesses for Parliament, wee cannot in all probability, by reason of that his imployment, expect any good service from him in this his place of assistant, wherefore it is by generall consent, &c., ordered &c., that the said Mr. John Blakiston shalbee removed from beinge assistant, and Mr. William Carr is by like consent chozen assistant in his steade, untill the next day of eleccion.

Thomas Car, who had at the former court paid for a fyne £66, 13s. 4d., now petitioninge for grace, in regard his father only neglected to take upp his freedome, beinge the son of a freeman, as also that his mother is lately dead, by whose death the said Thomas hath a greate losse, itt is ordered that the said Thomas Car shall have returned of his fyne the some of £16, 13s. 4d.

Whereas motion was made concerninge the dept of the Company in generall, and in speciall what mony is owinge for any money borrowed for the maintenance of the greate suite with the Londoners, or interest dew for the same, and that there was different reports concerninge the same, it's ordered and agreed that Mr. John Emerson [with eight others] and the two wardens, or any four or more of them, conferr with Mr. Henry Lawson, George Dawson, William Car, and Christopher Nicolson, to see what is truly owinge by every brother for impositions untill Christmas, 1640, and they are to report whether the same amount to the clearinge of the aforesaid dept, yea or no, and this to bee done before the next court day.

All those breethren that were appointed to peruse the wardens' accounts concerninge the new imposition imposed upon the trade, to continue till charge of that suite was defrayed, the moneys borrowed for the manadginge thereof with the interest of the same discharged, and appearing this day that one hundreth pounds will hardly discharge the same, itt is this day ordered, &c., that the said imposition shall continue to be collected of all the brethren of this Fellowship untill Christmas, 1642.

And that the wardens shall forthwith demaunde the same and all other arreares of impositions dew to the Company, and if any brother of this Fellowship shall refuse to pay the same, that the said impositions shalbe doubled upon his account without favour, and this the wardens are to prosecute with all carefulnes and expedition, that both those brethren that freely lent their moneys for so good a work may bee satisfied, and that this Company bee freed out of all dept.

A letter from Mr. Anthony Errington, senior, a brother of this Company, was showne by Mr. Governor, and redd, intymating that wee were indepted to Mrs. Greenwell twenty eight pounds, which was ordered to be paid by the wardens.

[6 Oct. 1642.]

Richard Swan presented John Butler as an offendor, for that, without his consent, he had in his name entred 270 carseis, which was referred till further prooffe to the next court.

[27 Oct. 1642.]

Richard Swan complained of a wrong done him by John Butler for entring some cloth in his name. The difference was referred to be examined by Mr. Henry Lawson [and five others], or any foure of them, who are to make report thereof to the court.

George Dobson is to have allowed him againe 5^s. [forfeited for absence], in regard he was imployed at the tyme about the King's affaires.

Richard Hedworth petitioned the Company for their assistanc and support, and to consider his present necessity, and therefore, and for his former service to the Company, it was agreed that the wardens shold give unto him the some of five pounds.

[19 Jan. 1642-3.]

Att a Court of the Company of Merchant Adventurers, summoned upon five shillings fyne this afternoone,

Assone as the Court was full,

Mr. Governour declared that the principall occasion of this court was att the instance of Sir John Marley, present Mayor and Deputy Governour, who had ~~informed him~~ [declared in guild interlined] that in regard of the disappointment of the countyes of Northumberland and Bishopricke, in their promisse of their assistance to beare part of the charge of this garrison, the charge had beene very greate, and that all the moneys that Mr. Mayor had raised formerly were disbursed, and Mr. Mayor knew not how to continue the garrison, unlesse the towne did afford him a new and liberall supply, for which end, as he understood, Mr. Mayor had likewise moved all other companies in towne, and so hoped that to their abilityes they wold be forward to so a good a worke.

Then Mr. Mayor himselfe spoke, and intimated that Mr. Governor had ~~forgett~~ [omitted interlined] the mayne part of his ~~instructions~~ [speech in guild interlined], and that was that the town's garrison was neare three weekes behind in pay, that the summe was about 900^{li}., that there was a necessity of present moneyes, that he cold not for present be supplied by our noughburing countyes, but that for their ease in future he hoped to procure moneyes thence, and professed that also he wold sollicite the Queene's Majestie in the behalfe of the town, and was confident he shold gett assistanc from her Majestie, withall intimating that something must be done for her incuradgement, but expresly alledging that this present occasion for money was such that he must have assistanc from them, which he desired rather might bee freely, then that he shold bee necesitated to take any extreame course, withall expressing it was but a lone. Thereupon he concluded saying, Gentlemen, I will leave you to consider of what I have said. It may bee you wilbee more free in my absenc in the expressing of your myndes, and what you shall so lend you shall have the royall faith for repayment, and it wilbee graciously accepted of by the King's Majestie.

Then Mr. Governor moved the Company to declare whether they were willing to contribute as was desired, yea or no. It was ~~agreed~~ [expressed interlined] unanimously they were, not one contradicting.

Then (qu:) whether they wold bee sessed by Mr. Mayor, or appoint some of the Company to bee assessors.

The vote was for a comittee of the Company.

Then they desired Mr. Governor, and Sir Alexander Davison, to goe downe to Mr. Mayor to know what some he expected from this Company, whereupon they went.

Mr. Governor returning told us that Mr. Mayor expected a very greate some from this Company, and greater then cold possibly be raised, as was supposed, but told us that Mr. Mayor left it wholly to us.

So it was argued much what some the Company wold pitch upon, and so putt to votes, whereupon by generall consent, not one contradicting, five hundred pounds was voted to be lent, so Mr. Governor and Sir Alexander Davison went againe to Mr. Mayor to acquaint him what som was agreed upon, which they told us Mr. Mayor well approved. Thereupon it was agreed that so much as cold bee well spared out of the Companeye's cash shold be disbursed, and the rest to bee levied of all the members of the Companies whatsoever, where there was a possibility to levy the same. And for this end were chosen for assessors of the Company Mr. Raph Gray, Mr. John Emerson, Mr. Mark Milbanke, and Mr. Thomas Blenkinsopp. The wardens and Secretary were ordered to assiste them. And because the assessors shold not assess themselves, it was ordered that William Carr, George Dawson, Raph Jenison and Robert White shold bee assessors of them.

They were to meete in the Court at eight of the clock next morning.

The Assesment of the Company by the aforesaid assessors upon such persons as itt is supposed Mr. Mayor by his power might possibly levy :—

[9 Feb. 1642-3.]

Whereas diverse persons were assessed for the five hundred pounds lone, and Mr. Mayor pressed to have the 150^{li.}, remaining, otherwise protested to pay back the 350^{li.}, and wold gett what he cold of the Company one by one, itt was therefore putt to hands, in regard many were behind with their sesse, whether if they did not pay in their sesse in tyme, it shold not bee doubled, whereupon it was voted and so ordered, that whosoever did not pay in his said sesse before one of the clock to morrowe, shold pay double.

And to prevent inconvenienc to the Company in case moneys come not in, it was desired some brother of the Company wold bee pleased for interest to furnish the Company with what was needfull for the making upp of the said some of five hundred pounds; and so Mr. Thomas Davison profered to doe it, which was well accepted by the Company.

It's motioned that every brother of this Company bee sumoned to give in a note of the armes he hath, to Mr. Thomas Davison.

Thomas Wetherall, a brother of this Fellowship, presented for keeping a shopp at Stockton.

[Robert Iley, apprentice to Sir Thomas Lyddell] desires to be turned over to serve the residue of his tyme to a brother of this Company. It is ordered that he shall not have leave to chuse a new master, but his service to King and Parliament, wherein he was imployed, shalbe no preiudice to him, nor his master's disfranchisement.

Ordered, &c., to send halfe a tunn of French wine for a present to Sir James Lumsden, Governor, and to rayse this it is ordered that impositions and month pence shalbe payd in before the 10th day of June next.

William Carr, a brother of this Fellowship, is presented for keeping a shopp by his apprentice, Robert Potter, at Perith [sic], and upon summons by the Governour he departed the court, first alledging he sent no goods thither but formerly sold or bespoken, therefore in his absence upon voyces it was referred to be discussed the next court day,

The brethren of this Company have condesended to repaire the walls betwixt Sand-gate and the Carpenters' Tower, and these following are appointed to cesse the Company particularly, and to raise 30^{li}, for the behoufe of that worke: Mr. Robert Shafto [and six others] or any fower of them.

George Dobson and John Strangwish are appointed to cease upon goods forraigne bought and forraigne sold, and they to have the halfe of the said goods so seezed for their paines.

The order made the last court day for repairing the walls by this Company betwixt Sandgate and the Carpenters' Tower is disanulled, and an other course taken for building them.

Christopher Nicholson petitioned this Company for the geving againe impositions which he paid for cloth shipt and cast away, anno 1640; and it is ordered that his mony shalbe repayed him by the wardens now being.

[20 June 1645.]

George Dobson and John Strangwish having seized of three packs of flax of one John Strangers of this towne, hatter, which he had sold to Mr. Edmondson, of Kendall; upon discussing the matter in open Court, and the said John Stranger presenting himselfe before the Company, petitioning that he might have his goods restored, promissing not to offend in the like againe, [and] being willing to enter into bond, it is ordered that he shall enter in 200^{li}. to this Fellowship never to deale with any merchandize againe in that manner, and, after security given, the Company will consider the remitting of the mony he layd in deposits for the release of his goods.

John Stranger, hatter, concerning his trespasse for trading in marchandize (which he confessed formerly) was again discussed, and ordered, a bond of 200^{li}. being drawne to restraine him, that Mr. Edward Man and Mr. Thomas Davison, one of the wardens of this Company, shall repaire to Mr. Recorder and take his advice, not only in behalfe of that bond, but also for the cessation of the trade of all forraigners.

George Dobson and John Stranguish being formerly appointed to seize upon goods foraine bought and foraigne sold, desiring the Companie's seale for the further strengthening of their commission in that behalfe, it was granted that they should have the same.

Thomas Wetherall having bin formerly presented for keeping a shopp at Stocton, answered to his presentment that he never retailed any goods there, but for better prooffe of making good the truth of this presentment, it is referred to the next court day.

A presentment made by a brother of this Company against George Beadnell, was red in open court and ordered to be recorded verbatim. The words are these : George Beadnell did openly in the Custome House tax all the Fellowship and marchants in this towne with defrauding the estate of custome, as much as the cole fitters, whome Mr. George Dawson did charge with short clearing of coles, which he saith he is able and will prove, when tyme serves ; which he called knavery, to which George Beadnell answered that the whole Company of Marchants were great knaves in that kind.

The presentment against William Carr was againe red, and proved that his man Potter for his use sold goods at Perith, which being contrary to the acts of this Fellowship was fined forty shillings.

Thomas Wetherall his presentment for keeping a shopp at Stockton was againe red, but he denying it, and no manifest prooffe produced, he, purging himselfe by his oath taken to this Company at his admittance, was freed.

[6 Nov. 1645.]

A great complaynt being made by the trading bretheren of this Fellowship against interloopers, who trade in ample manner, in the staple comodities of this kingdome, as in cloth, lead, stockins, and other marchandize, inward and outward, to the great hurt and preiudice of the bretheren of this Company ; it is ordered for the better reducing of trade to the former setteled government, as also for debarring of unfreemen, that these eight bretheren whose names are hereunder written shall compose an act for the further strengthening of the former acts in that behalfe, and report their proceedings therein the next courte day.

Mr. Henry Dawson [and seven others].

The composall of an acte for restrening the bretheren of this Fellowship to trade in the same bottomes with interloopers, in goods inward and outward, (being formerly referred to eight brethren of this Company) was red, and sett of to be considered on and further discussed the next courte day.

Ralphe Jenison's presentment against George Bednell, for scandalous words spoken against the whole Company of Merchants Adventurers, was the third tyme redd in open courte, and he upon his answer agravating his former fault, by absurd tearmes against Mr. George Dawson, was fined by generall consent for that offence twenty shillings, and to answer his presentment the next courte day.

The presentment against George Bednell, for scandalous words spoken against the whole Company of Merchants Adventurers, was the fourth tyme red in open court, and was by generall consent fined for his absurd tearmes the sum of forty pounds.

[Ralph Heron, apprentice to Henry Cocke, petitioned for his freedom], but it was denyed him at present, partly because he was an officer in military affaires in this towne before it was reduced, [and partly because after his master's death he was not set over to another master].

[19 Feb. 1645-6.]

[Robert Johnson apprentice to Henry Lawson, boothman, deceased, petitioned for his freedom, thirteen months of his apprenticeship being unexpired], and having likewise married a wife (which president this Company have not formerly had, it directly crossing an act), yet this Fellowship considering his father's neglect of taking his freedome, who was capable, taking likewise into consideration these distracted tymes here at present, which hindered him from coming over from Rotterdam to petition this Company for his freedome before his marriage, and likewise hoping that he wilbe a good member by-yond seaes, where he resides, to accommodate this Fellowship, [admitted him on payment of a fine of £50]—this to be no president for future —[of which £40 was returned him].

[Charles Richardson, apprentice to Christopher Nicholson, petitioned that his master would terminate his indenture, or that he might choose a new master], but this court, being certified that he will not take the Covenant, would not admitt of his petition.

A letter from the Commissioners of the Navy, directed to the Mayor and aldermen, was red, desiring the Company of Merchants Adventurers of this towne to ioyn with the Governor and Fellowship of Merchants of London, trading into France, for two yeares next ensewing. Their letter beares date the 27th of March, 1646. The impositions for goods followeth : (vizt.) five shillings upon every hundred pounds worth of all goods and merchandizes (except wines), according to the booke of rates established by Parliament, which shalbe exported out of this kingdome of England, dominion of Wales, and towne of Barwick, into any parts of the dominions of the French King, without the Straights, or imported from thence into these dominions, by any person or persons, as well natives as strangers, and sixe pence upon every tun of wine of the groth of France, to be imported during the said tyme, for the defraying of the expences and other charges in arreasts of publick concernment, and for payment of the salleryes of such officers and ministers as shalbe imployed upon those affaires ; and after debate it was ordered that a composall of an answer should be referred to Mr. Christopher Nicholson, sheriffe, [and five others], or any fower of them, and after shewing it to the Deputy Mayor, to be returned to London, which is as followeth :

Hon^{ble} Sir and Sirs,

Our Deputy Mayor having, according to your honors' direcons, shoune us your letter touching the French trade, dated the 27th of March, we thereupon have called a courte, and we all take ourselves much bound for your respect to us therein. And for our partes we hould the propositions in your letter soe faire that we are all very willing for the small trade we have to be contributary in that way and manner, and for that tearme as in your said letter is propounded, provided we may have like interest in proteccion, fredome, and privildges, with the Governor and Company of London trading for France. But we offer to your consideracions that there are diverse Scotch merchants and other strangers, who have the greatest trade into this port from that kingdome, who, if they should be exempted from this imposition, and come to this port, would prove much to the preiudice of us that trade thither. Soe we take leave and rest,

Yours, the Governor and Society of Merchants Adventurers,

Leonard Carr, Governor.

Newcastle, 17 of Aprill 1646.

To the Hon^{ble} the Commissioners of the Navy at London—these.

[22 May 1646.]

Intelligence being given to this Company that Mr. Thomas Bonner ~~an~~ ~~interlooper~~ [not free of this Company interlined] hath shipt cloth in the "William and Ralfe" of Newcastle, Thomas Commin, master, for Rotterdam, it is ordered that if any brother of this Fellowship shipp any cloth in the said shipp, except Mr. Bonner's be taken out, that he shalbe lyable to the fine of an act made the 2nd of December, 1645.*

[2 July 1646.]

Complaint being made against Edward Nixon, master of the "Hope" of Newcastle, for taking in unfreemen's goods to be delivered in some port beyond the seaes, under the government of the states of Holland, although he was forewarned to the contrary, and the rest of the Trynity House maisters, by a cobby of an act sent them to be generally communicated, he therefore willingly offending, it is ordered that he shall not be employed by any person or persons free of this Company for the space of three yeers.

It was ordered that these brethren hereunder named, are appointed forthwith to view the defects of the Marchants' Court and take order for repaire. Mr. Ralph Grey [and four others].

It is likewise ordered that the wardens of this Fellowship shall send the officer to demand of George Bednall 41^{li}, which he is indebted for broogs, requiring him to pay it in before the next court day, otherwise his fines are to be dubled.

[Thomas Lasselles, apprentice to Thomas Sherwood, petitioned for his freedom, but] he wanting 4 years and 8 moneths [of the expiration of his apprenticeship, although the Company] were willing to grant him any lawfull favour, by reason of his good service done to the King and Parliament, [yet he was denied admittance, till he should have completed seven years of his term].

Complaint being made against Thomas Aubing, master of the "John" of Newcastle, for taking in unfreemen's goods to be delivered in some parte beyond the seas under the goverment of the states of Holland, although, &c., it is ordered that he shall not be imployed.

[16 Oct. 1646.]

Edward Nixon, master of the "Hope" of Newcastle, petitioned to be freed from the offence done by taking in of unfreemen's goods, promissing never to offend in the like, but his petition was not granted at present (his offence being great), for diverse reasons then given.

[22 Oct. 1646.]

Edward Nixon, master of the "Hope" of Newcastle, renewed his petition, and upon his humble acknowledgment, promissing never to transgresse againe in the same nature, he underwriting his submission, and withall producing Mr. Robert Ellison and Mr. Edward Archer, two brethren of this Company, to ingage themselves that hereafter he shall not transgresse, he was dispenced with and cleared from his former fact.

* See page 31.

[1 Dec. 1646.]

Mabel Errington, wife of Cuthbert Errington, a free brother, having fallen into poverty, petitioned for some releefe for herselfe and her three children, and it was ordered that the wardens should give her three pounds, but if shee be a papist nothing.

Andrew Barker, by reason of unsivell and undecent words spoken in open courte against Mr. Robert Ellison, an assistant, he was inioyned to depart the Courte, and ordered to make an acknowledgment, otherwise to be lyable to what fine shalbe imposed on him the next courte day.

A complaint was made against William Wallisse, a taylor, of this towne, by Mr. Governor, that he had altered his copy, and was admitted the 7th of October last ~~and sworne~~ a free mercer before Mr. Mayor and some aldermen, which course is conceived to be very destructive to the wellfare of this Fellowship, and therefore ordered to be further considered on the next courte day.

Upon a mocion made by the Right Wor^{ll} Mr. Mayor to this Company, for the lone of monyes towards the purchasing of the manors of Whickham, Gateside, and the Castle Garth, promissing the comon seale for security, upon further consideracion it was reported back againe by the wardens to Mr. Mayor and aldermen, that this Fellowship did well approve of the mocion, and would be redy to put to their helping hands to the advance of moneyes for the purchasing of the same, upon such security as should be approved of; and thereupon it was put to hands in open courte, and thus concluded by generall consent that this Company (before they have taken advice of learned councell) are not yet resolved whether they will take the profered ingagement or not.

William Wallisse, formerly a taylor, who hath altered his copy, and was made a free mercer, was in open courte the second tyme discussed, and ordered, with the willing consent of Mr. Mayor then present, that he shall not be allowed to trade in merchandize till the iustnes of his admittance be decided, and that at Mr. Recorder's coming home, these brethren whose names here follow shall repayre to Mr. Mayor and the rest of the justices, to have conference aboute the same, and their proceedings therein they are to report to the Company the next courte day; likewise they are to agitate for restraint of all not free of our Fellowship for keeping tobacco shoppes.

Mr. George Dawson [and seven others].

George Beadnell, for his fine of 41^{li}. due to the Company, being dubbed by reason of his non payment, according to order petitioned for mittigacion, and being put to hands it was generally voted that he shall depositt 82^{li}. in the wardens' hands, or give them security for it, before this Fellowship would further take it into consideracion, and upon his departing the courte it was ordered that if he give not satisfaccion to the wardens for 82^{li}. before the next courte day, then the foresaid some of 82^{li}. to be againe dubbed.

A complaynt being made against retaylers of goods within this towne not free of this Company, it was ordered that spedy redresse shalbe sought to suppressse them, to which mocion Mr. Mayor hath promissed his best assistance.

Thomas Aubing, master of the "John" of Newcastle, petitioned to be freed from his offence done by exporting of unfreemen's goods, promissing never to offend in the like, and producing Mr. Thomas Todd and Mr. Joshua Greene to ingage themselves that hereafter he shall not transgresse, he was dispenced with and cleared from his former fact.

George Beadnell having been formerly fined, 18 of September, 1645, for uncivell tearmes 40^{li}., and 2 of July, 20^s. for agravating the said tearmes, with this limitation that if he did not pay the 41^{li}. before the next courte then to be dubbed, which was accordingly donne, he having not given satisfaccion to the wardens, which fine compleated the some of 82^{li}., and it was the 3^d tyme ordered, he still fayling to depossit his money at a courte holden the 8 of December last, his fines were againe dubbed, yet he, peticoning for mittigacion of his said fines, being sory for his uncivill tearmes formerly used, with his sinceare acknowledgmet that he intended not to blemish the meanest member of this Society, and likewise his presentors verbally petitioning to modderate the fines imposed, because they are perswaded what was spoken by him was rather rashly and unadvisedly donne, then out of envey or disparishment to the meanest of this Fellowship, he having depossited Mr. Henry Rawling present sheriffe and Mr. William Carr surtisses for his fines, amounting to 164^{li}., he departed the Courte submissifely with the acknowledgment of his offence, and by extraordinary grace and favor he had restored him 154^{li}.

William Barker, a brother, peticoned that 4 merchants, with an umpere, might be appointed to end differences which grew upon accompt betwixt Mr. George Fenwick and himselfe, as administrator to his brother, Mr. Charles Barker, deceased, for the good of his daughter, which request was granted, and it was generally voted that after they had entered 500^{li.} bond a man to byde the end of Mr. John Emerson, Mr. Christopher Nicholson, Mr. Ralph Jenison, and Mr. John Butler, Mr. Governor being umpyre, they willingly undertaking the charge are to end the contrivercy or to report their proceedings to the courte.

Thomas Maddison made complaynt against Mr. John Emerson that he had wronged him in words, and desired to have it referred to some brother or brethren whereby there might be a frindly end, and it was voted that Mr. Governor should both have the hearing and desiding of the contraversy, which he promised to undertake.

Richard Swan, contrary to an act of this Fellowship, arreasting Mr. W^m. Carr, without the leave of Mr. Governor, was fined 40^s.

Thomas Heath, a poore brother, petitioned, having a wife and eight children, for some releife towards their subsistance, and it was ordered that the wardens should give to Robert Rutter 6^{li.} 13^s. 4^d. to be sent to his wife, which he did undertake to do.

It was condicended too, by generall votes, that Mr. John Emerson [and seven others], or any fower of them, should forthwith meete to revive and strengthen an act made anno 1573, not only for suppressing Londoners and others not free of this Fellowship, for keeping of warehouses in this towne, by restrayning the bretheren of this Company from trading with such interloopers, but also for shutting in all unfree shopps, and removing all such pedlers' boothes which trade in any commodity belonging to the priviledges of this Fellowship. And for the better strengthning of our power herein, it is ordered that they shall goe to the right worshipfull Mr. Mayor, to desire him to grant his authority and assistance to these bretheren hereafter named, which by generall consent are chosen for the suppressing of all such offenders, who are likewise appointed to cease all goods foraigne bought and foraigne sould, vizt., George Dobson [and nine others].

George Bednell againe petitioned to have the 10^{li.} restored him, which only he paid [of a fine of 164^{li.}], upon the reading whereof this Society conceiving that they had shewed him sufficient grace formerly in remitting such a large proporcion of his said fines, as also probably appearing that he rather taxed them with iniustice in his said petition, then thanked them for their great favor formerly showed to him in the mittigacion of his broges, ordered that noe petition shall hereafter (in that behalfe) be presented by him, or admitted to be redd in open courte, and that noe parte of his 10^{li}. shalbe given him backe.

[Francis Burton, apprentice to Christopher Nicholson, admitted. A fine of £10] for not demanding his freedome at the expiracion of his tearme [was remitted,] because he was imployed (in the interim) in the servise of King and Parliament.

Timothy Bonner, son of Mr. William Bonner, deceased, desired his freedome by patrimony, but by generall consent it was deneyed him, because it stands regestered that his father (being then sheriffe of the towne) was by greate grace and favor only admitted to his personall fredome, and therefore at this courte ordered that not any of his children ought or shall have benefitt thereby,

Thomas Jackson, for sewing of Leonard Hodson without leave of Mr. Governor, was fined forty shillings.

[Edward Blackett, apprentice to John Butler, admitted.] Paid for a fine tenn pounds because his tearme of apprentishipp was expired sixe yeares before his admittance: yet his constant residing being at Amsterdam, from whence he hath twice repayred hether to demaund his fredome, but did not receive it by reason of troublesome tymes, which then hindered this Fellowship from keping courts [his fine was remitted].

[18 Nov. 1647.]

Robert Selbie's petition was redd, who at present is in great want, therein humbly desireing some releefe for himselfe and his children, and it was ordered that tenn pounds should be given by the wardens to Mr. George Dawson and Mr. George Fenwick, whome this Fellowship then entreated to see it bestowed of him and his children as they should thinke fitt.

[24 April 1648.]

The right worshipfull Mr. Mayor sent in a request to desire that some bretheren may be appointed to meet to-morrow with men chosen out of the severall other Companyes of this towne, there to conferr about the ordering to mantayning of the priviledges of every particuler Company according to charter. Wherefore these bretheren hereafter named were appointed to treat with them :

for mercers	Mr. Henry Dawson	}
for boothmen	Mr. Christopher Nicholson	}
	Mr. John Emerson
	Robert Rutter

William Barker's, a brother, petition was redd, desiring some releefe to sett his wife and children into Holland to their frinds there, he being disinabled to mantayne them, by reson of his inpresonment. It was ordered that sixe pounds sixe shillings eight pence should be given them by the wardens when his wife and children goe a shipp bord.

George Dawson chosen an assistant in Mr. Robert Ellison's place, who is now a burgesse of the Parliament for this towne.

An instrument in parchment was redd in open courte this day, under written by the Right Worshipfull Mr. Thomas Ledgerd, and the toune's seale affixed to it, being dated (in his mayorallity) the nyneteenth day of September, 1648, for the authorizing of ~~eight~~ ^[tenn interlined] bretheren of this Company, to suppress all forigners to the trade of mercers and boothmen, for selling any commodities within this towne, which are properly due to them to selle and trade in, as also to restrayne all pedlers, that are forigners to the fredome of the said toune, from the keeping any bootes or stalls within the said toune. It was likewise ordered that the said instrument shalbe kept in the wardens' hands for the tyme being. And copyes thereof to be given out of the same to the said ~~eight~~ ^{tenn} appointed bretheren, for their further incurigment and more legall procicucion against offenders; to whome this Fellowship gives their full power, and they are forthwith to putt the said authority in exicucion, the cobby whereof is verbatim thus:—

Villa Novi Castri super Tinam.

Know all men whome these may concerne, That I, Thomas Ledgerd, Maior of the toune and county of Newcastle upon Tyne, for the better ordering and regulating of the trade of mercers and boothmen, inhabiting within the same toune, have authorized, ordayned, and appointed, and by these presents doe authorize, appoint, and ordayne, George Dobson, Francis Comin, John Strangwayes, Jacob Gibson, Jonas Gibson, Michael Milburne, Thomas Wetherell, Robert Rutter, Robert Huntley, and Thomas Welsh, of the said toune, merchants, or any two or more of them, for me, and in my name, to will, require, and comand all strangers, and foriners to the fredome of the said toune, selling such comoditys as any free mercer or boothman doth sell, to shutt upp their shopps, and to forbear to sell any such wares or comodities whatsoever, by grosse or by retayle, to any foriner to the fredome of the Company of mercers and boothmen, belonging to the said toune, and to seaze upon all wares and comodities that any foreiner to the fredome of the said toune shall sell, within the said toune, to any person or persons that is or are forriners to the said Company of mercers and boothmen, according to the ancient customes, usages, and libertyes, within the said toune tyme out of mind used and accustomed. And to restraine all pedlers, that are forriners to the fredome of the said toune, from keping any booths and stalls within the said toune. In wittnesse whereof I have hereunto sett my hand, and caused the seale of the maioraltie to be affixed, the nyne-teenth day of September, in the fower and twentieth yeare of the reigne of our soveraigne Lord King Charles of England, &c., annoque Domini, 1648.

Thomas Ledgard, Maior.

It was ordered, for the further strengthning the pouer of merchant drapers, that the charter, with the bookes of this Society, shalbe perused at or before the 11th day of November next by these bretheren whose names are hereunder written, or any four of them, and to report their judgments therein at the next ensewing courte, vizt., Mr. Leonard Carr [and seven others].

William Barker his petition was redd, a brother, being in extreame necessity in prison, humbly desiring releefe for his releasment from thence, his ~~debts~~ [contempts interlined] for which he was committed with his arreares there being little above seaven pounds, and being putt to votes, there was frely given him x^{li}., to be paid by the wardens for his absolute releasment, and not otherwise.

Tymothy Lomax, a brother, was at this courte accused for culling of 25 last of rye belonging to one Mr. Tymothy Wright, of Yorke, lofted in Robert Wolfe's house by the Key Side. Now this and the like acts being greatly detrimentall to the bretheren, as also being absolutely against his oth at his admittance to his fredome, by comand he departed the Courte, till leave should be given him to come in: and, after much conference and deliberacion had by the Company, he was admitted to answer, but after severall obieccions were put against him, to disprove the reality of his pretended bargaine with the foresaid Mr. Wright, he fayled in his answer, as also, being desired at the bargaine making to relate who were wittnesses, he answered, John More of Sheilds, and William Mallaber, cooper, of this towne, the bargaine being made (as he said) the fourth of September last; and producing a bond for that parcell of rye given to the merchant, dated the 6 of September, payable the 8th of this instant October, being for the value of 365^{li}., the bond being cancelled. The cooper being presently sent for into the courte, and demanded whether he was a wittnesse at that bargaine, he utterly deneyed the knowledge thereof, as also there being sound proffe made against him, that this dealing of his was merely cullerable, by fower bretheren of this Company, who then did give their presentments in under hand before the courte, to disprove the reality of it, he was by order dismissed from appearing at courts till the matter be brought to full triall, and in the interim a charge is to be given out of the body of their presentments for him to answer: which is to be the next courte after the eleccion. In the interim $17\frac{1}{2}$ boules of rye of that parcell being seazed on, for the use of this Society, is not to be sould till further, but a charge given to John Strangwayes, in whose custody it is, carefully to looke to it.

In the foresaid courte the right worshipfull Mr. Thomas Bonner, present mayor, sent in a request to this Fellowship to desire the use of the Charnell house for one yeare, if not without rent, then for rent, but it was frely granted him, upon condicion it shall be delivered up (for this Companye's use) at the end of one yeare; during which tyme Mr. George Dauson and Mr. Christopher Nicholson have promissed to lend roome for seasures made for the use of this Fellowship, in the Mazendew seller.

Tymothy Lomax his petition (confessing his fault in cullering Tymothy Wright's rye of Yorke, to the value of 365^{li.}) was redd in open courte, humbly submitting himselfe to the Companye's favorable sencure, promissing never to offend in the like; yet, because he alledged in his said petition that although the bargaine was not soe reall as pretended, he having profitt by it, thought he might have done it without offence, this Fellowship iudged it not fully satisfactory, but for example's sake, as also for the terror of future offenders, have appointed these bretheren, hereunder named, to draw upp in writing at or before the 14th of this instant month, to be presented to the nexte courte, out of presentments alredy underwritten by fower bretheren of this Society against him, the henesse of his fault, as also the punishment due to an offender in such a case. Their names here follow: Mr. Leonard Carr [and 12 others] or any sixe of them.

And for the 14 boules rye, pretended to be Tymothy Lomax's, being of the foresaid parcell, and seazed on for use of this Company, it was ordered that it should be put to sale by the wardens, to the best advantage of this Fellowship, the officers that seazed on it to have one halfe of the value of the said parcell, as also forty shillings, which was depossited in Clibburne Kirkebride's hand for the releasement of some of that rye, shall be delivered into the wardens' hands for the use of this Fellowship.

Andrew Barker, a brother, being complened of for cullering (as is supposed) the goods of one Thomas Partis, who keepes a tobacco shopp, being a foriner, who, although a married man, he keepes as his pretended servant. After some debate had, he alledged that the said Partis, by a late contract made betwixt them, was really his servant. An act therefore was redd to him, absolutely forbidding the imployment of any foriner by any brother of this Company, upon payne of five pounds for every tyme soe offending after notice given him, yet he, refewsing to desist from his unlawfull course, it is ordered that the rigor of that act (without his submission) shalbe extended against him.

John Williamson, a foriner, peticoned this courte for the restoring to him 2 roubles of tobacco and a boxe of pipes, which were seized on for the use of this Company, promissing not to offend againe, but it was ordered that the said goods shalbe sould and the proceede to be delivered to the wardens of this Fellowship for the use of the same.

Tymothy Lomax his petition was red, wherein he confessed that his bargaine with Tymothy Wright of Yorke for a parcell of rye of the value of 365^{li}. was merely cullerable and not reall, humbly submitting himselfe to the favorable sencure of this courte, promissing never to offend in the like hereafter, which offence of his (after long debate had) was remitted, he paying into the wardens' hands before the next courte the some of forty pounds.

Andrew Barker, a brother, his petition was red, wherein he desireth that the act of this Companey (for debarring any brother or sister for imploying any foriner or stranger) in favor of him might be suspended; but his request was not granted, he being at present not capable of petitioning, because after severall admonicions given him to discharge his servant, Thomas Partis, which he keepes unlawfully, as also after the reding to him that profitable and ancient acte of this Companey for restrayning the imployment of strangers, he still persists in his way, and therefore he is lyable to the penalty of that act, being 5^{li}. a tyme for the transgressors thereof.

John King, a foriner, his petition was redd, desiring to have a butt of sack restored to him which he sould to Mrs. Watson of Gateside, but seized on by a member of this Fellowship, being foraine bought and foraine sould, promissing to comitt noe such error hereafter, which was ordered to be given him back, he paying to him that seized it 30^s., as also entring into one hundred pound bond never to offend in the like again.

Mr. John Emerson being informed against that he kept Nicholas, a Duchman, to sell raffe upon the Key, deneying it, desired to know his informer, which after inquirey it was found that Edward Laverack had it from Tymothy Lomax, who at present could not produce the name of the author from whom he heard it, therefore he hath tyme given him till the next courte, to make knowne who informed him.

A complaint was made of a difference that was betwixt Mr. John Emerson and Mrs. Carr, about rye taken out of Mr. Elbrough's shipp, the ending of which is referred to Mr. George Dawson and Mr. Edward Mann.

Alexander Veech, a foriner both to the fredome of the towne and this Company, having 8 roubles of tobacco ceazed on, which he sould to an unfree man, by a brother of this Fellowship authorised to curbe such offenders (he seking to replevey it by warrant from Mr. Sheriffe, and after to trye sute), it is at this courte ordered that the said parcell of tobacco shalbe forthwith prayzed and sould for the use of this Society, and that all goods hereafter so zeased on are likewise presently to be prayzed and sould, (Mr. Governor being first acquainted with them, and giving leave) ~~for prevencion of~~ replevietie.

And further it is ordered that Mr. Governor and the 2 wardens shall goe to councell, there to advise what may be done against free men of this towne, which are not free of this Company, that sell, by wholesale or retayle, any kind of merchandize to foriners, that they may be likewise proceeded against according to law.

A complaynt being made by some of the 14 bretheren that are appointed for to seaze on all goods foraigne bought and foraigne sould, that some, which are ioyned in comission with them, are very backward to discharge the trust imposed upon them, it is ordered that, hereafter, the mayor parte of them appointing tyme and place where they shall meete, to goe aboute to putt their comission in execucion, those of them that doe not appeare (not shewing a very lawfull and necessary reason) shall pay, without forgivenes, 12^d. a man for every tyme soe offending.

William Hoggett, apprentice to Richard Hedworth, petitioned for his freedome, wanting $2\frac{3}{4}$ years of the expiracion of his tearme: after scaning it was alledged that he was married, and also that he had a child, so that his peticion was for the present waved.

Tymothy Lomax his peticion was redd, wherein he, confessing his fault in collering an unfree man's goods, being for that offence fined 40^{li}., humbly requests this Fellowship to remitt what parte of the said fine they shall thinke fitt; it was voted that five pounds shalbe restored to him.

There being a difference betwixt Mrs. Carr and Mr. John Emerson about rye taken out of Mr. Elbrough's shipp, the ending of which was formerly referred to Mr. George Dawson and Mr. Edward Man, but a second complaynt being made that they were not agreed, Mr.

Ralph Jenison, sheriffe, is added to them, to whome this Fellowship doe give full power to call the partyes before them, and to end the controversy.

Adam Dixon, chapman, having a small parcell of tobacco and some pipes zeased on, petitioned to have them restored him, promising not hereafter to offend, the Companye referred the disposall of that zeasure to Mr. Governor.

Thomas Couen, chapman, his petition was redd, desiring to have given him back a small parcell of tobacco which was zeased on, which, upon his promise in his petition not to offend hereafter, by selling tobacco within the libertyes of this towne, was ordered to be restored him.

James Butterey, a shipp master, having sould 10 firkins of sope to one George Ayrey, that dwelleth in Gateside, the value whereof amounted to 13^{li}. 2^s. 6^d., which goods, being forraine bought and forrayne sould, was seazed on for the Companye's use, and since sould, therefore it is ordered that the proceede of the parcell of sope be paid into the wardens' hands before Monday next: but being found a free man, upon promise made never to transgresse againe, his money was restored him.

Tymothy Lomax, a brother of this Company, was complened on for selling some viniger to a foriner, which a Frensh man brought in (as really his owne), which Mr. Francis Gray saith he never bought, as also for the sale of a parcell of currans to one Buttermar, which bargaine was made by his father in his name, which is likewise suspected to be cullerable, for the clering of which doubt he is to shew his letter to Mr. Governor (from one Mr. Hawood, a Londoner, of whome he pretends he bought them) before Munday next. He is also to pay in 35^{li}. to the wardens of this Fellowship before May Day next, which fine was imposed upon him for collering of unfree men's goods; otherwise it is to be dabled.

It is ordered that Mr. Kirkebride and Mr. Burton are to pay in to the wardens the money due for 14 boules of rye, as it was sould, before May Day next, which was parte of the parcell of corne pretended by Tymothy Lomax that he bought of a Yorke merchant; otherwise the some to be dabled.

Tymothy Lomax, haveinge a parcell of currants and viniger ceazed on (as cullerable goods by him received), after debate the letters being produced as really his owne, were ordered to be restored him fourth-with: as also 17 boules of rye seazed on (which was part of the parcell of the same commodity), for which he was fined 40^{li.}, and paide 35^{li.}, the bargaine beinge not found reall; after debate the halfe of the value thereof was ordered to be restored him, the other halfe to him that seized it.

George Usher, sellinge a butt of sacke (beinge a cooper's in London), and confessinge itt, to Christopher Raine of Darlington, was seized on, as forraine bought and forraine sould, by a brother of this Company, which beinge replevied, and now in sute in this courte, it is ordered that the 2 wardens and the clarke shall take care conserneinge the proceedings att the Companye's charge.

[22 Aug. 1649.]

The Right Worshipfull Thomas Bonner, esquire, and present Mayor of this toune, upon his peticion presented and redd in open courte for his fredome of this Fellowship (being admitted a free brother of the New Hans), was by great grace and favor admitted to his personall freedome, and sworne a free brother of this Society, ~~the fine for his admittance referred wholly to his discrecion~~; and this to be noe president for any to expect the like grace and favor from this Fellowship upon any pretence for the future.

William Blackett petitioned for repayre for the abuse he suffered by uncivill and disgracefull tearmes, which, upon the open key, were given him by Mr. John Emmerson. The woords by two bretheren of this Fellowship were justified to be these, an interloupeing and giddy headed fellow, sayeing 3 or 4 tymes he lyed in his throate, and that he would not give a jackinapse a reason for what hee did, with many other villifyinge tearmes. These woords amongst bretheren, beinge well pondered not onely to be uncivill but fyneable in a high measure, Mr. Governor and this Company, willing to heare his defence, before sencere should pas, in a loveinge way sent twice for him, but he refused to come, soe at present he was onely fyned for that offence twenty noobles.

Complainte being made that there were 3 or 4 unfreemen's shopps kept open, vendinge there commodities as free, it was ordered that the bretheren athorized formerly by Mr. Maior and this Company for zeazeing of goods unlawfully bought and sould, and shutting in of unfree shopps, shall prosicute their power fourthwith, and declare what they have donne therein the next courte day.

Jacob Gibson his peticion was redd, humbly desiring some releefe from this Fellowship, for the better mayentenance of himselfe, his sick wife, and children, and it is ordered (his necessity being apparently made knowne), that x^{li.} shalbe given him, the disposall whereof for his use is left to the discrecion of Mr. Robert Elison and Mr. Thomas Davison.

Thomas Welsh having formerly seized 4 baggs of hopps, being foraine bought and foraine sould; which were redilivered by order from the Right Worshipfull Mr. Thomas Bonner, then Mayor, he only taking five marke of the trespasser, the disposall whereof he frely gives to this Companey: it is ordered that Mr. Welsh have one halfe of the said some, the other halfe to be converted to the use of this Fellowship.

It is ordered that a petition shalbe drawne to the Parliament in the behalfe of this Companey, by a committy of merchants, appointed for that purposse, whose names follow, for the allowance of two friggotts for this port, being for the convoying and better securing of goods at sea, inwards and outwards, belonging to this [towne and interlined] Fellowship, vidt., Mr. George Dawson [and six others], or any 5 of them.

It is ordered that 2 rouses of tobacco, formerly belonging to Alexander Veech, being seized on for the use of this Company, as foraine bought and foraine sould, and now in possession of Mr. Francis Gray, shalbe forthwith prayzed and sould for the use of this Fellowship.

For the better regulating of apprentices in haire, apparell, and manners, according to the reviving of an ancient acte, allowed and confirmed at a courte holden the 5 of October last,* it is ordered that Mr. Governor's, the assistants', and wardens' apprentices shalbe sumoned to appeare the next courte day, to see their conformity to the said acte, or, offending, to be made exemplary, and after them other apprentices to be sent for, when this Fellowship shall thinke fitt.

The apprentices belonging to Mr. Governor, the assistants, and wardens, were brought before this Companey, according to an order
5 October
passed the 28th of ~~November~~ last, and were required to conforme themselves to a late act made for the regulating of apprentices in hare, manners, and apparell; but these whose names are here recorded, vidt., Nathaniell Massy, Thomas Ogle, Robert Lassells, Mathew Jackson, Anthoney Greenhaugh, Francis Hall, John Lankaster, Iserell Feilding, and Humffrey Pybus, did carry themselves contemptuously in the face of this courte, ~~utterly~~ refusing to conforme; yet the clemency of the Companey was soe great, that they did not presently make them exemplary, but dismissed them till Friday next, when they are to appeare againe in open courte, and if they be found to continue in their obstinate irregularity, they are to suffer according to their demeritts, as the sencure of this Fellowship shall inflict upon them.

* See page 23.

The nyne apprentices that refused to obey and conforme to the late acte, confirmed the ⁵ 28th of ~~November~~ ^{October} last, for the regulating of them in their haire, manners, and apparell, were brought before this Fellowship, and there were desired to conforme, but Nathaniell Massey, Israell Feilding, and Anthoney Greenupp, shewing themselves disobedient and very obstinate, not in the least yeilding to that wholesome act, were first in open courte made exemplary, by shortning their hayre, and taking from their clothes superfluous ribbining, and after, for their wilfull obstinacy, were comitted to prison, and their mittimus sent with them, which here followes (vidt):—

These are to require you to receive and keepe in safe custody the bodyes of Israell Feilding, Nathaniell Massey, and Anthoney Greenupp, apprentices, who are comitted for their great misdemeanors and affronts to this Companey, as also for their obstinate disobedience to their severall masters, giving thereby dangrous example to all the apprentices of this toune, untill you receive further order, allowing each of them only 2^d. in bread, and one quarte of table beare per diem, suffering noe apprentices to come to them, and this shalbe your warrant. Dated this 7th day of December, 1649.

To Robert Sharpe, keeper of the prison at Westgate.

Christopher Nicolson, Governor of the Fellowship of Merchants Adventurers.

The other apprentices, upon their promisse to be conformable to the foresaid acte, after correccion of their haire and other superfluityes in open courte, were dismissed to their masters' services.

Nicholas Farrer, George Dobson, Robert Heslerige, Thomas Grundy, James Stainecliffe, Ralph Henderson, and Henry Carter, apprentices to severall bretheren, being sumoned, made their appearance before this Fellowship, who were required to conforme, and were dismissed till Tusday next, when they are to shew themselves in open courte.

xx^s. which was left with Mr. Governor by Mr. Benfeild, in lew of 2 runletts of sack which was seazed on by a brother of this Companey, being foraine bought and foraine sould, it is ordered that the one halfe shalbe to the Companey, the other halfe to the seazer.

A petition to the Parliament, for 2 friggetts for the incuradgment of trade here, was redd and approved, and a letter was desired might bee penned to Sir Arthur Hezlerigg for the promoting of the said petition, by the same committee that made the said petition.

Seven apprentices, which were appointed to appeare in this court, the last court day, did accordingly appeare, to witt, James Stancliff, and Raph Henderson, apprentices to Mr. John Butler; George Dobson, apprentice to Mr. Robert Jenison; and Nicolas Farrer, apprentice to Metcalf Rippon; these made their appearanc, and as theyr haire and apparell was pretty conformable, so their professions of willingnes to conforme to the said act, and to bee obedient to their maisters, gave satisfaction to the said court on their behalves. But the haire of Robert Hezlrigg, apprentice to Mr. Bartram Anderson, junior; Thomas Grundy, apprentice to Mr. Bartram Anderson, senior; and Georg Carter, apprentice to Mr. William Blackett, being not cutt sutable to the said act, they were all three ordered to goe to John Hall, the barbor, to bee better trimmed, and to come againe to the court.

A great complaint was made against Anthony Dobson, son of John Dobson, hatter, apprentice to William Nicolson, of base words given out by him touching the Companye's dealing with the apprentices; and being charged with the same in open court, he very impudently seemed in effect to iustify what was charged upon him; whereupon he was caused to withdrawe, and the Company, considering of the weakenes and simplicity of the youth, and withall that he was a neighbour's child, one whome the Company respected, they did send for his father, and then called in the said Anthony, his son, who being sorry for what he had said, upon his recantation, they left him to the correction of his said father for the said offence.

Itt is ordered that all apprentices who have not been formerly in court, shalbee sent by their severall maisters to Mr. Governor, who is to view their conformity to the said act, and this to bee done before Monday next, and in case any brother of this Company shalbee neglective in seing the same done accordingly, every maister so offending shall forfeitt as a fyne to this Fellowship the some of five pounds.

The copy of a peticion, composed by a comitty of merchants, appointed for that purpose, to the Parlament of England; as also the copey of a letter sent to the Honorable Sir Arthure Heslerige, for the futherance of the same, were redd in open courte, and condicended too, [and] doe here follow: (vidt.)

To the supreme Authority of this Nacion:

The Parlament of England.

The humble peticion of the Governor, Assistants, and Fellowship of Merchants Adventurers of Newcastle upon Tyne:

Sheweth that, whereas your honours have beene pleased, to the incurrigment of trade, to grant to the ports of Yarmoth and Hull particuler convoyes, to be disposed of as they shall from tyme to tyme see most necessary for their severall trades; and whereas this port, in regard of the great confluence of shippes using this trade, and the great scarcity that these northeren partes have of all sorts of graine, which generally thretneth the nacion, needeth the like, and for as much as through want of convoy the peticoners have this last yeare suffered great losse and much discouragement in their trade, and being confident it wilbe as much for the good and safety of this comon welth to assigne this port two or more warlike shippes to attend their severall fleetts upon all occasions, as any other port in the nacion;

Therefore their humble sute is, that your honors would tymeously appoint at least two good and able frigatts for this port, to be at the disposall of your peticoners, for their greater incuragment in trade. And as duty bynds they shall ever pray, &c.

To the Right Honorable Sir Arthure Heslerige, Knight, &c.

Honorable Sir,—The great hazard and losse which wee have undergone through the want of convoyes, especially in our corne trade the last yeare, and the incuragment that our Parliament have given to the ports of Yarmoth and Hull, by granting them frigatts, and that at the charge of the State, doth imboulden us to be supplicators for the like favor for this port. We, therefore, having resolved to petition the Parliament herein, and your honor having soe neare relation to us, and well knowing how much these northeren partes stand neede of corne, and how fearfull the merchants wilbe to adventure, unlesse they have some shippes to gard their adventures as well as others, and also knowing what dangerous consequence the want of a supply of corne may prove to these partes, especially to this toun and garison, of soe great concernment to the Comon Welth, doe humbly entreat your honor to present this our petition here inclosed to the Parliament, and to use your utmost indeavors to procure us a speedy and good answer thereupon. Sir, (as wee understand) those of Hull, &c., have the nominating of captaines and other officers for their frigatts, and noe doubt if we might have the like favor, it would much indeare the said officers to our service. Sir, we have noe other to make our addresses unto, but to your selfe, therefore doe wholly rely upon your speciall care in the premises, wherein you shall exceedingly ingage the whole Company of Merchants Adventurers here, who, craving pardon for their bouldnes herein, doe rest,

Your honor's most humble servants,

Christo: Nicolson, Governor.

Isarell Feilding, Nathaniell Massy, and Anthoney Greeneupp, who were formerly comitted by this Company for their great affronts to this Fellowship, and disobedience to their masters, as by a mittimus recorded the 11th day of this month appereth, did this day make their humble petition to this Fellowship, in these words:

To the Right Worshipfull the Governor, Assistants and Fellowship, &c.

The humble peticon of Isarell Feilding, Anthoney Greenupp, and Nathaniell Massey, apprentices.

Humbly sheweth,

That, whereas your peticoners, having stoud comitted by your worships' order, these eleaven dayes past, for our nonconformity unto your worships' late act, and for our other misdemeanors, we doe, out of a sence of our miscariges, and that duty we owe to our masters and Companey, in the behalfe of our selves, humbly supplicate and submissively intreat your worships that you would be pleased to passe by and be oblivious of all misdemeanors and affronts to the Company, that have beene comitted and offered by us your peticoners, against the foresaid act of your worshipfull Society; and your peticoners doe likewise humbly request your worships that these our misdemeanors may not for the future be layd to our charge, as any obstakle or hinderance that may deprive us of our fredomes, (if we serve our severall masters as by indenture, and as becomes faithfull and loyall servants), when it shall please God to make us capable of the taking our fredomes; we doe likewise promise to conforme our selves in every respect to our masters' comandments, according to the foresaid acte, as an acte made by your worshipfull Society, whereupon we, your peticoners, desire that our inlargment may seeme pleasing to your worships, and that we may eech of us returne to our severall masterrs' services, striving to walke well pleasing therein, with comfort.

Hoping will find acceptance, and be taken into your worships' most serious consideracions, which donne we shall alwayes thinke our selves in duty bound and shall ever pray, &c.

Signed with their hands.

Which, after reding, was well approved of by the whole Companey, soe the peticoners were called in, and being demaunded if that cordually they did submitt, according to their petition, which they did all of them professe they did, thereupon the Companey did declare unto them that, upon hope of their reformation and future good behavior, they were licenced to goe home to their severall masters.

The petition of William Fletcher, a free man of this towne, was redd, touching a little hempe, snute and sope, which the Companye's officers had seazed from him, that it might be restored, which was condicended unto, with this caucion, that he enter into bond never to offend in the like kind.

John Liddell, apprentice to Henry Bowes, senior, was called into courte, and his haire being reformed, and promissing conformity to the acte, was dismissed.

Robert Ewbanck, apprentice to Clibburne Kirkebride, his haire being reformed, was dismissed.

George Carter, apprentice to William Blackett, having not conformed in his haire, was cutt in open courte.

Thomas Swan, a brother of this Fellowship, was complayned on for ieyring some of the apprentices, whose haire was cutt according to the Companye's acte, calling them the Companye's coued tupps, which was averred by Richard Hinner, apprentice to Tymothy Heckstetter, in open courte: this his offence the Fellowship orders to be taken into consideracion the next courte day.

It is ordered that Richard Thursby, Tymothy Hexstetter, and John Hall, or any 2 of them, shall praize 2 roubles of tobacco which were longe since zeased on, and now in the possession of Francis Gray, which is to be sould, and the proceede to be returned into the wardens' hands, for the use of this Fellowship.

George Carter, apprentice to William Blackett, after he had taken of his ribbins in open courte, was comanded to withdraw, and to attend the Companye's pleasure; but he contemning their order, or at least neglecting and sleighting it, wholly absented himselfe, for which disobedience to the Company and his master, it was ordered that a mittimus should be drawne, and he sent to prison till he submitted, which was accordingly donne the next morning.

It is ordered that those bretheren which are in comission to zeyse unfree goods, and to shutt in unfree shopps, are forthwith required to attend Mr. Mayor, who hath promissed his power and assistance for the shutting of them in.

[After recital of an act of 12 September, 1649, regulating the letting of lofts, and the storage of grain in them.*] Now it is further ordered that the like notice shalbe given to the wardens for all other goods and merchandize, which are in sellers or other roomes, and upon the like tearmes as is formerly expressed, and the same penaltyes shall extend to all offenders.

George Carter, app. to William Blackett, who was sent to prison for his affronts to this Fellowship, and disobedience to his master, did humbly petition for his liberty; he seconding his petition in open courte, with submission, and promissing reformation for future, was licenced to departe to his master his service.

Mathew Comendall his petition was redd, humbly desiring some releffe from this Fellowship for the better mayntenance of himselfe, his wife, and five children, and it was ordered (his necessity being apparently made knowne) that twenty nobles shalbe given him.

[1 Feb. 1649-50.]

Mr. John Fenwick his letter to the Companey was redd, with his consideracions touching the trade of Newcastle, and the incroachments thereupon by the Scotts, to the great preiudice of the nacion, as also proposalls of remidy for the same; and these gentlemen whose names here follow were appointed to compose a letter in answer at or before Munday next, vidt. Mr. Henry Rawling [and seven others] or any three of them: which accordingly they did, as it here followes:—

To Mr. John Fenwick, merchant, in London.

Sir,

I did receive your letter and the inclosed consideracions, which I did, at a courte on Friday last, communicate, and the same were seriously considered of, and acknowledged to be of great concernment to the Companey, and they have desired me to give you speciall thanks for your speciall care therein; housoever they conceive that it is not at present a fitt tyme to stirr in the premisses: our cloth trade is already reduced almost to nothing, and if we should now presse for liberty to shipp wooll fells, the clothiers would all with open mouth cry out of us, being a people alredy for the most parte brought to beggeriey.

And for the Scotts, wee are certified by those officers who have inspexion and oversight of the passages betwixt Carlisle and Berwick, that they were never better looked too, being this year soe mett withall, that it's supposed they wilbe affraid hereafter to hazard much in that kind. And thus much I was desired to write in answer to your letter. And soe, with my kind love to yourselfe, I rest,

Your loving frind the Governor, &c.

Newcastle, 4 Feb. 1649.

The said comittee did also compose another letter to Mr. Ralph Gray, the cobby whereof here followes:

Sir,

After my best wishes remembered. I desire you in the behalfe of the whole Companey, to sollicite Sir Arthure Heslerige in pursute of our petition to Parlament, inclosed in a letter to him, for the procuring of 2 friggets for this port, to attend our severall fleetts upon occasions, as per the cobby of the petition (herein closed) more at large doth appeare: I desire your speciall care and paynes herein, being a matter of soe great importance, both for the better securing of our adventures, and a greater incurragment to our Company for the further inlargment of trade, which will prove very beneficiall to the state; we hope we shall obtayne our request, because the like hath beene granted both to Hull and Yarmoth, and we conceive our port is as considerable as eyther of them. I presse you to be earnest, the rather because we heare this day that there are fower new friggots of the enemyes come upon our coast, 2 of 20 and 2 of 12 peece of ordinance a friggott. Soe I take leave and rests,

Newcastle, 4 Feb. 1649.

It is ordered that the wardens give a list of the apprentices to the beadle, which have not yet conformed in haire and apparell to the late acte; who is to warne [some of interlined] them to appear the next courte day.

[8 Feb. 1649-50.]

It is ordered that a letter shalbe forthwith written for this Company to the worshipfull Mr. Thomas Bonner, Mr. Ralph Gray, and Mr. John Fenwick, to London, which was accordingly done, the copy whereof here followeth:—

Gentlemen,

By a letter of the 20th of December last to the honorable Sir Arthure Haslerige, with our enclosed petition to the Parliament, we desired that they would be pleased, for the incurragment of trade, and for the more safety of adventures, to allow to us 2 friggotts for convoyes in and out, upon all occasions to attend our severall fleetts, which favor they have granted to the 2 ports of Hull and Yarmoth, and we conceive this port to be as considerable (if not more) then eyther of them; but as yet we have not received any answer at all to this our soe necessary a petition. Therefore we have writt againe the 4th instant to Mr. Ralph Gray (with the copy of the fore mencioned petition inclosed) which we hope is comed to hand, desiring him to use his best indevor and utmost diligence in soliciting Sir Arthure Heslerige for the obtayning a speedy grant of the same. Now we desire you, as brethren and well wishers to our trade (which without tymely ayde by sea will presently decay), that you will unanimosly ioyne together to further the accomplishment of this soe good a worke, by advising the best and spediest wayes and meanes for the obtayning of 2 warlick shipps, for our better security in trade, to be convoyes to us. And first we would have you to repayre to Sir Arthure Heslerige, desiring, in the name of this Company, his best assistance. And if his greater occasions will not permitt him to goe alonge with you, that then he wilbe pleased to shew you the best way to obtayne our request. We likewise are sutors to you that you wilbe pleased to stay at least 14 dayes after the effecting of your owne busines, in case you have not a grant hereof in the interim, and we shall consider your paynes with thankes, and if in that tyme there be not a period putt to it, then we desire the whole procicucion of the premisses may be left to the managing of Mr. John Fenwick, whose fathfulness to us in his late advice we have found, and who we hope will willingly undertake it. Soe we take leave and rest,

Your loving frinds the Governor, &c.

Newcastle, February 11th, 1649.

These apprentices whose names follow (being sumoned thereunto) appeared, that their conformity to a late acte, in hayre and apparell, might be vewed; and if faulty to be corrected according to the said acte.

John Allen, apprentice to George Lewen, found conformable and soe dismissed. Allen Gilpin, apprentice to Phenias Allen, not conformable, was cutt in open courte. John Scarth, apprentice to William Huntley, shewing conformity, was dismissed. Thomas Fenwick, apprentice to Thomas Swan, being reasnable conformable, after advice ordered to his master his service. Edward Chapman, apprentice to Thomas Bowes, after he had corrected his haire at the barber's, was sent home. Roger Bellingam, apprentice to Mr. Ralph Jenison, being irreguler in hayre, was dismissed upon his promise to conforme within 3 days. John Liddell, apprentice to Henry Bowes, elder, his hayre was cutt in open courte. John Bales, apprentice to Mr. John Emerson, upon his master his ingagment that he shall conforme against Munday next, was sent away. Or a Edward Grice, apprentice to Francis Burton, appeared and dismissed. John Tompson, apprentice to Oswold Matfen, promissing conformity, dismissed.

[29 April 1650.]

Mr. Thomas Bonner, who, upon petition to this Companey, at a courte holden the 22th of August, 1649, (he being then Mayor) was, by great grace and favor, freely admitted to his personall freedome, and accordingly sworne, did this day in courte present the Companey with three large silver cupps with covers, duple gilt, manifesting thereby his thankfulnes for the foresaid favor, which worthy presentacion was well accepted of by the Companey. And the Governor, in the name and on the behalfe of the Fellowship, did returne him thankes for the same.

Diverse apprentices, being sumoned, appeared, that their conformity to a late acte in hayre and apparell might be vewed, and these, whose names are hereunder written, are found not to be conformable. This being the second tyme of their appearance, and therefore their severall masters are lyable to their fines forthwith, yet fower dayes tyme is granted them to bring their apprentices to conformity.

Mr. Thomas Bonner, Mr. Edward Man, and Mr. John Butler, or any 2 of them, are appointed by generall consent to modilise an acte for restrayning of the bretheren from taking apprentices contrary to an ould acte, confirmed at a courte holden the 16 day of August, anno 1621.*

Likewise they are to consider of the best remidy to curbe ~~fore-stallers, regraters~~ and prevent sellers of corne out of lofts by those which are not free of this Fellowship.

Diverse apprentices being sumoned, that their conformity in hayre and apparell to a late acte might be vewed, these following appeared, vidt., Henry Slinger, Richard Wright, George Dobson, Basill Feilding, Ambrose Cuthbertson, Edward Grise, Thomas Glover, William Darneton, George Carter, Robert Dickinson, and Robert Lassells, and after some adverticement from Mr. Governor, were dismissed, and acquitted, but those that after a second sumance appeared not (the wardens having by order to writt doune their names) their masters are to pay the fines for nonconformity mentioned in the said acte.

Mr. Leonard Carr [and four others] or any three of them are ordered to meete within 12 days in some convenient place, there to consider of the regayning of the ancient priviledge of Merchant Drapers in this toune, which is now detayned from them, and to report what they have done therein, the next courte day.

[Indentures of William Blackett, apprentice to William Blackett, enrolled.] This apprentice was formerly bound to Edward Blackett who lives at Amsterdam, but the example of inrowling an indenture for a brother that resides not with the companey being flatt against our acts, the companey in favor to Mr. Blackett suffered William Blackett to take him; and this is ordered to be noe lett or preiudice to the said master.

Barbara Williamson's petition being redd, for the restoring of a parcell of tobacco which was seized for the Companeye's use, being foraine bought and foraine sould, and according to order of courte prized and sould for 30^{li}. 07^s., it is inacted that, after her husband's ingagement not to trespasse hereafter in the like kind be passed, a courte of assistants have full power to give back what part of the moneyes they please. And because Sir Arthure Heslerige hath, by her untrue petition, preferred to him, bene solicitous in her behalfe, it is likewise ordered that satisfaccion therein is to be given to him by Mr. Governor, Mr. Ralph Gray, and Mr. Edward Man, who are forthwith to repayre to him, not only acquainting him with their former trespasse, but also with the falsenes of their informacion presented to him.

Whereas, at the laste courte, an act was confirmed for the regulating of the bretheren of the Fellowship for taking of apprentices* (according to ancient acts formerly made but of late too much neglected) yet at the first mocioning thereof it being ordered that all apprentices that then were upon tryall with their severall masters should not be strictly tyed to the observance of the said acte, but to be inrowled upon the ordanary fine lately taken in case of trespasse: and to that end the beadle of this Companey was appointed to bring in their names, which hereafter follow: William Wallis, upon tryall with Mr. Braythwayte, [and 10 others].

Anne Forster, widdow, preferred a petition, desiring the lone of 30^{li}. upon good security, to be repayed by 5^{li}. per annum to the wardens of this Companey. She being a poore woman, for her and her children's better subsistance and releefe, the same is granted, to be paid in, in three yeares, by equal proporcions, such security to be taken as Mr. Governor and the wardens shall thinke fitt.

Leonard Hodgson having seized a parcell of cottons of one Bedford's, which were lodged in one Eyre's house, a bruer, it is thought fitt that Mr. Governor, and any three assistants, shall have power to give them back upon his petition or otherwise, as they see cause.

It is ordered that the 2 wardens are to provide a booke forthwith, for the ingrossing of all the Companeye's acts that shalbe thought fitt to stand in force, and the whole processe of the sute which depended betwixt us and the Merchants Adventurers of London.†

[16 Oct. 1650.]

Mr. Leonard Carr, Mr. John Emerson, Mr. Edward Man, Mr. William Carr, Mr. Thomas Davison, and Mr. John Butler, or any fower of them, are appointed to meete weekly once, for one whole month, if they cannot dispach sooner, to vew over the Companye's acts, and the whole processe of our sute with the Merchants Adventurers of London, and to report the next courte what acts they thinke fitt to be transcribed and what to be dispenced with.

Mr. Leonard Carr and Mr. Edward Man are appointed to meete 2 of the Draper's Company, who are to require of them, wherefore they take away the ancient previlidge of Merchant Drapers at elecons, and to treat with them about it; they are to report the next courte what they have donne therein.

It is ordered that three ho^d. of tobacco, which belonged to one Barrett, a Londener, sould to a Gateside man, and seazed on by Leonard Hodshon, being forraine bought and forraine sould, should be putt in the wardaynes' custodey, who are forthwith to cause it to be wayed, and to get vewers and prizers.

Alice Leach, doughter to John Eaden, merchant, deceased, faling into want, petitioned this Company for some releefe, and it was ordered that the wardens should give her forty shillings.

It is ordered that the 3 ho^d. of tobacco, which formerly belonged to one Barrett, be sould for the Companye's use (for feare it decay).

Henry Bowes, senior, his apprentice, John Hall's and Jacob Blenkinsopp's, are to be sumoned to appeare before Mr. Governor, and answer for their severall irregularytyes dayly comitted.

[31 Dec. 1650.]

It is ordered that Mr. Robert Ellison [and four others] shall repayre to Mr. Recorder, before he take iurney to London, and, in the Companye's name, to retayne him for counsell in a sute depending with one Barrett of London, concering 3 ho^d tobacco formerly belonging to him, but zeased on by a brother of this Company, being foraine bought and foraine sould.

Upon Mr. Edward Man his relacion of a private letter received from Alderman Mr. Henry Tomson, of Yorke, desiring this Fellowship to ioynes with them in procicuting the confirming and strengning of our ancient privilidges of Merchants Adventurers by petitioning the Honorable Counsell of Trade, against the stirring opposers at present, as also to seeke the restraint of Londoners for keeping of fayres on the north side of Trent; It is ordered that Mr. Edward Man and Mr. William Carr are to repayre to Yorke, where some of our bretheren of Hull are desired to be there at ther meting to be holden the 5th of March next, furnished with a letter and instruccions to the companey there, and for the same purposse to be given them by Mr. Leonard Carr [and six others] or any fower of them, who are appointed for that end; which hereafter follow :

The cobby of a letter to the Merchants Adventurers of Yorke, dated the 1st of March 1650.

Right Worshipfull Sir and Sirs,

After our harty comendacions. We received your letter of the 20th ultimo, whereby we perceive ours of the 17th of february cam to hand, and that you at a generall court have ordered a consultacion to be held at your citty by those who are deputed from our bretheren of Hull and from us to be with you the 5th of this instant March, to that end and for the same purposse we have chosen and furnished Mr. Edward Mann and Mr. William Carr with instruccions to treat with you on all such things as may concerne the generall good of our ffellowshipps in carring on a trade for these northeren partes, we wish good success in these matters of so great concernment, soe we take leave and rests,

Your loving ffrinds and bretheren, &c.

Christopher Nicolson, Governor.

Theise instruccions doe here ffollow likewise :

1. Gentlemen: At your treaty with our bretheren of Yorke and Hull the 5th of March you are desired to lay doune the grevances which merchants sustayne by the carring on the excise with the extremity of strictnes, and if our bretheren thinke fitt to consider of some more easy way for the regulating and carring it on for the good of the merchants we are willing to ioynes with them.

2. You are likewise desired that the Londeners keping ffayres on the north side of Trent be taken into consideracion, and if it be probable they may be restrayned by petition to the counsell of trade, we shalbe redy to petition for the merchant adventurers of this town.

3. We give you full power to further what you in your discrecions conceive may conduce for the preservacion of our ancient priviledges, and if you see cause to ioynes with them, promissing what is expended for your charges or otherwise in this businesse to pay you, soe wishing good successe we rest,

Your loving ffrinds the Governor, etc.

At the foresaid courte, the Right Worshipfull Mr. George Dawson, Mayor, desiring a supply of money, by way of lone from this Companey, towards the mayntenance of the priviledges of this towne, which are now questioned, and in great danger to suffer, it is ordered that the wardens shall issue, out of comon stock, one hundred pounds to be lent for that purposse, they taking the towne's seale for write to Mr. Thomas Bonner, now at London, to cause the sutes

 Robert Huntley, by one Ord, to be prosicuted in the Mayor and burgasses' names, and at the towne's charge; Mr. Mayor is likewise intreated to have this confirmed by acte of Comon Counsell, which he hath promised to indevor to procure.

[25 March 1651.]

Mr. Edward Man, reporting his proceedings with the bretheren of Yorke, Hull, and Leeds, produceth the articles of agreement by a committee there the 5th of March last, which were redd in open courte, and doe hereafter follow:

1. That there shall be for each severall place an agent or solicitor chosen to sollicit our busines at London.

2. That concerning the excise, it shall be our request that all goods except wines or liquid commodityes shall pay excise soe long as that tax doth continue upon the subiect where the custome is payd, which will tend much to the lessning of the charge of the State, and the rather because, as some say, there are 27,000 officers attending the excise in severall parts of this commonwealth, and that the Merchant paying his custome and excise, he may sell his goods to whome he please without any further trouble or accompt (of tickett) into any county whatsoever, and to sell as formerly when we only payd customes.

3. That for wyne at some convenyent tyme it maybe moved that the merchants may have reasonable tyme to pay their custome and excise in respect it comes to a greate summe, which many young merchants or other traders may sometymes want money to discharge, though able if neede be to give security to discharge the same upon some reasonable tyme.

4. That in respect there is greate danger at sea by pyrots, and that the merchants of these northeren partes have suffered much in these unhappy differences, being moved that in regard we pay soe greate custome and excise, wee may be constantly supplied with convoy and secured from the greate danger of the enemyes, and that the merchants may have some reasonable reparacions for their losses at sea by robbers from tyme to tyme in respect of the greate tax they pay for the maintenance of the navie.

5. Alsoe that the 15 per cent. formerly granted to the merchant and now lately taken of, may be againe allowed, for the encouragement of the merchant, and that the 3^d per pigg of lead may be reduced to a lesse proportion, beinge the greate charge on our owne lead may incourage forraine partes to get the more, as in Polland and other places, and the rather because the third 1^d per sowe was granted upon an old statute, when a sowe was about 10 or 12 hundreth, and now the greatest pigg is not above 2½c.

6. Agreed that Yorke and Hull shall ioyne in petitioning the counsell for trade for the confirmacion of the charter belonging to the Merchant Adventurers of England, and Mr. Man is desired and promiseth to present the same to the company at Newcastle to ioyne therein.

7. Agreed by all, that the citty of Yorke, Newcastle, and Hull shall ioyne in peticoning the counsell for trade against the ffayres and marts kept by the Londoner, that noe Lononer by themselves or any for them directly or indirectly shall come or send to keepe any ffayres or mart on the north side of Trent, for that the chiefe traders of London furnishing the affayres in the north, desire they may be supprest, and chiefly because the northeren traders are exceedingly preiudiced by their coming downe, they haveing layd out their moneys and credit to furnish the countrie. Soe that by these ffares, the Londoner ingroseth allmost all the trade of the northeren partes, and in equity and reason the benefitt of trade should be equally disposed into all the vaines of the commonwealth.

9. The Londoner first furnisheth upon creditt the tradsmen in the north, and then comes downe into the country with much sleight stuffe and mixed wares of groceryes and merceryes, to the great hurt and ruyn of them that deale with the Londoner.

10. There was alsoe a motion made at this committee for the advancement of the ffishing trade, that seeing God hath seated this commonwealth soe wonderfully and commodiously for that trade, and by soe greate and continued neglect of our nation, the Hollanders have soe mightily inriched themselves, that there might be now unanimous endeavours to take a share with them by degrees, fitting out yere after yere more and more Busses till we obtayne that advance which becometh those that are soe properly interested in matter of that concernment. This is seriously to be desired, to be promoted by the brethren and others of the northeren parts, and that they would presently fall in hand with the same.

Secretar Societat pred apud Hull.

After the reading of which (Mr. Man having these articles given him) was desired at his coming to London to ioyne with our bretheren of Yorke and Hull in all those things whereby our trade may be advanced, and to petition that Londoners may be restrayned from keeping fayers in the north, but especially he is intreated to labour to bring the receipt of excises and customes into one, and that the extraordinary penalty in case of offences may be taken away, and what money he shall spend herein this companey promiseth shalbe punctually paid him.

[27 August 1651.]

William Rea's petition for some releefe was redd, but the Companey being not fully satisfied with his demaunds, the wardens are desired to repayre to him, to know whether he petitions only for some small some for his present supportacion, or for a convenient some whereby he may obtaine his liberty and inlargment; they are to report what they have done therein the next courte day.

A presentment given in by John Strangwayes, under his hand, against Mr. John Emerson, for words spoken the 26 of June last, which, after reding, was ordered to be ingrossed; these are the words: I cam and tould Mr. Emerson that I was sent from Mr. Governor, the rest of the assistants, and the Companey of Merchants, to desire him to come to the courte, for they could have noe courte that day without him. He tould me I was a lying stinking base knave; I had caused him to pay a fine in the courte, and what Mr. Governor had said he cared not; he would come to the courte when he thought his owne tyme.

William Rea's petition was redd the 3d tyme, humbly desiring some supply from this Fellowship to releev his urgent necessityes, it was generally voted that tenn pounds should be given him.

[26 Nov. 1651.]

John Jefferey of Gateside and Cuthbert Atkinson of this towne, ~~mrs.~~ of shipp, being ~~both~~ complayned on for bringing unfree men's goods out of Holland, which they here putt to sale, to the damage of this Companey; the wardens are desired to receive satisfaccion from Mr. Story, whether they were unfree or not, and if found the bretheren and sisters of this Fellowship, are debarred from shipping any goods to or from Holland in ~~them~~, [him interlined] upon the severall forfeitures mencioned in a late revived acte, at a courte holden the 2d of December, 1645.

Mr. William Carr, in open courte, complayned against Francis Gray for abusive tearmes he did give him at his owne shopp, saying he had delt basely with him, and that he was a base fellow in taking out execucion against him, without once notice given him. Upon complaynt and repley betwixt them (by both their consents) after they were to departe the Courte, it was putt to Mr. Ralph Jenison, who heard the words, to satisfie the Companey therein, who avering that Francis Gray spoke the same words above mencioned by Mr. Carr, he was by generall consent fined five markes.

And whereas Francis Gray did complayne that Mr. William Carr had violated an ancient acte, in procicuting sute against him without the leave of Mr. Governor, the fine being 40^s. for every such trespase, but after some deliberate skanning, it was found that he, being bayle for a stranger, Mr. Carr might procicute sute to the leving of the execucion without any breach of the said acte.

Nathaniell Massy, apprentice to Mr. Christopher Nicolson, the present Governor, desired to be sett over to Gregerey Butler to serve out the remaynder of his tearme of apprentishipp, our Governor was willing to admitt of it, but the Companey, taking the premisses into serious consideracion, and finding that the apprentice did it rather for liberty, which for the most parte proves ruine to youth, then for any good that could otherwise accrew to him, was first in a gentle manner ordered to returne to his master his house, and required to doe dutifull service, if not, upon the next iust complaint, the magestracy of the toune doe intend to order him according as the law provides for refractary apprentices.

Judeth Hall, wife to John Hall, a brother of this Companey, her presentment against Allen Gilpin, apprentice to Pheinas Allen, was redd, wherein it is declared that she rebuking him for his miscarriage in the open streete, being drunck or little better, he replied that she was an idle woman, and a base slutt, with many other reviling and disgracefull tearmes, tending to her disparigment. At present his master was desired sharply to rebuke his apprentice, and at the next courte the Companey, not intending to lett such abusies offered by apprentices to passe unpunished, will take the matter into their serious consideracions, and proceede accordingly to sencure.

Allen Gilpin, apprentice to Pheneas Allen, for his misdemenor against Judeth Hall, calling her an idle woman (she only rebucking his miscarriage) and base slutt, with other reviling and disgrasfull tearmes, tending to her disparagment, was brought before the Companey, where he was openly reprovved for his lude carrage towards her, but he, not in the least shewing any remorse for his abuse, was by order of courte sent to the apprentices' prison in the ~~Correecion~~ House, with a mittimus, under the custody of Robert Sharpe, there to be strictly kept, with 2^d. in bread, and one quarte small beare per diem till further order.

Mr. John Emerson [and five others], or any fower of them, were appointed to meete at 8 a'clock to morrow morning to compose a letter to the Companey of Merchant Adventurers of Yorke; which accordingly was donne and sent by the post: the contents thereof doe here follow:

Right Worshipfull,

The cause of our writing to you at present is to acquaint you that, whereas by an acte of the 9th of October last, intituled an Acte for the increase of shipping and incurragment of the navigacion of this nacion, it is enacted that noe shipp whatsoever shall bring, from any place in Europe, any goods but such as are of the growth, production, or manufacture of that cuntry, or from the port where such goods usually are first shipped from, except in some cases provided for in the said acte. Now houbet the words in the said acte seme to us to be most cleare, that what is the manufacture of any cuntry may, by English, or themselves, be imported hether, whereupon severall bretheren of this Companey, having some loffe suger and snutte arrived in this port, and were sent for under the nocion of manufactures made in Holland, and shipped from thence, the place such manufactures usually are shipped. Nevertheless, upon their arrivall in this port, such goods are here seized upon and detayned from the owners, by the officers of the customes here, occasioned by a letter to our collector, from the customers of the customes at London, certifying that, though lynen cloth be made in Flanders, and only whitned in Holland, yet such cloth is permitted to passe as Holland's manufacture, but for loffe suger and snewtte they cannot give that judgment upon them, but that they are prohibited by the acte, by which meanes not only our goods brought are under seizure, but we shall, if remedy be not found out, for the future be debarred from making returnes out of Holland, not only in loffe suger and snewte, but also in diverse other manufactures of that nature, by which returnes the cloath trade of these partes did receive much advantage, because they could be brought out upon better tearmes then to returne our money by exchange. And considering that this may be your case as well as ours, and that such order against these manufactures have bene procured by some, not soe well minding the acte itselfe or the good of these northeren partes, wee take our selves obliged to acquaint you herewith, and to desire if it may stand with your judgments to joyne with us in petition, or otherwise, eyther to the Parliament, or to whome they have comitted the managment of this businesse, that such goods soe detayned may be released, and that these and others may be admitted for the future, being undoubtedly manufactures, and that, if any other interpretation be putt upon the plaine words of the acte, we may more certaynly know what they will order for manufactures, that soe we may not bringe losse and trouble to ourselves and trade. Gentlemen, we conceive this acte lyeth neare us, and therefore requires a spedy consultacion and unanimous resolucion, effectually to cleare all doubts herein. We pray you acquaint our bretheren at Hull with our intencions, and soe we take leave and rest,

Your loving bretheren, the Governor, &c.

Newcastle, 11th of December 1651.

[18 Dec. 1651.]

Allen Gilpin, apprentice to Phenias Allen, being comitted to prison for his abuse donne to Mrs. Hall, a sister of this Companey, peticoned for his releasment, being sory for his offence, and likewise being willing to make satisfaccion, he was sent for, where, for not obeying the Companye's iniuncion, when he was first sent for to answer to her complaynt against him, made his submission in publicke; 2^{ly} he was inioyned forthwith to goe to Mrs. Hall, to make his reall submission to her, for his ill language and miscarriage towards her; and, to that end it should be neyther fayned nor sleight, Mr. Rutter, one of the wardens, and Mr. Francis Gray, were appointed to go with him to see it donne, which at their returne to the courte did report (as they conceived) his submission was sinceare.

Mr. John Emerson [and five others], or any fower of them, are forthwith to compose letters to Sir Arthure Heslerige and Mr. William Maddison: which accordingly being donne were sent away by the post to London the same day. The coppies doe here follow with another letter to the Companey at Yorke:

Mr. Maddison,

The Company of Merchants Adventurers of Newcastle, at a courte holden this day, upon notice of severall goods and shipps seased on lately comed from Holland, which goods, in our apprehencions, ought to goe for manufactures, they ordered that with this enclosed letter to Sir Arthure Heslerige, our worthy frind, be sent to you to present, and to desire his best assistance at the comitty of the navy, that those goods and shipss may be cleared, in which wee also intreat your assistance to labour all the members of that comitty that our goods may be restored. And also to procure if neede be an able attorney in the Courte of Exchequer, to answer both for such shipps and goods, if any shalbe returned seased in this port, and to procure a writt of restitution and apprisment of the said goods and shipps, till the matter be tryed, if the comitty of the navy doe not determine, we thinke to be able to prove by good arguments that the goods are manufactures, and that some of them cam within tearme. Whatever you shall doe for us herein shalbe thankfully acknowledged as a favor, and all charges fully repayed to your content. Herein is sent you inclosed the informacion of one of the masters of the shipps that brought in the goods, which you may make use of, eyther to the comitty of the navy, or to the comissioners of the customes, or both if neede require. We conceive this businesse will concerne more then us, Yorke, Hull, and London, being deeply ingaged in it, having their goods seased on as well as ours. The agents of those places we intreat you resort unto, and know what course they take for gayning their shipps and goods, that you may be the better able to move in our behalfe. It is very hard to be thus brought under the penalty of an acte wee did not in the least imagine to have broke; for the word "manufacture" in the acte did absolutly incurrage us to send for loafe sugar, snutte, and other manufactures made in Holland, and shipped from thence, and now to have them detayned and kept from us, by any strayned interpretation of the acte, is exceeding hard, and farr from that lenity we did expect as free men of this nacion. The businesse will lye much before the comitty of the navy: therefore we pray you be carefull to make all the frinds you kann there. Soe wee take leave and rest,

Your loving frinds the Governor, &c.

Newcastle, December 18, 1651.

The cobby of a letter sent to Sir Arthure Heslerige, dated the 18th of December, 1651.

Right Honorable,

After our due respects. We make bould, out of the sence of your great favors to this toune, to begg your continuance and good helpe on the behalfe of diverse merchants here, who have shipps and goods comed out of Holland, and are seized on, under the pretence of coming in contrary to an act intituled, An Acte for increase of Navigacion, though one of them cam to Yarmoth within the tyme prefixed by the acte, and brought a certificat thereof under the hands and seales of the officers of the Custome House there. Now the great trouble we have is, that those comodities who [sic] have upon them the manufacture of Holland are not accompted here as manufactures, but seized upon, though they (as we say) have the manufacture of Holland upon them, and were brought from the ports where usually such comodities are shipped. Truly, Sir, we find ourselves in a sadd condicion, and much discouraged in our trade, that such seazures should be made of goods that have alwayes bene accompted as the manufacture of Holland, besides they being laden soe tymeously that they might have beene here 14 dayes before the tyme prefixed in the acte, if the winds had not proved crosse, which wee had well hoped would have bene dispenced withall for once, and not soe great severity and extremity used as we find. Good Sir, doe your indevor for us, not only to clear our shipps and goods thus seized upon, but also wee intreat you to move the comitty of the navy that, if possible, we may have a plaine and certaine declaration of the said acte, as to the manufactures of each place, and whatsoever else therein is not fully cleared upp, that wee may know our danger, and prevent the like in future. Sir, wee pray you pardon our bouldnes herein. The premisses are of very great concernment to these northeren partes, for if we should be restrayned for bringing in such comodities, it would occasion them to be at excessive rates, and undoe the trade of our northeren clothing, which is very low alredy, but would undoubtedly receive much incurragment from such returnes if they were permitted. Sir, wee presume much upon your goodness, and soe take our leaves and rest,

Your honor's most humble servant, in the name of the

Christopher Nicolson, Governor.

Here followeth the cobby of a letter sent to the Company of Merchants Adventurers at Yorke, bearing date the 18th of December, 1651 :

Right Worshipfull Sir and Sirs,

The eleaventh of this month wee thought fitt to acquaint you how much wee were like to suffer in our trade by the late acte, intituled, An Acte for the increase of Navigacion, which then wee did not altogether apprehend would have beene soe much extended as now wee understand it is, not only against those comodities wee mentioned in our letter, but diverse others, and indeede by some order that came this post wee have 5 shippes seized upon with their goods, which came from Holland, and did not arrive here till after the tyme lymited, only one of them was at Yarmoth, and, though he brought a certificatt out of the Custome House there, that he was there in tyme, yet shipp and goods are seized upon. The carring on of this busines in this way will inforce both you and us to ioyn as one, not only for clearing what is at present under seizure, but that, for future, wee may perfectly know the nature of all comodities, that, if possible, wee be noe more surprised. Gentlemen, wee desire your speedy resolucion in the premisses. Our condicions are alike, and doth necessarily require us to looke aboute us. Wee shalbe redy to meete you, presuming you will also thinke it convenient, if wee may know the place and tyme, and goe alonge with you in any thinge that may conduce to our mutuall good. Soe hoping to receive a speedy answer wee take our leaves and rest,

Your worships' loving bretheren the governor, &c.

A second letter, of the 22th of December last, sent to Sir Arthure Heslerige ; the cobby followeth :

Sir,

The sadd condicion this Companey of Merchants are in, made us putt you to the trouble of a letter the last post, and being then straytned in regard wee then wanted tyme to enlarge, wee would now willingly supply that defect, and more fully acquaint you with our condition, and intreat your helpe therein. Sir, it is our unhappines at this tyme to have our goods seized and detayned from us, and the shippes that brought them to us, though in our judgments wee are not guilty as to the letter of the law, and should be more free in the equity of it as lawes used to be construed, for the severall goods seized on were such as were shipped in Holland, at the usuall ports, before the 15 of last month, and were forced to stay there till the 29th for a fayre wind, which might plead a fayre excuse, and that wee did not willingly breake the acte. But, besides this, one of the shippes arrived in Yarmoth rode the 30 of November, and received from thence a certificat, from the Custome House officers of that port, with assurance that, though they did not receive the entry of the goods and custome thereof at Yarmoth, which the master offered and would willingly have paid before wittnesses, that the said certificat should cleare the said shipp and goods from the penalty of the acte, in regard shee arrived there almost 24 houres before the acte tooke place, and as it is very hard that this shipp and goods should be seazed upon, by order from the comissioners of the customes, soe it is the more hevy in regard the goods are such as are the manufactures of Holland, except a few dales ; and soe understood by us that are traders, and if they prove not soe, wee must confesse wee doe not know what wilbe indeede a manufacture, and upon that accompt must eyther give over trade or else runn more hazards then is fitt for reasonable men to doe, that would not willingly offend. And in this particuler wee must crave a little liberty to lett you know the inconvenience that will happen to our trade, if these comodities be restrayned as noe manufactures, and the judgment given by the comissoners of the customes at London passe for currant. The comodities are such as loffe suger, which is wrought upp to the full perfection of a manufacture in Holland, the usuall place from whence it is shipped, snutte ~~lynt~~ [tow interlined], a comodity made out of flax, whether of their owne groth or of others is not certaine, because they worke out of both, and the comodity is a manufacture, wrought out of rugh flax, and made fitt for present use, in which manufacture there are these 3 partes, that is, the flax which is made fine and fitt for use by the heckell, the snewtte which is the combeings of the tow which was heckled of the flax, and then there is the tow ; all 3 sorts made upp in 3 severall formes, and fitt for present use, all which wee doe here accompt to be manufactures. And indeede if these and such prove not soe to be, this parte of the cuntry will suffer losse these two wayes, the merchant in these and other goods of the like nature made much of his returnes, which was better to him then to retorne his money by exchange, soe that, if these returnes be debarred, the cloth trade of these partes must suffer, which is badd enough alredy both to the clothier and merchant, for wee conceive it must be granted that where profitt cann not be made by the comodity outward, nor by the returnes homeward, that trade must decay, and prove the preiudice of the trader. But our cloth in these partes doth sell soe in Holland that it will indure to draw our money by exchange but to losse, and, if returnes bee wanting, our trade is losse. And for this cuntry, which is very poore, and not able to dispense much upon any thing, it will receive noe small damage, for whereas, the poore usually have bought 1^{li}. dressed flax for 10^d., 1^{li}. snutte for 5^d., and 1^{li}. tow for 4^d., redy for their spinning, and according to their small quantity of money might have had what proporcion they pleased, whereby they were sett a worke, and had their yarne redy every markett day for the buyer, if they shall want this manufacture wee doe not foresee what will become of the poore in these northeren partes. Wee could instance in severall other manufactures which are now restrayned, and of hopps being of the growth of Holland, or at least shipped from thence at the usuall ports, though now under seizure, which doth in this deare yeare of hopps make ill for the spender. The comissioners of the customes doe not allow loffe suger to be a manufacture, because they say there is only an alteracion of the accidents, but not of the property or quallity, though it be wrought up to the full perfection of a manufacture, which distincion wee take to be too nice, and cann well remember the tyme that interpretacions upon lawes contrary to the plaine words of them was punishable and a breach upon the subiects' liberty. And to be punished by a strained interpretacion of a law, and that this parlament have taken care at all tymes such things should not be donne, and wee hope this care is as much now as heretofore. The comissioners say further, that our officers here are not to allow any thing for a manufacture but such as are wrought upp to the full perfeccion of a manufacture, and yet deney lofe suger as aforesaid. So that really, Sir, wee are at such a losse that wee know not what to trade in, because their resolution is soe sett against us, and the acte soe playne for us. The consideracion of which hath putt us upon the imploring your helpe, knowing none more able to helpe us, and wee hope, in regard of the good will you beare the nacion in generall, and this place in particuler, you wilbe willing. That which wee desire is that our goods and shippes may for the present be released and restored, and that these and other manufactures may be permitted for the good of this poore cuntry and trade, or at least wee may know what goods wee may frely trade in. What favor your honor shall doe for us herein shalbe ever acknowledged by this Companey, who doe really subscribe our selves

Your honor's to command, the Governor, &c.

Here followeth the cobby of a letter of the 22 of December from the Company of Merchants Adventurers of Yorke, to the Company here :

Right Worshipfull Sir and Sirs,

Yours of the 11th instant wee answered the 18th of the same, which wee hope you have received ; since which another from you bearing date the 18th of this instant wee likewise received, to which wee returne you this answer, vidt., that wee intend (God willing) to send Mr. Henry Penrose, a brother of our Companey, to-morrow for London, in relacion to the busines mencioned in your letters, who is to ride post, and our bretheren of Hull have intimated to us that they also doe intend to send for them a merchant and a master of a shipp for London to-morrow also, furnished with instruccions to ioyne with you and us in the premisses. Of this wee thought good to give you notice, according to your desires, that you also may please to hasten away the man or men made choyce of by you with all the expedicion you cann, and although wee apprehend a ioynt consultacion with you and our bretheren of Hull to be very requisite in a busines of soe great concernment for us all, according as you desire it, yet tyme will not admitt of a meeting now, but it neerly consernes all of us to fall into speedy accion for preventing further inconveniencies. And soe wee take leave and subscribe ourselves,

Your worships' loving bretheren the Governor, Assistants and Fellowship of Merchant Adventurers resident in Yorke.
Robert Horner, Governor, in the name of the rest of the Company.

An answer to this of the 25th December here followeth :

Right Worshipfull Sir and Sirs,

Yours of the 22 instant wee have received, whereby we perceive that you and our bretheren of Hull have alredy sent away 2 of the Company and a master of a shipp for London, furnished with instructions not only for the clearing of shippes and goods alredy seazed on, but for preventing of future inconveniencies, if possible, in the managing our Hollands trade. Wee have likewise writt by the post this day to Mr. Robert Johnson, one of our Company who resides at London, ordering him to repaire to Mr. Penrose, and the other two sent, and to ioyn with them in the procicucion of the busines, to whom wee have likewise sent our instruccions. Wee wish good successe in these matters, which soe neerly concernes our northeren trade in generall. And soe wee take leave and rest,

Your loving bretheren, the Governor, &c.

The cobby of a letter with instruccions to Mr. Robert Johnson, at London, dated the 25 of December last, followeth :

Mr. Robert Johnson, Our Company of Merchants Adventurers here, after seizure of severall shippes and goods from Holland, by vertue of a late act intituled, An Acte for increase of Navigacion, having duly wayed the preiudice which is likly to fall upon our trade for future, if wee shalbe debarred from shipping home those goods which are iustly tearmed manufactures, doe desire you to ioyn with Mr. Henry Penrose, of Yorke, and another brother from Hull, which are alredy sent from the Companies there to London, not only for the clearing what is at present under seizure (which Mr. William Maddison, to whome this inclosed is directed, hath notice in our former to him, with whome wee desire you advice, and mutually to accord in the solissiting of our busines), but that for future wee may perfectly know the nature of all comodities, that if possible wee be noe more surprized. Your instruccions wee have likewise sent you inclosed, to which wee referr you, promissing what you expend in the procicucion of this bussines, shalbe thankfully paid you. Soe, desiring to heare from you from tyme to tyme, wee take leave and rest,

Your loving frinds, the Governor, &c.

Instruccions for Mr. Robert Johnson touching the shippes and goods now seazed upon by vertue of the late acte, intituled, An Acte for the increase of Navigacion, and other consideracions in relacion to future trade.

1. Whereas, by a letter from Yorke, dated the 22 present, in answer to ours, wee understand that both from Yorke and Hull, they have sent severall persons, to prosicute the recovery of all goods and shipps seized by vertue of the acte, and doe expect wee will also send upp some to ioyne with them, in regard it is of like concernment to all places interrested in the northeren trade, wee desire you to ioyne with them in solissiting the same, eyther before the comissioners of the customes, comitty of the navy, Councell of State, or Parlament, or before any comitty that may be appointed to have cognizance of these affaires, eyther by petition or otherwise, as you shalbe advized by learned counsell if neede be.

2. That you consult with those appointed from Yorke and Hull touching such points of the acte as trensh most upon our northeren trade, to indevor the disabling of the said acte in such particuler if possible; if not, to obtayne a clearing upp of the word "manufacture," that we may certainly know how to order our selves in our future trade to prevent all such mischeffes hereafter, by knowing what will be allowed for manufacture and what not, for which there is good cause, seeing diverse comodities which wee presumed were absolute manufactures are now seized upon for noe manufactures, and therefore it requireth your best indevors to make the word "manufacture" strech to as many particuler comodities as you can possible, especially snutte, tow, drest hempe, drest flax, of all grouthes, loffe suger, flatt indico, cordige, or any other commodity that you apprehend ought to passe under the nocion of a manufacture.

3. To indevor that hopps or any commodity of Flanders or those adiasent provinces or cuntries which have beene or are usually shipped at any of the ports or creeks in Holland, Zealand, or other province, may hereafter be permitted to be shipped as have beene accustomed, notwithstanding the said acte.

4. That you also cleare upp whether or noe wee may shipp corne from any place beyond the seas, though it should not be of the grouth of that place, in case wee conceive it may be brought home to the merchant's advantage and good of the Comon Wealth.

5. The mayne arguments that you are to use against the restraint made by the said acte is, that those comodities being of necessary use to these northeren partes, and now afforded at very reasonable and low prizes, if they should be restrayned, would be raysed to such excessive rates as could not be borne by the poore people. Besides, these comodities aforenamed occasions the merchants to shipp of their northeren cloth, which setts many poore on worke, the which trade of cloth, would in probability decay utterly, if those comodities should be restrayned, they cheefly being the occasion of keeping that small trade of clothing that is alive.

6. That if you petition you doe it in the name of the Company of Merchants Adventurers.

7. That wee have writt to Mr. William Maddison to assist you to his power, who wilbe redy to his utmost.

Lastly what charges you shall expend in prosecuting this busines, wee shall thankfully pay you. And soe wishing you good successe, desiring to heare often from you, wee rest,

Your loving frinds the Governor, &c.,
Christo: Nicolson, Governor.

[9 January 1651-2.]

Mr. William Maddison's letter from London was redd, wherein hee declares Sir Arthure Haslerigg his kind indevores for this Company, for the disinableing or nulling of the late acte of the first of December last, intituled, An Acte for increase of Navigacion. It being mocioned what should be further donne at present in the premisses it was ordered by generall consent that Mr. Governor should be intreated to write to Mr. Johnson and Mr. Maddison to incurrage them to proceed according to former instruccions sent them.

[12 Feb. 1651-2.]

Mr. William Maddison, for his charges disbursed at London, in the behalfe of this Company in a sute for the frustrating of an acte, intituled, An Acte for encrease of Navigacion, it is ordered that ~~five~~ [seaven interlined] pounds shalbe sent him upp at present, the Company being willing to gratifie him for his paynes hereafter.

[9 March, 1651-2.]

The Company have ordered the wardens to pay unto Mr. Wm. Maddison, of London, the some of tenn pounds, in consideracion of his extraordinary paynes in soliciting in a sute for the ~~frustrating of~~ [freeing of goods seized on by interlined] an acte, intituled, An Acte for encrease of Navigacion; for the rest of his charge expended in the said sute, it is to be defrayed proporcionably by the owners of those shippes which were seized on, and by the merchants which had goods in them, which are to be valued by Mr. John Butler [and four others].

It is ordered that these gentlemen, whose names here follow, are to draw up a petition which is to be presented to the Parliament, in the name and behalfe of this Fellowship, wherein they are to lye doune our greevances for want of a free trade with Holland, without which the Comon Wealth in these partes wilbe much preiudised: (vidt) Mr. Thomas Bonner, Mayor, [and nine others].

It is ordered that George Dobson, John Strangwayes, Michael Milburne and John King, shall pay unto the wardens of this Fellowship before the next courte 9^{li}. 15^s. 6^d., which is the some they received in lew of a parcell of tobacco seized on by them, formerly belonging to Mathew Porter, of Penrith, otherwise they are to be sencured for their default.

A petition to the Parliament was redd, condiseded too, and subscribed in open courte, the cobby whereof here followeth :

To the supreame authority of the Nation, the Parliament of the Comon Wealth of England,

The humble petition of the Merchants Adventurers of Newcastle upon Tyne, Humbly sheweth to your honors that they and their predecessors have bene a Guild or Company of Merchants for diverse hundred of yeares: that by Providence they are seated in a barren and poore cuntry, which comonly requires great supply of corne and other necessaryes: that they are not endowed with great estates, yet through God's blessing a considerable number of them have from tyme to tyme obtayned comfortable livelyhoods to themselves and familyes with a small trade in northeren cloth, and other native comodities to Holland and other places adiacent, and have beene very serviceable to these 5 northeren countyes, in their great wants and penury, by supplying them with corne, and other usfull comodities at reasonable rates and prices, which they were better able to doe by reason of the advantage and opportunity they have above other places in the comodity of cole, by which they comonly make their voyages outwards and bring home their returnes for small freight; that now of a suddaine diverse commodities are growne exceeding dear, which your petitioners impute to the restraint occasioned by the late acte intituled "An Acte for the Encuragment of Navigacion," and doe likewise humbly eonceive it will also occasion the engrossing of all sorts of comodities into particuler men's hands, who will make their owne rates in a short tyme not only to destroy your petitioners' trade, but ruine these poore northeren countyes.

Their humble sute therefore is, that your honors would be pleased to take the premisses unto your prudent and serious consideracions, that such order and course may be taken by your honors herein as that your petitioners may enioy such ancient libertyes and fredomes in their trade for the Low Cuntryes and elsewhere as they and their predicesors have formerly had, they employing shipps according as the said acte provides And they shall ever pray, &c.

Mr. Richard Sutcliffe, being ordered, at a court holden the 12th of February last, to informe against forestallers, ingrossers, and regrayters of corne, for his by past paines the Company have desired the wardens to give him 15^{li}.

Mr. Ralph Gray being imployed at London, anno 1649, to procure convoy for Holland and Eastland, his expences, besides his and his man's charges for 8 dayes after his owne businesse was done, being 1^{li}. 11^s., in the Companie's imployment, it is ordered that 3^{li}. shalbe paid him with thankes.

[30 Sep. 1653.]

The 30^{li}. lent to Mrs. Forster, deceased, 20^{li}. being yet unpaid, the wardens are authorised to sew the bondsmen.

John Todd, cooper, being complained on for selling some quantities of tarr to the country, being sent for to the court, denyed, and if it be proved against him he is willing to submitt to the sensure of the court.

Mrs. Anderson, a sister, complained against Mr. Thursby, because he had caused her to be arreasted, contrary to an act in force, without the leave of the Governor, soe hee is fined 40^s. He then submitting himselfe hath leave granted to sue for grace the next court. Mr. Governor and the two wardens are to indeavour to compose the difference betwixt them.

The petition of Jane and Mary Gibson, infants, daughters to Jonas Gibson, deceased, was read, humbly desireing some releafe from the Company for their better education, being left poore; it was ordered that 5^{li}. should be given them.

Mr. Robert Ellison [and four others], or any three of them, are appointed to treat with three or foure maisters of shipp, and to freight them for Hambrough and home againe, for the Companie's use, who are to take in noe goods, but such as the brethren of this Fellowship doe shipp in them, both outwards and inwards, and none to be shipped in any other shipp or shipp, till the said appointed shipp be loden, upon forfeiture of tenne shillings a cloth, twenty shillings a fother of lead, and tenne shillings of every last of goods homewards.

Here followeth the copy of a petition sent to London:—

To the Honorable the Commissioners for the Admiralty and Navy of this nation,

The humble petition of the Governor, Assistants, and Fellowship of Merchants Adventurers of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, Sheweth that, whereas your honors have been pleased, for the incouragement of trade, to grant unto severall ports particular convoys, for the better secureing of shipp, and merchants' goods transported and imported; and whereas we intend to send for Hambrough, three shipp which wilbe richly laden with cloth, lead, and other goods, and to returne with hempe, tarr, cordage, and other goods, usefull for the navy and Commonwealth, and wilbe ready to set saile the 20th of February next (vidt.): the "William and Edward" of Newcastle, Richard Elbrough, master; the "Marigold" of Newcastle, Rowland Pithy, master; and the "Imployment" of Newcastle, Henry Kirkehouse, master, and what other shippes shall accompany them.

Our humble sute is that your honours wilbe pleased timously to appoint, for the better secureing of your petitioners' intended great adventures to Hambrough and backe againe, two able shippes of warr, for their safe conduct, and for our further incoragement in trade, and as duty binds we shall ever pray, &c.

It is ordered that all persons expecteing the benifitt of freedome by the Company shall not shipp any cloth, lead, or any other goods, but in these shippes appointed by the Company, as by the late act the 26th of January, 1653. This order is to be holden for this shipping.

Lykwyse against Thomas Bolderon, skinner, for the like offence, which were put of to be further debated the next court.

[21 Nov. 1655.]

The difference betwixt Mr. Bartram Anderson and his apprentice, Robert Heselrigge, being deliberately discussed, it was ordered that Mr. Anderson should take his said aprentice againe, or pay hym tenne pounds to procure hym another maister, or upon refusall of one of these within twenty dayes to pay to the Company for his contempt the somme of twenty pounds.

It was ordered that they [the wardens] should goe to Mr. Calverley, to take his advice how to proceed against Michaell Milburne for his arreares, and for his contempt against the Company, and to give a reporte of the buissines the next court day.

It was ordered that, whereas there formerly was a seizure made of a load of French wyne sold by Richard Wylson, taylor, to one Henry Woodburne, of Kendall, as foraigne bought and sold, that the wardens should open the same and taste it and give an account of it the next court.

[6 Feb. 1655-6.]

Mr. Leonard Carr [and five others] are to take into their serious consideration the best course about the recovery of the lost privileges of Merchants Drapers, which for a long tyme have beene detayned from them, and to give notice of their proceedings herein to the court.

[14 Feb. 1655-6.]

Mr. Robert Huntley, one of the wardens, complaininge that he was sued by Humphrey Bolderon, as an artizan skinner, he desired to know whether the Company would owne hym, and beare his charge in the sayd suite, beinge put to the courte it was carried in the affirmative.

[21 March 1655.]

Raiph Burrell's petition was read, intimatinge that his father, Tymothy Burrell, late of this towne, was capable of his freedome, yet had neglected to take the same, therefore desired the Company would, upon some reasonable fine, admitt hym a free brother, which, beinge discussed in court, a personall freedome was granted hym, he payinge for the same to the Company 50^{li.}, and this he hath tyme to consider of tyll next court.

A presentment was given in against Charles Richardson, a brother of this Company, for vendinge severall quantities of soape marked R. R., suspected to be bought of Robert Richeson, contrary to a late act of this Fellowship, but he pleadinge ignorance of the sayd act, and promiseinge not any more to offend in the like, the Company were pleased to pass by this offence.

Anthony Dobson, apprentice to Wylliam Nicholson, desired to be set over to Mr. John Emerson, but because he had transgressed an antient act of this Company, beinge divers yeares out of his maister's service, and not turned over, haveinge thereby forfeited all the tyme which he had already served, yet takinge his condition into their serious consideration; and the rather, because he had beene in the Parliament's service for some tyme; as alsoe being distempered in his braine, by opinion of the doctors, as did appeare by certificate under their hand exhibited in court, was councelled to goe to sea tyll he might recover, it beinge thought an expedient for it; but more especially out of the favorable respect this Company beares to his father, John Dobson, are pleased, out of their great favor to him, and for the respects afforesayd, to admitt hym to be turned over to the aforesayd Mr. Emerson, he payinge as a fine to this Company, for his offence, twenty pounds, and this to be no president for the future.

A brother of this Company complained of divers apprentices for their non-conformity to the acte concerninge their haire, apparell, and behavior, who are to be summoned against the next court, some of which were sent for this day, but did not appeare, namely, Robert Stoddart, Thomas Applegarth, Robert Dickinson, George Bulmer, Nicholas Fenwicke, James Whitehead, and Marmaduke Laiton.

A petition was read from Anthoney Bales, whose sonne, Tobie Bales, was bound apprentice to Mr. Thomas Davison, haveinge onely served hym 10 moneths, and his body infirme, not any way fitt to doe his Mr. more service, desired his sayd sonne to be released, and crossed the booke, and his younger sonne to be suffred to be bound to the sayd Mr. Davison and inrowled, which petition, in favor to Mr. Davison, was granted.

A note of the names of severall apprentices who had comitted fornication, and thereby had not onely transgressed against an old act, anno [blank in MS.] but a late act of this Company, made 26th October, 1655.* Their names given in to court were as followeth :

Nicholas Cramlington, apprentice to Mr. Henry Rawlinge, absent from his master for a longe tyme, but now in his service ; Cuthbert Wilkinson, apprentice to Thomas Maddison ; John Shadforth, apprentice to Mr. Peter Sanderson ; Francis Pattison, apprentice to Oswould Matfin ; Henry Foster, apprentice to Henry Thompson.

Thomas Glover, apprentice to Wylliam Blackett, did ingage in open court, he beinge to take up his freedome beyond sea with his master's letter and Mr. Governor's certificate, not at any tyme to consent to the disfranchizinge of his sayd master, or to move the same, but rather to returne without his freedome. If he shall breake this his ingagement he is not to have any freedome of this Company.

[26 Sep. 1656.]

A complainte exhibited by Tymothy Lomax, a brother of this Company, against Raiph Cocke, for opprobrious and scandalous and abusive language, and alsoe for beatinge the sayd Tymothy. The Companie takeinge the buissines into serious consideration, and it beinge thought a disparagment to this Fellowship to suffer such abuses and disorders to passe unpunished, and to prevent such actions for the future, have fined the sayd Raiph Cocke five pounds.

Mr. John Emerson and Mr. Wylliam Carr, at this court, were appoynted to treat with the drapers of this towne, about our Merchant Drapers' priveledge, usurped by them. The wardens ordred to goe and desire a meetinge of them.

The wardens were desired to speake with the Drapers of this towne, and to require a meetinge with those appointed by this Company, within fourteene dayes next ensueinge.

John Hudson, late apprentice to Samuel Rawlinge, deceased, beinge sicke at Bridlington, petitioned for tyme to chuse a maister. It was assented to that 6 moneths' tyme should be given hym.

[3 Dec. 1656.]

The Company were pleased to give unto the Secretary, in consideration of his journey to London, five pounds, and the horse that he there bought for the Companie's use.

Mr. John Butler, in consideration of a horse of his, lamed and spoyled in the Companie's service, had allowed him 40^s.

* See pages 26-7.

Mr. John Emerson gave this day an account of a conference had with the drapers, wherein the sayd drapers doe pretend to be the onely drapers of this towne, as, they say, they will make appeare. They have promised, after the acquaintinge of their Company, to give another meetinge, and Mr. Emerson and Mr. William Carr are desired by this Company to meete them accordingly.

A complaint beinge exhibited in court against the undue demandinge of 5^{li}. per cent. by the commissioners of excise, more then what is payd to the Custome House by the brethren of this Fellowship, a comittee was appoynted to consider of the best way and meanes for the redressinge of this greivance. Their names: Mr. John Emerson [and five others], or any 4 of them.

These gentlemen meetinge the 8th day of December, beinge Monday, thought it convenient to write to the Honorable Walter Strickland, one of the Lords of his Highness' Privie Councell, and present burgess for this towne, which followeth:

Sir, There hath lately beene, at this porte, the Surveyor Generall of the Excise, who hath left instructions with the sub-commissioners here to take 5 per cent. more then formerly hath beene taken since it was settled in this place, which is now full 12 yeares. The 5 per cent. is this: the Custome House doe allow 5^{lb} in every hundreth for good weight and waste; the merchants make their entries, and must be passed in the Excise Office before they can be accepted in the Custome House, and usually done to this tyme, entries of the same weight passed in both the offices. But since the surveyor gave this order wee cannot passe our entries, unlesse wee will make them 5^{lb}. in the hundreth more then the Custome House entries, which, if continued, would be a great discouragement to our trade, and trouble to all parties. Now it's true that the ordinance for the excise holds out, that every man shall pay for what he buyes of the merchant, and so the merchant payes no excise, and what waist so ever happens in the merchant's hands payes no excise either by the merchant or buyer. Now our case is this: Most, if not all, of our Company are shopkeepers, and so by our commissioners here are looked upon as retaylors, by which meanes we pay the excise presently, without takeinge any tyme, or have any allowance for waste, which is a great comoditie and profit to the state, seinge they have alwayes ready money for the excise of our goods, and never any thinge allowed us for waste. Though it prove oft a very long tyme, 3, 4, nay some tymes 6 yeares ere wee receive money for them. Nay some of our Company have goods that have payd excise for 8 yeares agoe, and others have goods are perished and worth nothinge. Once before, the same bussines was indeavored to be put upon us, but upon our adress to the then commissioners, for the former reasons, the order was not put in execution. Our Company beinge in this troubled condition, by this new order to these officers here, have not any they can with confidence apply themselves unto as your Honor. And therefore would humbly intreate your honour to make us what helpe you can in this perticuler, by useinge your intrest with the commissioners, that this order may be suspended as formerly ; and that, for the reasons abovenamed, wee may not be troubled to make such entries as is required, nor pay any more money then formerly, seinge the state hath so much advantage by our present payment. For which, as all your favors to this towne and Company, &c.

A cobby of this letter was sent to Mr. Hartlib.

Ordred, That the same comittee shall draw a petition for the takeinge of the 5^{lb}. per cent. in the excise, annexinge the reasons why it ought not to be levied of the brethren of this Company.

[30 Dec. 1656.]

Mr. Raiph Cocke, not haveinge brought in his 5^{li}. fine, accordinge to order and acts of our court, was adiudged to pay the same to the wardens double.

[19 January 1656-7.]

Raiph Cocke beinge formerly fined, upon his submission and petition, they were pleased out of their great grace and favor to hym, onely to take of his sayd fine forty shyllings.

Mr. Henry Marley for his uncivill carriage to the Governor and Company, though often silence was desired, and beinge comanded to withdraw refused, for his contempt and incivility was fined 5^{li}.

[26 Jan. 1656-7.]

Mr. Raiph Cocke, for some unbeseeminge words to Mr. Robert Huntley, one of the wardens, was fined 30^s.

[8 May 1657.]

A presentment, by a brother of the Company, against Mathew Jefferson and Tymothy Robson, for vending of rye out of the loft in Gateside, which beinge contrary to an ancient act of the Company, he was called by the Governor before hym, but pleadinge ignorance of the sayd act, and promisinge for the future not to offend in the ilke, it was passed by.

Mr. Thomas Bonner informed that Mr. Henry Warmonth, late alderman of this towne, had left to this Fellowship, by his last will, 100^{li}., to be disposed of as they should thinke fitt, and withall declared that Mr. John Rushworth, who was to pay over this money, desired a bond to be kept harmeles for the payment of the same. It was ordred that a bond should be given him, by the present wardens, and they to be kept harmeles by this Fellowship. (The foresayd 100^{li}. beinge in Mr. Thomas Bonner's hand, he profered his owne and brother Michaell's bond to pay it in when it came dew, which was accepted of by the Company, and he is to give the bond accordingly.)

An assistant wantinge, and Mr. Leonard Carr beinge desired to come, or otherwise there could be noe court, his answere was that while the court was a court of records he came, but since it hath ceased to be that he would not, and desired the Company would chuse another.

Francis Pattison, apprentice to Mr. Oswould Matfin, haveinge above 8 moneths absented himself from his master's service, and not likely to returne (his misdemeanors beinge so many and of such high nature) to his said service, it was ordred that the sayd Pattison, or in his absence some of his freinds, should be summoned to appeare at the next court, to show a reason why he should not be crossed the booke.

The secretary was ordred to write a note to Mr. Recorder, to certifie hym that this Company doth owne the suete that is betwixt Humphrey Boldron, and Mr. Robert Huntley, one of the wardens of the Fellowship, as their owne buissines, and therefore to desire him not to be entertained by Bouldron, but as a councell for the Company, of which he is a member, the priveledges of which by oath he is to mayntaine, to undertake the same.

Because of the absence of Mr. Matfin, his servant Pattison was not crossed the booke, though his misdemeanors have beene great towards his sayd master, and his cariage towards the Company very scandalous; but was put of tyll the next court, when his master is to be present.

The difference betwixt the Merchant Drapers, members of this Company, and the now drapers of this towne, was this day taken into consideration; but beinge a buissines thought more fitt to be heard before a Common Councell then in this court, it was ordred that Mr. Robert Rutter, Mr. Henry Bowes, and the rest of this Fellowship therein concerned, should attend the Comon Councell, than an end and period to that diffrence may be had.

Francis Pattison, for his great misdemeanors to his master, and the great scandall which by his meanes might ly upon the Company, if his master should againe intertaine hym to his service, was crossed the booke.

Mr. Henry Bowes, junior, beinge demaunded whether his servant

Stoddart were in his service, and upon what accompte he was absent, he answered that he was in Holland by his permission. Beinge asked whether the sayd Stoddart did trade in company with his sayd master, he sayd not; but confessed that his adventure was near 40^{li}. in one ship from Holland, which was ordred to be taken notice of.

John Strangwayes was ordred to enquire of Mr. Jacob Blenkinsopp how longe George Sheffield hath beene out of his service, and whether the scandall which is upon hym bee reall or feigned, and to give an accompt thereof the next court day.

The company were pleased to take the Secretarye's paynes in January and February last, at London and Westminster, into their consideration, and accordingly have ordred hym the some of tenne pounds.

It was ordered that Mr. Francis Burton should give an accompt to the Company whether his late apprentice, Laurence Swainson, continue yet in his service, it being informed that he hath for 3 yeares by past lived in the country with his freinds.

It was ordered that Robert Cooke, master of the "Barbara" of Newcastle, and Henry Alvey, master of the "Patience," ibid., at their returne from Holland should be questioned whether they carried over any forraigners' or interloopers' goods, which, if they did, none of the brethren of this Fellowship are to shipp any goods in them inward or outward tyll the tyme lymitted in the act be expired.

[6 January 1657-8.]

William Haddon, apprentice to Mr. Robert Roddam, Wylliam Wrangham, apprentice to Mr. Wylliam Rea, Arthur Fenwicke, apprentice to Mr. Raiph Forster, haveinge departed their masters' services, and married within the tearmes of their apprentishipp, were ordred to be crossed the booke.

A petition from Edmond Midleton, desiringe his freedome of this Fellowship, for some reasonable fine, accordinge to the discretion of the Company, was read, but his petition for some reasons reserved was not granted hym.

[27 Jan. 1657-8.]

John Paul, apprentice to John Strangwayes, at Hambrough since May last, informed by a brother of this Company that he intended for Russia.

[17 Feb. 1657-8.]

Three of the brethren were appoynted to treat with the Drapers of this towne, to see if they can happily compose the difference betwixt them and the drapers of this Company.

Severall apprentices, traders, were called into court, and upon examination their confessions were (viz.): Wylliam Wallis, apprentice to Mr. Metcalfe, confessed he had traded, but not above 20^{li}. at once, not in company with his master; not denieinge some hogsheads of thrumbs (alias wool) shipped by hym for Holland, within 3 weekes, entred company with his master.

Robert Waithman, apprentice to Mrs. Mann, confessed some cloth shipped for his owne accompt, and goods received in Jacob Clauson, but not all the presentment; pretends that Mr. Miles Mann had part of the sayd goods. Mr. Miles Mann the court before did disowne 8 last of rye the sayd Waythman had in Henry Alvey.

Marmaduke Layton, apprentice to Mr. Robert Rutter, confessed that, the last voyage into Holland in Robert Cooke, he had an adventure of stockings, &c., amountinge to the some of 50^{li}. sterlinge, or thereabout, not in joynt stock with his master, but denyes he had any cloth as he was presented for.

Gabriell Fulthorp, apprentice to Mr. Milbank, confessed 3 last of rye in Henry Alvey, but that one halfe belonged to William Sanderson, late apprentice to Metcalfe Rippon.

[3 March 1657-8.]

Anthony Markendale, apprentice to Mr. John Lodge, haveinge beene for some yeares from his master, contrary to an act of this Company, is ordered to bringe a certificate from some commission officers' hands in the army that he hath beene in the State's service dureinge his absence from his sayd master; otherwise not to receive his freedome of this Fellowship.

[6 June 1658.]

It was ordred that a forme of a letter should be drawne, and that every master, when he certifies beyond sea with his servant for his freedome, shall call on the secretary for the same, and that no apprentice shall goe over without certificate with the letter, upon penalty of twenty pounds to be inflicted upon the master for such neglect.

Mr. Henry Bowes, junior, for giveinge the lye in open court to Mr. Mathew Jefferson, was fined 3^{li}. 6^s. 8^d.

A complaint exhibited against James Stancliff, Lionell Blagdon, and James Hargrave, for refuseinge to cary the corps of Mr. Edward Dobson to the church ; and their contempt was referred to the next court.

[11 June 1658.]

It was ordred that if any brother beinge warned to carry the corps of any brother or sister to the church, if they shall absent or refuse, to pay for every such offence three shyllings and foure pence.

[30 June 1658.]

[Cuthbert Wilkinson, apprentice to Thomas Maddison B. admitted] he was at the same court for fornication fined 13^{li}. 6^s. 8^d., which he accordingly payd.

[23 Aug. 1658.]

An information, dated June the 8th last, was by Mr. Railph Cocke presented against Mr. William Gray, junior, wherein Mr. Cocke set forth that, upon a differance betwixt them, he told Mr. Gray he would aske leave of Mr. Governor to arrest him ; to which he answered he cared not a fart for the Governor. Mr. Cocke replied if he should acquaint the Governor he would repeat his words, to which Mr. Gray answeareing sayd he cared neither a fart nor a turd for the Governor, for which absurd and filthye languish he was fyned twenty pounds.

Mr. William Gray, junior, for saying in open court that his brother, Mr. Francis Gray, was as good a man as Mr. William Carr, an antient brother of and assistant to this Company, was fyned thre pounds six shillings and eight pence.

Mr. Peter Sanderson for undulie certifieing to the court at Hamburgh the true and faithfull service of his servant, John Shadforth, without the accustomed certificate from the governor and wardens of this Fellowship (the sayd John Shadforth at a court holden here the 27th of Januarye 1657 being amongst others for the transgressions of the acts of this Company voted and rendred uncapable of receiveing or inioying any benifitt or freedome of this Societie, his sayd master being then present) was fined for his offence the sume of one hundred pounds.

The assistants of this Fellowship, or any six of them, were desyred to send for foure able workemen, to witt, two masons and two house carpinters, to view the decays of the Merchants' Court att the first convenient tyme they can, and to report the same to this Companye.

[24 Sep. 1658.]

Ambrose Cuthbertson, apprentice to Mr. Thomas Welsh, confessed to have traded in flax and drest hempe out of joynt stocke with his master, as alsoe that he had in commissition [sic] halfe a last of flax belonging to a Hull mann, and six barrells of honey of Peter Watson's, apprentice to Mr. George Watson.

John Bell, apprentice to Mr. Willyam Rea, and set over by order of court to Mrs. Susanna Blaxistone, for that he departed his mistress her service, above foure monthes agoe, and sence haveing marryed a wife, haveing not then served above foure yeares and eight monthes, was crossd the bookes.

A report in court by a brother was made of the uncivill and lascivious carriage of George Bulmer, apprentice to Mr. Peter Burwell, with a woman at Sheilds, and that Captaine Toppin, one of the Justices of the Peace for the County of Northumberland, had committed the woman to Morpeth Gaole for her lewdnesse; it is ordered that Captain Toppin should be desyred to certifie the truth of it, that soe the sayd Bulmer may be proceeded against according to his demerit.

Mr. Willyam Gray, junior, his information against Mr. Railph Cocke, was considered off, and in regard Mr. Gray could not make appeare that Mr. Cocke had spoken that abusive languish in the sayd information layd downe, it was dismissed.

Mr. John Emmerson and Mr. Willyam Carr (Mr. Robert Ellison being then absent) after those of this society that meets with the present Drapers had withdrawen, reported what progresse was made in that differance betwixt this Company and those that now exercise the traide of Drapers, at there last meeting before Mr. Recorder. The substance whereof was that Mr. Recorder had taken a greate deale of paines in writeing downe what was made cleare to him, to witt, that this Company had for above 100 yeares agoe, and that for divers yeares together, chosen those Drapers from amongst themselves which did auditt the towne's accompts; and that it appeares by our bookes that soe long as any record was kept of makeing choyce of Mercers and Boothmen, soe long the lyke care was taken to record the Merchant Drapers for auditors; and that, without all peradventure, this Fellowship constantly received the auditt money for Drapers untill the yeare 1629, and this themselves cannot deny. It was expected our opponents should then have given in there answeare, but in regard it was late, and they seemeing very backward, Mr. Recorder withdrew, and noe more for present was done. Yet Mr. Recorder appoynted the next day to have a further heareing of the busynesse, but some of the Drapers next morneing goeing to him stoped his comeing downe.

The committee formerly appoynted to prepare instructions to be sent to our burgesses in Parliament were at this court desyred to meete and conferr with the maisters of the Trinity House, who desyres we would joyne with them in petitioning the Parliament for redresse of those wrongs exercised by the formers of the customes of coles.

This petition following was read, approved of, and subscribed by the generality of the Company then present, and delyvered to the maisters of the Trinity House, who hath promised to get it presented to this present Parliament now sitting at Westminster.

The Humble Petition of the Merchants Adventurers of the towne and county of Newcastle upon Tyne,

Humbly Sheweth,

That they doe with all thanckfullnesse acknowledge the great care former Parliaments have had of the traide and navigation of these nations, whereby the natives might receive all due incouragement, and no probable inconvenience put upon them by the imployment of the shipping of forreingers and strangers, appeareing by those good lawes made to that effect; the benifitt whereof your petitioners hoped in some ample measure to have reaped, being much concerned, as owners and traiders, in severall vessells that are freequently imployed in the transportation of coles (the grand commodity of these northren counties) to divers parts beyond the seas, which trade hath been formerly managed both to the advantage of the Commonwealth and your petitioners. But since the custome of all coles to be transported were formed by Mr. Martin Nowell, he, or some collourably for him, or in confideracy with him, as we humbly conceive, by the constant frighting and imploying of the shipps of aliants, hath soe supplied the cheife places of trafficke beyond the seas, that it hath renderred the trade disadvantageous and unprofitable to the natives. And by the undue proceedings of him and his officers in compelling the maisters of English shipps to cleare for a greater quantity of coles then are really layd aboard, in staying there shipps unlaiding, and takeing away part of there coles, detaineing there cockets after entryes made and custome payd for them, upon pretence of short cleareing, without any course taken by him or his officers for the discovery of the truth thereof, as formerly hath beene accustomed. And some, who by violent stormes hath beene forced beyond the seas, which they are ready to attest upon oath, have at there returne beene constraýnd to pay more then the tripple custome of there coles, and others soe long detayned in harbour by them, that, looseing the oportunity of the winde, and fleate, and convoy, have with there shipps and goods of considerable vallue beene a prey to the merciless enemye. And notwithstanding all this rigour excercised towards natives, yet incouragement hath beene given to strangers, by remitting of 2^s. and 10^d. in every chalder of coles was formerly imposed upon them; whereby that traide is cheifely put into there hands, to the dishonour of the English Nation, the rendering of our owne shipping (the greatest bulworks of our land) unservicable, the maisters, owners, and marryners discouraged, and your petitioners much preiudiced.

May it therfor please your honors,

That the sayd Mr. Martin Nowell may be summoned to render an accompt of these arbitrary and unlawfull

actings, soe much destructive to the trade and navigation of this commonwealth, that reparation may be made by him to the persons iniured by his officers dureing the tyme of his formeing the customes of the sayd coles. That for the furture the customes may be put into the hands of such commissioners as may give all due incouragment for the increase of the trafficke and shipping of the nation,

And your petitioners shall pray, &c.

The humble petition of Jane, wedow of Samuell Robinson, decased, a late free brother, was read, wherein she layd downe her necessitous condition, being left with six children and nothing to releive herselfe or them, besides the charity of her well disposed nighbours, had out of great favour and Christian compassion tenn pounds given her towards there support.

[9 March 1658-9.]

Mr. Henry Hargrave his petition was read, the effect whereof was that whereas he had taken extriordianary paynes in saveing part of the loading in Mr. George Swaddell his shipp, when she came aground on the Hird, neere Tynmouth Haven, at her last comeing from Hamburgh, being thereunto desyred by the mayor part of those merchants that were concerned in her loading, for which he was by them promised reasonable satisfaction, which he demaunding was refused, therefor humbly petitioned this Company would please to appoynt some brethren of the Fellowship to heare the same. It was thereupon ordered that Mr. John Emmerson [and three others] or any 3 of them should heare and determayne the same.

A presentment against Andrew Gilbertson, apprentice to Mr. Richard Rawling, was read, for that he should enter the 26th of Fruary 1658, twenty halfe cloathes and shipp them in John Wellborne of Hull. His mayster being asked whether they belonged to him, answered he had noe such cloath neither that he knew anything of it.

Mr. John Emmerson [and others] being at the last court ordered to heare and determaine a differance betwixt those merchants of this Fellowship that were concerned in the loading of Mr. George Swaddell his shipp at her last voyage from Hamburgh, and Mr. Henry Hargrave, reported that they had ordered Mr. Hargrave the sume of 10^{li}. for his paynes therein.

Severall brethren were fyned 2^s. a peece, for that they kept private discourse at this or the last court, after Mr. Governor had twice smitt upon the board. It was ordered that every brother that then layd downe the aforesayd fyne should have 10^d. given againe. But for such as were present and alyke guylty and would not then submit, there fynes should be placed to there severall accompts.

[28 April 1659.]

Whereas the 25th day of March last there was a bagg of fflax belonging to Thomas Turner of Gatesyde seized for the use of the Mayor and Burgesses of Newcastle upon Tyne as fforreigne bought and fforreigne sold, being contrary to the previledges of the aforesayd burgesses, and the company of Merchant Adventurers of the sayd towne of Newcastle; I, the sayd Thomas Turner, doe hereby bynde myselfe in the sume of ffifty pounds of lawfull money of England not to doe that for the future which may infringe the lawfull lyberties of the companye of the aforesayd Merchants Adventurers, witnesse my hand this 28th day of Aprill anno Domini 1659.

Signed in the presence of Tho. Turner.

[22 June 1659.]

A letter from Captaine Toppin, with an information by him taken upon oath, was read, whereby a greate deale of uncivill carryage in George Bulmer is lyke to appeare. It is ordered that the sayd Bulmer have notice to appeare at next court to make his defence therein.

At this court was taken into consideration by what certificate Anthonye Markindale (late apprentice to Mr. John Lodge) gott his admittance into the Company at Hamburgh. This Fellowship was satisfied that the Right Worshipfull Marke Milbancke, present maior, Mr. Ambrose Barnes, Alderman, and Mr. Henry Slinger, did wryte or certifie in his behalfe whereby he obtayned his aforesayd admittance without this Companye's accustomed certificate. At which tyme also Mr. Governor of this Fellowship being not satisfied of the good service of the sayd Markindale (he haveing beene for a long tyme absent from his master his service) refused to certifie with him. This court conceived that the certifieing of these gentlemen, as it was without president, soe hath proved very preiudiciall to the well being of this Society ; the Companies both at Hamburgh and Dort haveing ever since receited our auntient certificates by governor and wardens. And therefor (after a long debate) this court, by generall consent, ordered that the aforesayd Mr. Milbancke, Mr. Barnes, and Mr. Slinger, should pay as a fyne to the use of this Fellowship the sume of one hundred and fifty pounds, to witt fifty pounds a piece.

Mr. Oswould Midford's petition [rejected at a previous court], wherein he humbly desyred he might be permitted to take an apprentice to be set over to a traiding brother, was (upon his earnest intreaty) taken into further consideration. The Company considered that he was a very auntient member of the Fellowship, and his condition necessitous, that altho he liv'd not in towne, yet he did live within the liberties thereof, where he had a small imployment from the towne, being the greatest part of his support ; it being also not probable he will for the future move for the lyke favour, he was for these reasons allowed to take an apprentice as aforesayd, but this to be no president for the future.

A letter from Mr. Timothy Lomax to Mr. Governor was read, wherein he desired his necessitous condition might be taken into this Companie's consideration, and some supply affoorded him, the rather because he formerly payd a considerable sume as a fyne to this Fellowship. But in regard he did not petition according to forme, it was referred untill such a petition was presented.

George Bulmer, apprentice to Mr. Peter Burwell, according to former order appeared. The coppie of an information taken upon oath by Maior Jo. Topping was read in his heareing. George Bulmer altogether denied any such uncivill carriage with Ann Johnson, in North Sheilds, as was hinted in the sayd information. Notwithstanding [sic] it was ordered that it should be taken notice off in the margent of his enrollment, to the end that when he comes to desire his freedome of this Fellowship further inquirie might be made herein.

Mr. Godfrey Comyn informed that Henry Alvey, master of the "Patience," had lately brought from this place greate quantities of flax and tow to the value of 200^{li} starling, being the goods of Denis Johnson, a Duchman, liveing in Rotterdam, and that Henry Alvey sold them here for the accoumpt of the sayd Johnson ; this busynesse is to be further examined at the retorne of Henry Alvey, who is now upon a voyage in the East.

[9 Nov. 1659.]

Mr. Timothy Lomax his petition was read, being not able to maintaine his wife and charge. He had the sume of tenn pounds given him towards his releife.

[6 Feb. 1659-60.]

Mr. Jacob Blenkinsopp, being reduced to a necessitous condition, and at present under restraint, humbly petitioned for some releife. The Company ordered him five pounds towards his subsistance.

John Shadforth, apprentice to Mr. John Bowes, and since by order of court sett over to Mr. Peter Sanderson, haveing formerly beene presented for committing fornication dureing the tyme of his service, as also that he was absent from the service of his master for the space of two yeares and a halfe, and lived at large in the country or elsewhere. And now haveing marryed a wife, wanting aboute fifeteene monthes of compleating the tearme of his apprenticeshipp, all which being directly against the acts of this Fellowship: it was at this court ordered that the sayd John Shadeforth for the foregoeing reasons should be crossed this Companie's bookes.

These brethren whose names follow, they, or any two or more of them, were ordered to require all who traide in any commodities appertaineing to mercers and boothmen being nott free with them, to shut in there shopps if they keepe any, and to seaze on all such waires and commodities bought or sold by any that are foreigners to the freedome of the sayd mercers and boothmen, for the use of the mayor and burgesses, and they further are orderd to restraine all pedlers and others nott free of this towne to keepe any stalls or boothes within the sayd towne. Mr. Mayor's warrant is to be desyred for there better encouragment and securitye: Mr. Francis Gray [and 15 others].

Whereas our late recorder, Mr. Marke Shafto, had taken notes and stated the case of the differance betwixt the Company of Merchant Drapers and those of this towne that at present excercise the traide of Drapers; Mr. John Emmerson was desyred to speake with our present recorder, Mr. Robert Shafto, and request him in this Companie's name he would be carefull to preserve the sayd papers when he shall meet with them amongst his late father's.

Robert Crow, late apprentice to Mr^{ris}. Lewen, deceased, humbly petitiond this day that the Fellowship would be pleased to consider of a differance betwixt Mr. Francis Gray and him, with whome he had contracted (by the advice of his friends, after the death of his m^{ris}) to serve him the remainder of his apprenticeshipp, for which he had payd Mr. Gray the sume of 35^{li.}, Mr. Gray promising he would set him over by order of court, which is not yet done, though he had continued fiveteene monthes in his service, but on the contrary that he had turned the sayd Robert Crow out of his service, without any iust cause (as he conceived). The Company tooke this into serious consideration; Mr. Gray was desyred to give reasons of his soe dealeing with his servant; he replied that he was subborne [sic] and undutifull, and that he neither would nor could any longer entertayne him in his service, though he was severall tymes by Mr. Governor and the whole Fellowship thereunto desyred, the young man also promiseing to doe him the best service he could. Whereupon Mr. Gray was ordered to withdraw; after which the Fellowship deliberately considering the premisses, ordered that Mr. Francis Gray should forthwith restore to Robert Crow the 35^{li}. he had received with him, whereby he might be inabled to provide himselfe of a tradeing brother of this Company for a master to serve the residue of his tearme unto, and that he should give him in the indenture bond or what other ingagements soever Mr. Gray had from the sayd Crow. Mr. Gray being called in and told what the court had ordered fell into passion and very uncivill languish against Mr. Governor, telling him that he would not let his horse stand soe long at dore as he had caused him to stand for the hearing of an idle fellow prate; which he agrevated by his deportment to the whole Company, ill becomeing any member in open court. He was ordered againe to withdraw, and after debate he was for these his words and refractory deportment, together for that he had kept his servant 15 monthes not set over, by order of court contrary to the acts of this Fellowship, he was fyned the sume of 20^{li}.

[30 July 1660.]

A presentment was read wherein is layd downe that Mr. Robert Johnson should ioyned in partnership with one Lev^t.-Collonell John Rogers and one Mr. Willyam London (foreigners to the freedome of this towne and Companie) in severall shippes' ladeings of bigg from Scotland, and should sell part thereof out off his lofts here. In regard of Mr. Johnson's absence at this court it was ordered this shall be considered of when Mr. Johnson shall be present.

[15 Aug. 1660.]

The right worshippfull Thomas Bonner, Esq^r., present maieur of this towne, haveing the last weeke required all the freemen of this Corporation to meet him in the Guild Hall of the same towne on Munday last; being mett accordingly, Mr. Maior declared to them that he had received a letter from the King's majestie which he then produced, and it being thus directed, To the Maior, Aldermen, Recorder, and Comonalty of the Corporation of our Towne of Newcastle upon Tyne, he told them he would not open it untill he had first called them together. It being there opened and read it containned as followeth:

CHARLES REX. Whereas request hath beene made unto us by Richard Lambert, a man of knowne integrity, wee have thought good to recommend him unto you as a most fit person for Towne Clarke of your Corporation, and the rather because wee hope his merits will deserve your free election, which as you claime by charter wee shall not molest you in it, further then referr it to your consideration. From our Court at White [sic] Hall this 12th of July 1660.

After the reading whereof Mr. Maior desyred to know what answeare they would returne to his Matie.

The Commons requested a weak's tyme to consider of there answeare, which was granted, and it was then ordered that two of every of the severall companies of this towne should meet and consider of what answeare to returne to Mr. Maior on Munday next.

Mr. Anthony Dobson moved that, whereas he had seized on some sacks of wheate which belonged to Mr. Willyam Rutter, draper, and by him sold to a Baxster in Gatesyde (a forrainger to the freedome of this Corporation), that the Company would order the disposeall thereof. This was referred to the next court.

These gentlemen, Mr. Willyam Johnson [and five others] or any three of them, were desyred to meet with some masters of shippes (such as the Trinity House shall appoynt) to consider what fees were taken by the Customers, Collectors, and other the King's officers in this port in the fourth yeare of King James, and to report the same to the Committee for Customes and Excise before the 10th of November next.

Thomas Starkin, marryner, petitioned as followeth :

To the Right Worshippfull Christopher Nicolson, Esqr., Governor, the Assistants and whole Fellowship of Merchants Adventurers of Newcastle upon Tyne.

The humble petition of Thomas Starkin, marryner, and freeman of this towne,

Sheweth,

That your petitioner comeing lately out of the East Country, with Mr. John Simpson, did returne his wages in flax ; and being ignorant of the acts of this worshippfull Company sold the same (being two hundred weight) to a forrainger to the freedome of this Corporation, which flax was seized by Mr. Roger Proctor, merchant, as forraigne bought and forraigne sold, and is still detain'd from your orator.

His humble sute is that your worships would be pleased to restore him the sayd flax, and he doth hereby ingage not to transgresse in the lyke for the future, and shall ever pray for the prosperity of your worshippfull Society, &c.

It was ordered that Thomas Starkin should have his flax restored, he signeing this petition.

[8 Nov. 1660.]

Ordered that the wheate seized on by Mr. Anthony Dobson, with the sacks in which it was, should be apprized, and that it be forthwith sold.

[13 Feb. 1660-1.]

Railph Fell, master and marryner, petitioned for a full of battery seized on (as forraigne bought and forraigne sold) by Mr. Anthony Dobson. Mr. Fell layd downe that the one halfe of the sayd battrey belonged either to Mr. Railph Henderson or Mr. John Bailes, merchants, the other was part of his shipp's stocke, being the "Greenland Merchant," whereof he was then master. The court ordered that he should have the battrey restored him.

[5 April 1661.]

Mr. George Beadnell, haveing arrested Mr. Henry Thompson, a brother of this Fellowship, without leave of Mr. Governor, is, according to the acts of this Company, to pay his fyne of 40^s. Mr. Henry Thompson to pay the lyke fyne for arresting Mr. George Beadnell without leave.

Marke Cooke, of Gateside, master and marriner, humbly petitioned to have 6 boules of rye restored him which was seized on by Mr. Nicholas Fenwicke; he haveing sold it out of a loft by the Key-side to an unfreeman. Ordered his rye should be restored.

William Hanby, late apprentice to Mr. Thomas San, deceased, and since set over to Mr. George Errington, wanting seaventeene monthes of compleating his full tearme of apprenticeship, humbly petitioned for his freedome upon a reasonable fyne. His petition was taken into serious consideration, and also his nonconformytie to the acts of this Fellowship; it being made appeare in court that he had kept shopp for his owne account, that he had received severall parcells of goods from London, and had bills of Exchange drawn upon him for the same, as alsoe that he lived out of his master's service, and tabled himselfe in towne, all which is directly contrary to the acts and orders of the Company; yet after a very long debate it was ordered by greate grace and favour, he paying one hundred pounds into the wardens betwixt and next court as a fyne, not onely for the tyme he hath yet to serve, but for his greate transgressions against the good acts of this Society, should be admitted to his freedome according to his petition.

Whereas Sir Francis Anderson, Knight, one of the burgesses for this present Parliament, who, though he were the grandchild of Francis Anderson, Esq^r., one of the Aldermen of this towne, and a free brother of this Society, yet, through his father's omission, neglecting to take his freedome of this Fellowship, he was rendered uncapable thereof, and the Company takeing into serious consideration that the sayd Sir Francis had discended from such worthy progenitors, some of which had beene Governors of this Society, and haveing experienced the indeavours and readinesse of the sayd Sir Francis to mainetaine and promote the priviledges of the sayd Company, thought it expedient, and it was with generall consent agreed upon, that in testimonie of the greatest respects they were able to expresse unto him, did admitt him and his sonne Mr. Robert Anderson, not there personall but there absolute freedome of the sayd Fellowship, which they both gratefully accepted and were admitted and sworne accordingly. And it is hereby ordered, &c., that the sayd Sir Francis Anderson, and Robert Anderson, his sonne, are invested with all the priviledges and immunities of the sayd Company, in as full and ample a manner, to all intents and purposes, as any person comeing by patrimony can challenge the same. And that not onely those sonns which shall be hereafter, but those that are already borne unto the sayd Sir Francis shall, when they come to maturitie, be admitted to the freedome of the sayd Fellowship for there accustomed duties paying.

William Swan, sonne of Mr. Richard Swan, desyred his freedome of this Fellowship by patrimonye, but in regard he was bound an apprentice to a marryner, and now goes to sea as occasion offers, it was denyed him.

The former committee was desyred to prepare a letter to be sent to the company of Merchants Adventurers of London, to request them to admitt Sir Francis Anderson, Knight, into the freedome of their Fellowship, as we have done here.

The former committee which at the last court were ordered to prepare a letter to the right worshippfull Company of Merchants Adventurers of London in the behalfe of Sir Francis Anderson, Knight, a coppie of the sayd letter was, at this court, read, and by generall consent approved off, and ordered to be sent, which contayned as followeth:

Right Worshippfull Sir and Sirs,

The bearer hereof, Sir Francis Anderson, Knight, a member of this present Parliament, our worthy friend, being desyrous to have his freedome of the Company beyond seas, that his children might have equall benifit with other freemen, &c., when we came to looke over our bookes we finde that his grandfather, Mr. Francis Anderson, was free of our Fellowship; but that Mr. Roger Anderson, father to this Sir Francis, had neglected to take his freedome, soe that we could not give our usuall certificate for this gentleman. Yet considering his worth, and how little it would preiudice the Company, we doe desyre you would be pleased out of your respects to us to grant the sayd Sir Francis Anderson his freedome, which will very much ingage us to be,

Right worshipping Sir and Sirs, your loveing brethren and friends, the Governor, Assistants, Wardens and Fellowship of Merchants Adventurers of Newcastle upon Tyne.

Newcastle, November 28th, 1661.

[27 Nov. 1661.]

Mr. Richard Wright, coming to court in a coate, contrary to an Act of this Fellowship, payd his fyne of 5^{s.}, and he ordered to withdraw, he had by favour of Court 4^{s.} restored him, and the other 12^{d.} was put into the poore box.*

[8 Jan. 1661-2.]

Ordered that the new oaths should be cut out of the new booke of acts, and the good old oaths taken by the Governor, Wardens, Secretar, &c., should be writ instead thereof.

[29 Jan. 1661-2.]

The information of James Dixon of this towne, taylor, taken upon oath the 26th of September, 1661, before Alderman Christopher Nicolson, our present Governor, was againe read at this court, Mr. Peter Sanderson and his apprentice, Willyam Ainsloe, being present. In the information the sayd Dixon saith that Willyam Ainsloe brought him as much worsted stuffe of 2^{s.} 4^{d.} a yeard, as made the sayd Ainsloe a sute, and 6 dosin of ribon, with all other necessaryes for the tryming thereof, and that an other tyme the same Ainsloe brought him as much silke prunella as made him 2 wastcoates, the one of 7^{s.}, the other of 8^{s.} a yeard, with silver and gold lace, and silke and silver buttons for triming of them alsoe; and further saith that the aforesayd Ainsloe sent him at a third tyme as much Padua serge as made him a paire of large rideing stockings; all which Willyam Ainsloe confessed in open court he had taken out of his master's shopp, without his privity; and for this was turned out of his service; neither could his master be prevailed with to take him againe; therefor the Company consydering the greate scandall would lye upon the Company if he were not made exemplary; with generall consent ordered he should be crosed the Fellowship's books, which was done accordingly.

[28 May to dispose of the grand lease of the manners of Whickum and Gate-side ; which lease belongs to the Major and Burgesses for 19 yeares next ensewing, and receiving intimation thereof under Mr. Major's hand. At the aforesayd court there was by generall consent chosen from the Company of Drapers, Mr. John Bowes, and Mr. Humphrey Pious, from the Company of Mercers, Mr. George Dawson and Mr. Robert Ellyson, and from the Company of Boothmen, Mr. Christopher Nicolson our present Governor, and Mr. James Briggs.

[27 Aug. 1662.]

It was ordered that John Fenwicke should have tymely notice to appeare at the next court, in regard comeing towards the towne this day, he received a fall from his horse, whereby he was disabled to appeare at this.

[9 Oct. 1662.]

Whereas at the late election of the Mayor, Sheriffe, and other the Towne's officers for this present yeare, these two appointed (viz^t. Isaac Crabtre and Marke Dover) by the Company of Buchers for their first men in that election wilfully absented themselves from the Spittle, by reason whereof the sayd election was not onely obstructed, and the electors affronted, but the peace and charter of this Corporation exceedingly indangered ; this being at the aforesayd court taken into serious consideration it was by the whole Company ordered that foure of their bretheren, viz^t. Mr. Robert Ellison, Mr. Thomas Davison, Mr. James Briggs, and Mr. Willyam Blacket, should at the next guild move in the name of this whole Fellowship that the sayd Isaac Crabtre and Marke Dover might be proceeded against according to their demerit: that so the like miscarriage may be prevented for the future.*

[29 Oct. 1662.]

Whereas at a Merchant Adventurers Court held the 9th of this moneth, Mr. Robert Ellyon [and three others] were ordered to move in guild to Isaac Crabtre and Marke Dover. . . . and those forenamed brethren moveing in Guild that the sayd I. C. and M. D. might be proceeded against according to their demerit, and further, whereas the guild refered the same to the Comon Councell, It was ordered that Mr. Thomas Davison [and three others] should attend the Comon Councell, and put them in minde of the same, and to desyre them to act therein as in their wisdomes they shall see cause.

a wife diverse yeares before the expiration of his tearme of apprenticeship, and haveing been sumoned to severall courts, but never appeared, was ordered to be crossed the bookes.

The Wardens reported that they had heard the difference betwixt Mr. Railph Gray, senior, and his apprentice, John Willson, and likewise presented to the court a paper, in which was layd downe the insufferable misdemeaners and high ranting carreage of the sayd J. W., his many nights absence out of his master's house, his frequent quarrelling and beateing his fellow servants, and his continuall disturbing and affrighting the whole ffamilye, and the like, which was the causes of his master turneing him away, much of which he could not deny. It was ordered he should be crosd this Companye's bookes.

Ordered that, upon Mr. Elison's and Mr. Davison's report of their treating with the Trinity Masters, concerneing the primage of goods they demand of all tradeing bretheren, a committee should be appointed to meete to consider of the rates of all such goods, as by a scedulle given them by the Trinity Masters doth appeare, and allsoe to consider whether anie primage be due to the said Trinity Masters or noe, and whether the said primage be not overrated by them, if found due to be paid by this Companie.

Clement Skelton, servant to Mr. Francis Gray, deceased, humbly desired that, in regard his mistress, to whome he was set over by order of court, beeing lately married to an unfreeman, he might have the favour of chuseing a new master. [Six months allowed him to make choice of a new master.]

[27 Jan. 1668-9.]

Mrs. Elizabeth Lomax, a sister, humbly petitioned this Companie for theire Christian charity in giveing hir somewhat towards the releife of hir great necessity. [Twenty shillings to be given her.]

[23 April 1669.]

Complaint was made by severall members who had writts served on them on the behalfe of the Trinity Masters, for non payment of primage. Whereupon it was ordered, &c., That these bretheren should be deffended att the generall charge of this Companie, and further, that it be made the Company's busines to deffend any member or members thereof in such suits as are or shall be depending betweene them and the said Trinity Masters for non payment of primage.

[4 June 1669.]

Upon reading the Trinity Masters' Bills (in English) exhibited against severall members of this Fellowship for non payment of primage, it was ordered that a Committee should be chosen to consider the consulting with Mr. Ra. Scarfeild how the suite with the Trinity Masters might beste be carried on and maunaged, which was accordingly done.

[3 Nov. 1669.]

Mr. Governour acquainted the Company that the Major of Durham had beene with him, and had complained to him of Mr. Matthew Jeffreson for selling of goods att Branspeth to the preiudice of the Grossers' Companie in Durham.

[24 Nov. 1669.]

Mr. Governour acquainted the Companie that he had received a letter signed by the Major of Durham and Mr. Cummin, alderman of the Grossers' Company there, which was read in open court, wherein they certify that the Company of Grossers of Durham had a tryall there, at the last assizes, with Elizabeth Byerley, for selling and rettayling of goods att Branspeth, and that Matthew Jeffreyson, a member of this Companie, beeing there present, pleaded that shee was his hyred servant att May Day last, which he proved by two wittnesses, and that shee gave him an account every Sunday. The Companie, takeing it into serious consideration, and findeing it to be a breach of theire acts, it was agreed that he should pay to the wardens for a fine for these his transgressions the sune of twenty-six pounds, beeing for thirteene weekes att forty shillings per weeke, according to the acts of this Companie.

It was declared that the suite depending betwixt some bretheren of this society and the Masters of the Trinity House in refference to primage was prosecuted with much vigoure by the said Masters.

It was therefore ordered that all prudent care should be taken for our just deffence, and that the bretheren more perticularly concerned would make it theire buisnesse, if there shall be occation for a new comission for examination of wittnesses, to procure such as are both able to answeare to such interogatorys as shall be administered to them in behalfe of this Company, and that these bretheren, with the wardens, consult advice with the Governor and assistants soe often as is requisit.

Mr. Governor declared that the difference twixt the Company and Masters of the Trinity House in reference to primadge had occasioned a greate expence and trouble; that of late some proposalls had beene made to him in order to a friendly accomodation; that by mutuall consent fower persons of each company were elected to treat about it. The persons named by us were, Alderman Jenison, Mr. Robert Roddam, Mr. Abram Drake, Mr. Ambrose Barnes; theires were, Mr. Hen. Bird, Mr. Thomas Aubony, Mr. Cuthbert Atkinson, Mr. Anthony White, who accordingly mett the 12 of this instant, and came to this following agreement, beeing drawne up by them in writeing, one part signed by ours and delivered to theirs, the other part by theirs and delivered to our committee, and presented to the Court by Alderman Jenison.

A copie whereof is as followeth:—

At a meeting the 12 of January, 1670, betweene [the persons before named] for determining and ending some differences and suites now depending about the primage of lastage and tonnage demanded by the said Trinity House: Now for the composing and ending whereof it was agreed by the partys abovesaid that the whole difference shall be thus refferred to Sir Robert Shaftoe, Knight, and Richard Stote, Esqur., to determine (and both partys be concluded if both the Companys agree thereunto) what is legally due to the Trinity House by charter thereof, and what goods must pay, and how much, according to the said charter.

Henry Bird,
Thomas Aubony,
Cuthbert Atkinson,
Anthony White.

Which beeing publiqly read, Mr. Governor declared that, since the meeting, Mr. Henry Bird and Mr. Anthony White had beene with him, and acquainted him that at a meeting of theire Company the agreement was generally approved off, and, beeing likewise put to the vote in this court, had the approbation of the whole company. And Mr. Barnes and Mr. Drake were desired to signifie as much to the Masters of the Trinity House, and take theire ingagement that there should be noe further proceedings in the suite till it were determined by Sir Robert Shaftoe and Mr. Stote.

[16 Aug. 1671.]

Mr. Governour acquainted that Mr. Recorder and Mr. Stote, according to appointment, mett at Mrs. Shaftoe's, where the agreement made by the Committee, and approved of by both Companys, was fully debated, and hoped allso it would have beene determined, but noething was concluded. That after the counsell were gone, he had propounded to the Masters if they would procure Mr. Recorder his judgement upon the paper (wherein it was agreed that the whole difference should be refferred to Mr. Recorder and Mr. Stote to determine what was legally due by charter), that hee would intreate Mr. Stote to doe the like, and if they accorded not in theire oppinions, that a third person should be chosen by consent of both Companys, to be umpier in the buisines, but was not assented too: However, he tooke Mr. Stote's oppinion of the paper under his hand, that least the Company should be under any surprize, Mr. Scurfeilde, our attorney, was ordered to write to his correspondent att London to waite theire motion, by whome he was informed that the Masters were proceeding in the prosecution of theire suite, and intended to bring it to a tryall the next tearme, and therefore desired the advice of the assistants what was fittest to be done in the affaire, and though all of them were inclineable to a friendly accomodation, yett they judged it needefull that Mr. Stote should be consulted withall, and such counsell as were commended by him should be retained on this Company's behalfe; and accordingly both he and Mr. Lilbourne were consulted withall, and theire care desired in the Company's concernes; and the attorney generall [and] Sir Francis Gooderick were by Mr. Stote retained, with some others, for the Company. That the matter was heard at the Exchequer, and, after a long debate, primage for lastage and tonnage setled, but whether anything were to be paid for a less proportion, and for what goods, was refferred to a tryall att law this next assizes in the County of Northumberland. That since Mr. Recorder's and Mr. Stote's returne from London there was another meeting, where they were both present, with divers of the assistants and some Masters of the Trinity House; where, after a long debate, it was at last concluded, That the tryall should be put off; and Alderman Jenison and Mr. Ambrose Barnes were made choyce off for this Company, and Mr. Elbrough and Mr. Swaddell for the Masters of the Trinity House; and, if they could not agree, they were to chuse an umpier, and, if they accorded not in their choyce, then the umpier was to be chosen by Mr. Recorder and Mr. Stote.

[2 Nov. 1671.]

Mr. Governour acquainted the Company that Alderman Jenison and Mr. Barnes, having first advised with the assistants, had a meeting with two of the Masters of the Trinity House, in order to the composing the great difference about primadge, where the scedull whereby they demaunde and collect the said duty was fully debated, especially such perticulers thereof as did more specially concerne this Company, and att length came to the following agreement, viz^t. :—

October the 27th 1671 :

It is agreed betwixt Raiph Jenison, Esquire, marchant, and Mr. Ambros Barnes, marchant, for and on the behalfe of the Company of Marchants Adventurers, and Mr. Richard Elbrough and Mr. Geo. Swaddell, for the Trinity House of Newcastle, — That all flax, tow, madder, hopps, and all goods paying by the hundred weight custome, shall pay primadge $\frac{1}{6}$ part of a penny for every hundred weight, according to the entreys made in the Custome House, and that all iron potts shall pay $\frac{1}{4}$ part of a penny per dozne, according to the same enterys, and

That all arreares for those smale goods above specified shall be passed by, and not required unto this day. And all other goods which have not payed, the parties concerned are lyable to pay the same from the begining of the suite, that is to say, from the fileing of the Bill of the said Trinity House in the Exchequer.

Witnesse our hands this 27th October, 1671,

Rich. Ellbrough,
George Swaddell.

Mr. Governour further acquainted the Company that care should be taken to gett a new schedull drawne, and the agreement more fully explained, to prevent all future differences.

A petition [was] presented by Richard Baites, appothecary, and beeing put to hands whether the said petition should be read or not, was carried (and by the testimony of the wardens declared soe to be) in the affirmative, which Mr. John Dobson denying, and affirmeing that they deserved to be fined who held up their hands for the reading thereof, was inioyned to withdraw, and (in great favoure to him) was onely fined twenty shillings. But, at his returne, beeing acquainted what was done, did, in a scornefull manner, tell the Company he was noe way beholden to them for their kindness, and that it was all one to him if they had fined him twenty pounds. And thereupon, beeing againe comaunded to withdraw, was, by general consent, fined five pounds more.

The petition beeing read, wherein Richard Baites, declareing that he was troubled to have any contests with the Companie, and for avoyding all further occation of difference, humbly desired that they would be pleased to admitt him to his personall freedome, upon such reasonable fine as they, in theire judgments, should thinke fitt, but, beeing putt to hands, was evidently carryed on the negative.

A greivous complaint was made by Mr. Henry Slinger, a member of this Company, against Joseph Young, a younge member of the same, who, by divers scandalous, opprobrious and revileing speeches, endeavoured (as much as in him lay) to blast his credit and destroy that reputation he had with his creditors, neighbours, and relations, in the presence of Mr. Leonard Shaftoe and Mrs. Jane Shaftoe, his mother, and other persons of quality, upbraiding and calling him rogue, lyeing knave, errand rogue, equivocating, cheating and dissembleing knave; that he had forsakne his religion, that he had abused his wives, with such vile and disgracefull expressions; that he could prove it by twenty wittnesses, and make him a rogue in the face of the Company; and threatned he would give him upp his foote. And he had reason to beleive that the said Joseph Young had malitiously done some ill office, tending much to his disparagement and the violation of the credit he had with such persons as he dealt withall. Mr. Young beeing then present, and haveing heard the complaint, did seeme to deny and extenuate the same, alledging great provocations given him by Mr. Slinger. But Mr. Gilbert Otwey, another member, attested to Mrs. Jane Shaftoe beeing desired, for the further confirmation of the truth, to declare whether such words as are before mentioned were spoke by Mr. Young, accknowledged they were. Which Mr. Otwey had noe sooner related then Mr. Young, in the face of the Company, impudently said to him, "Have you gott a fee?" Itt was allso affirmed by some other bretheren that Mr. Young had said that none went to heare Mr. Shaw (who is an able and orthodox minister) but a sorte of idle and drunke fellowes. Whereupon the Company, deeply resenting and utterly detesting the abusive and scandalous languag and misdemeanours of the said Mr. Young, and to deterr others from transgressing in the like kinde, did, by generall consente, fine him one hundred pounds.

[27 March 1672.]

At the same court, the Company's charter graunted by King James was produced, beeing delivered to the Governour by Alderman Brabant, who received it from Mr. William Christian, declareing it was found in the streets at London, and conceived to be blowne out of a window of a house there, blowne upp with gunnpowder, and by his care preserved. Whereupon Alderman Brabant was desired to render Mr. Christian the thanks of the Company for his care, and to gratifie his servant with 40^s. for secureing the same.

The Governor acquainted the Company that one cheife occation of calling them together at that time was upon the account off Richard Baites, upon whose behalfe he was solicited to call that court being very desireous of an oppertunity againe by petition to make his addresses to them, which he was unwilling to consent to, till he had first consulted with and taken the advice of the assistants, who, upon serious deliberation, for some reasons, conceived it expedient that a court should be called and that he should be heard. And the secretary haveing his petition and beeing ordered to reade it, Mr. John Dobson imediatly stood up and handed in, before it could be read, a paper, and said it was the apprentices' petition in opposition to the former, and some other bretheren seemeing very zealous in asserting the priviledges of the Company, which they were jealous might be intrenched on by such actions, were tolde that the matter had allready beene under the consideration of the Governour and assistants whose judgement it was, and that upon such grounds (though not fitt to be published) as (they conceived) would give any unbiazed person satisfaction, that his admission upon a considerable fine would be noe disadvantage to the Company, nor any weaking or diminution of their priviledges, of which there were divers former presidents, and one especially in the case of Mr. Bulmer Ile, a person of the same profession, admitted whilst Mr. William Warmouth (a grave and judicious magistrate) was governor, and one as well versed in the law as their priviledges, and that, to the satisfaction of the Company, at the fine of one hundred markes. Though Mr. Dobson was not ashamed moste falsely to affirme it in the face of the Company, that Mr. Ile was admitted upon the consideration of the advanceing the price of some landes was to be sould to him by the said Mr. Warmouth; which was so evilly resented by the cheife of the Company that they judged it fitt he should withdraw, and deserved deeply to be fined for such scandalous aspersions upon soe worthy a person and benefactor, but was till another oppertunity suspended.

[The petition was read, and it was determined to admit Bates to personal freedom for £100. He accepted the terms, gave security for the money, and had 6 months allowed him in which to pay it.]

The indenture of agreement (with a scedull annexed) with the Trinity Maisters, was in open courte reade, and by the whole Company approved off, wherupon the court desired Mr. Governoure that at his conveniency he would be pleased mutually to seale the same.

There was a petition presented by the Companie of Beere Brewers, humbly desireing the assistance of this Society towards the greate charge expended in the manadgement of the suit against one Overing, who had sett up a brewhouse at Sheeles, to the greate prejudice of the burgesses of this towne and the priviledges thereof. Which the Company takeing into serious consideration as a busines of great concernment, and they beeing informed of the readynesse of other companys freely to contribute thereunto, were pleased out of their greate grace and favoure to grant them twenty pounds, and accordingly ordered that it should be paid by the wardens to the stewards of the Company of Brewers.

The governour . . . judged it expedient that two escutchions should be provided at the Company's charge with the Warmouth's armes, and hung up in the Court for a memoriall of soe worthy benefactors, which he hoped would be an inducement to others to follow their good example. And it was by generall consent soe ordered by the Company.

[19 July 1676.]

The petition of the parisioners of Gosworth was reade, wherein they humbly requested this Company for their charitable assistance in granting them somewhat towards the repaire of their auntient and decayed church. The court takeing the same into serious consideration, and doubting such presidents might be of bad consequence, the said petition was laid aside by generall consent.

[3 November 1676.]

Whereas Robert Swaine of this towne, sailemaker, hath very much intrenched upon the trade of a merchant, as well by exporting as importing divers sorts of merchandize to the great detriment and disadvantage of this Company, and in probability hath had noe small assistance and incouragment from some members of this society, in the manadgment of the said trade, by joyning with him in the loading or ffreighting some vessells to and from this port, and buying such commodities as were imported by the said Robert Swaine. It is this day therefore ordered, &c., That noe brother or sister of this Company shall from henceforth, either directly or indirectly joyne with or be assisting to the said Robert Swaine in the ffraughting of any vessell outward or inward, nor by himselfe, ffactors or servants shall put on boarde any kinde of merchandize in any vessell ffraughted by him, or shall suffer the said Robert Swaine to be concerned in any part of the loading of any vessell fraughted by any of them. Upon penalty that every member soe offending and convicted thereof shall for every such offence fforfeite to the use of this ffellowshipp the sume of ffifty pounds.

And it is further ordered, That noe brother or sister of this Company shall from henceforth either directly or indirectly by themselves or any other person for their use contract with or buy of the said Robert Swaine any sorte of merchandize imported by him, or of any other person imployed by him to sell the same, upon penalty for every such offence beeing convicted to fforfeite to the use of this ffellowshipp the sune of thirty pounds.

Upon the enrowlement of William Potts, apprentice to Mr. Thomas Smith, it was debated whether he should be enrowled or not, beeing supposed to be borne either in Tinedale or Ridesdale; beeing contrary an auntient act of the Company in the case provided; but Mr. Smith then in open court declared that the said William Potts was not borne either in Tinedale or Ridisdale, the Company was pleased to admitt his enrowlement, which accordingly done. It was then by the consent of the whole court ordered that the above said act, beeing made the 12^o October 1564, should be repealed soe farr as it relates to Tindale and Ridisdale.*

[5 Feb. 1676-7.]

Alderman Davison presented to the Company a branch of the late worthy governour his will, which was ordered to be registered, and that the wardens should cause his escutcheon to be drawne at the Companie's charge and placed in the Merchants' Court.†

[15 February 1676-7.]

Mr. Governour propounded to the Company, in severall perticulers, what might be the beste expedient for the suppressing of Robert Swaine in his tradeing and intrenching upon the Company's priviledges, which proposalls were referred to a committee to consider of, and devise an act for the same as they should thinke fitt.

The proposalls to be considered of by the aforesaid comittee are as ffollows:

1. Whatsoever shipp or vessell Robert Swaine shall ffraught to any part beyond the seas after the 15th day of this instant ffebruary, That the said shipp or vessell shall not either directly or indirectly be ffraughted or imployed by any member of this Company, for the space of three yeares. The Trinity Maisters to have notice hereof.

2. That all the members of this ffellowshipp who have any parts of shippes, shall use all effectuall endeavours with the maisters of such shippes that they shall not buy any sailes or any other kinde of necessarys for the said shippes of the said Robert Swaine after the space of three moneths.

3. That the maior and Common Counsell be moved in this behalfe that they would please to admitt a sailemaker (beeing an honest man) to exercise that trade here in this towne. Mr Nicolas ffenwicke undertakeing to procure such a person.

Whereas at a court holden the 3^o of November 1676 It was enacted &c., Now in order to the strengthening of the said act, and likewise as a further expedient for the more speedy suppressing the said Robert Swaine in his intrenching upon the Company's privileges for the future, it is enacted &c., That whatsoever shippes or vessells shall be ffraughted by Robert Swaine to or from any part beyond the seas after this present day shall not either directly or indirectly be ffraughted or imployed by any member or members of this ffellowshipp for the space of three yeares, upon penalty for every brother or sister soe offending, beeing thereof convicted, to fforfeite to the use of this ffellowshipp the sume of One hundred pounds.

These under-named persons [8 in number] were chosen and their care desired to inspect Robert Swaine his way of trade either by ffreighting of shippes or importing of any kinde of merchandize and report the same to the Company from time to time as they shall either of themselves know, or be credibly informed of by others.

Mr. Governour acquainted the Company that the cheife reason why he called them together at that time was to consult them aboute one Thomas Robson, a roper, who was building a house joyning upon the east window of this Court, and if he persisted, as was intended, might prove very prejudiciall both to the light and prospect of the said window. The court takeing the premises into mature consideration resolved by generall consent that the said Robson should be sent for. Which was accordingly done, and beeing called in, Mr. Governour fairely advised him not to carry on his worke, as he intended; as by the vew and judgment of the moste part of the Company (if done) would be very injurious to them. Otherwise the Company was resolved to mainetaine their auntient rites and libertys. Whereupon the said Robson willingly submitted to the Company's pleasure, and referred the removall of his chimnys or any part of the said building that might seeme incommodious to the said Court, to a more convenient place then at that time they stood. Which were by the Company ordered to be reviewed by Mr. Christopher Shadforth [three others] and the wardens, together with the workmen, and soe by the said workmen removed accordingly.

Mr. Raiph Elstobb informed the Company that hee and some others, mercers, had lately comenced a suite at law against George Ayrey of Gatesheade, for exerciseing the trade of a mercer, contra the statute, and had at the last assizes at Durham cast the said Ayrey. Yett notwithstanding they conceived he would put them to some further trouble and charges. Mr. Elstobb therefore moved the Company that they would please to afford him their assistance in the management of a further suite against the said Ayrey and others (if any should be). The Company considering seriously of the premises and very well resenting the proceedings of Mr. Elstobb and the rest concerned, did promise him their best assistance as to that affaire, when any occasion offered.

Mr. Joseph Young petitioned the court for their grace and favour, That whereas he (some few years past) was fined the summe of £100 for speaking scandalous and unbeseeming words against a member of the Company, and that he had now given that party full satisfaction, requested therefore their goodness towards him, in remitting him some part of the said fine. The Company was pleased to remitt him the summe of £99, 15s.

[21 March 1677-8.]

Henry Moore petitioned the Company to grant him his freedome, he being bound an apprentice unto Mr. Henry Barker, and served him soe long as he lived, and after that continued in the mistress' service till such time as that he was (for his loyalty to his Majesty) forced to absent and fly into Holland, where he remained in his service, and then went for Scotland into Generall Monk's service, and upon his Majesty's happy restauration came into England under the command of the said Generall. The said Mr. Moore's petition being reade, the Company did grant him his freedome of this fellowship.

Ordered that the wardens [and four others] should at some convenient time goe to the Castle Leases to take an exact vew of those ridges of land the late deceased Thomas Davison, Esquire, our worthy Governour, bequeathed by will to this Company, and take such care as that noe incroachment be made upon the same to the prejudice of the Company, and that the same be recorded in the Booke.*

[9 April 1678.]

Upon complaint made by Mr. Robert Wetwang of his being sued by the Muscovia Company for non-payment of impositions for goods from the Nerve,† it was ordered, that the said Mr. Wetwang be indemnified, or other member or members of this fellowship that shall at any time hereafter have any suit at law commenced

[10 July 1678.]

It was ordered, that noe bretheren or sisters should inspect any part of the Company's charter without leave from the Governoure.

Ordered that Mr. Governour should be reimburst 14^s. 10^d., which he had layd out for Mr. Matthew Comandell's decent interment within the church.

Mr. Nathaniel Orde and Mr. Raiph Elstobb moved the court for their assistance in the manadgment of a suit at law against George Ayrey and others intrenching upon the priviledge of mercers, wherein they have expended a considerable summe of money. It was carryed that the summe of £20 should be paid them.

It was ordered that the former committee should be desired to goe to counsell, vizt. Sir Robert Shaftoe, Sir Richard Stote, Mr. Wm. Lillbourne, and Mr. John Blakiston, for their oppinions in suppressing all unfreemen from setting upp booths in any part of this towne's priviledges, except in the time of open ffaires.

[20 Sep 1678.]

The Company takeing into serious consideration that great affaire of defending their priviledges against the infringers thereof, especially the Hambrough and Muscovia Companys, and for the better expedient how to manage and redresse the same, it was ordered that Sir William Blackett and Sir Francis Anderson should be desired to take care therein: That if the creditors of the Hambrough Company preferr a bill at next session of Parlyament to procure an imposition upon goods for the payment of the debte of £75,000, then our said burgesses to take learned counsell therein whether it may in anywise prejudice our auntient priviledges by makeing us lyable in paying any part of the said debt, and consult Mr. John Rushworth herein. Allso to take their oppinion whether the Moscovia Company (by the priviledges granted them have power to lay on and receive impositions for goods exported to or imported from the Nerve) by merchants not ffree of the said ffellowshipp; the Nerve now belonging to the King of Sweeden, and not to the Duke of Muscovia.

[4 Nov. 1678.]

Mr. John Mittford and Mr. Thomas Curwen were appointed to seize upon such merchandize as they shall finde carryed aboute towne to be solde by any persons not ffree of this ffellowshipp.

[15 Nov. 1678.]

A letter from Sir Robert Shaftoe concerning the pedlers, and allso his oppinion therein, was comunicated to the Company, which beeing taken into consideration, it was ordered that ffoure or ffive of those persons who were only sojourners, and such as had noe habitations in the towne, should have their goods seized next markt day by Mr. Tho. Curwen, Mr. John Mittford, and the Company's serjant Mr. Anto. Herron to assist them; Mr. Chr. Wetherell allso freely proffering his best assistance in endeavouring to suppress them.

[29 Nov. 1678.]

Mr. Governoure acquainted the Company how farr those persons who sett up booths upon the Sand-hill contra the statute had beene proceeded against in order to their suppressing, which was seriously considered, and very well approved of, as allso further agreed, That if they should persist in setting up their booths and expose their goods to sale, Mr. Curwen and Mr. Mittford (who were formerly appointed) with the assistance of Mr. Christo: Wetherell should seize all such goods or wares as formerly.

[29 Nov. 1678.]

Ordered that a clause in the act made the 13th July 1581 prohibiting all bretheren trading or in anywise dealeing with one George Briggs, &c., not ffree of this ffellowshipp, should be repealed. Booke of Acts page 44. The order ffolloweth.

Now seriously considering the evell consequence hereof, it is ordered, that the aforesaid clause shall be repealed, and absolutly made voyde.*

[19 Dec. 1678.]

A comittee was chosen and desired to meete in the Merchants Court to take into consideration by what meanes the Markett may be supplied since the restraint of the pedlers from setting up their booths upon the Sand-hill.

[22 January 1678-9.]

Mr. Governoure acquainted the Company that hee had received the oppinnion of Sir Richard Stote as to the removall of the pedlers from setting up their booths in the Castle Garth,† which was then communicated. It was thought fitt that some of the standing committee should treat with soe many of the justices of the peace for the county of Northumberland as are free of this fellowship in order to the suppressing of the said pedlers in the place aforesaid. Whereupon it was referred to the said committee to consider of it the next day, and on the 23^d they mett accordingly, Sir Raiph Jenison and Mr. Robert Jenison, two of the said justices, beeing present. But noe result upon the matter then debated. But by the same committee [it] was agreed to meete the 24th, at which time the pedlers would attend them to know the Company's pleasure, and after some debate the pedlers were called in ; and demanded by the Committee what sorts of goods they might sell, which they conceived might not intrench upon the Company's priviledges. To which they answered resiting the goods, which the said Committee hath drawne up, and to give their report at next court.

A petition subscribed by fourteene of the chapmen, who were keepers of booths upon the Sandhill, was reade and considered of, and it was resolved, That as they had by their petition submitted to the Company, and humbly requested to be restored to their former stations, the Company would grant them that liberty, provided they would give their respective bonds not to intrench upon the Company's priviledges (as formerly they had) by selling of merchandiz.

19 Feb. 1678-9.]

Mr. Anthony Dobson for his insolent carriage, and obstinat refusall to withdraw upon Mr. Governour's commandeing him, as also his highly scandalous and unbeseeming language, reflecting upon the Company and more perticularly upon Alderman Roddham, the company takeing the said abuses into mature consideration, and greatly resenting the haynousness of such his misdemeanor, did lay upon him a fine of One hundred pounds.

[13 March 1678-9.]

The report of the Committee was reade and very well approved : vizt. : It was agreed by the said committee, appointed to treat with the peddlers or chapmen, That the said chapmen should give their respective bonds of £10 to Mr. Governour before the 18th day of february ; and then should be allowed by the Company to sitt upon the Sandhill and sell such goods or wares as should be incerted in a

But the Company considering of the peddlers slighting and dislike of their proposalls by not consenting thereunto, It was ordered [that] the same Committee or any seaven of them should once more be desired to meete to consider off, and fully impowered to put a period to the difference betweene the Company and the said peddlers.

Whereas it evidently appeares to us That Thomas Richardson, Thomas Burdus, and Leonard Vaughan, and severall other maisters and marriners tradeing from parts beyond the seas, doe frequently export leade, cloth and other woollen manufactures, and import severall sorts of merchantdize makeing adventures every voyadge for considerable summes of moneys to the great detriment and disadvantage of this Company, which doth not only lessen and destroy the trade of Merchants in generall; but, as further mischeife, they doe frequently utter and sell the goods imported to country chapmen and others not ffree of this ffellowshipp.

Ffor prevention of any further intrenchments of this nature for the time to come :

It is ordered &c., That the said Thomas Richardson, Thomas Burdus, and Leonard Vaughan, and their shippes shall from and after the second day of ffebruary next be sett off by this ffellowshipp for the space of three yeares; not to be employed by any brother or sister of this ffellowshipp, in ffraughting their said shippes or in shipping any goods, outward or inward, to or from any parts beyond the seas, of which all bretheren are required to give their correspondants notice: upon penalty, That every member so offending shall fforfeite to the use of this ffellowshipp the summe of ten pounds, toties quoties.

And further it is ordered, That noe brother or sister of this ffellowshipp shall from and after the said second day of ffebruary, directly or indirectly, by themselves or any other person for their use, contract with or buy of the said Thomas Richardson, &c., or any other person or persons employed by them to sell the same, any sorts of merchandize, upon penalty for every such offence to forfeite to the use of this Company the summe of Twenty pounds. And to prevent other maisters or marriners from presumeing to intrench upon the rights and priviledges of this ffellowshipp, be it further enacted and declared, That if any maister belonging to this towne and port of Newcastle, or any other place, shall import hither any wares or merchandizes, and shall sell or offerr to sale the said wares or merchandizes soe imported, to any but such as are ffree of this ffellowshipp of Merchants Adventurers, upon due prooffe made thereof the said maister and shipp shall be laid off from the imployment of this ffellowshipp. And it is further ordered, That the maister and bretheren of the Trinity House have timely notice of this act, that they may avoyde the inconveniences that may happen to any of them or their vessells by not observeing the premises.

Mr. Governoure acquainted the Company that it was convenient that the penalty of the late Act, for prohibiting any member from paying any impositions or to take any comission or authority from the Muscovia Company for receiveing any impositions upon goods from the East should be repealed. And by consent of the whole court it was accordingly agreed.

[24 Feb. 1679-80.]

It was agreed and consented, That three persons of the Company should be chosen to consult the other companys in towne about the affaire of the Towne Moore, &c., and accordingly were chosen; viz. for the Drapers, Mr. Humphrey Pybus; for the Mercers, Mr. Edward Harle, and for the Boothmen, Mr. George Lewen, senior.

[16 Sep. 1680.]

Mr. Governoure acquainted the Company how that the Merchants Drapers who were chosen for auditeing the townes accounts were refused to be sworne by the maior and rejected. The court takeing the same into consideration, it was resolved, That all the aldermen and the assistants should be desired to meete and consult how this affront to our Company may be redressed.

[25 Nov. 1680.]

The wardens presented a paper subscribed by the Maior, eight aldermen and the sherriffe concerning the election of Drapers at Michaelmas last, which was reade and referred to a committee to consider off, and to draw up the whole proceedings.

A montion (sic) was made by some bretheren of the Company touching Alderman Morton's carrige towards our Merchant Drapers, who were duely chosen as auditors for the Company, but the consideration thereof was thought fitt to be refferred to the next court.

Mr. Governor allso acquainted the Company as concerning those ridges of land in Castle Leases which were left by the worshippfull Thomas Davison, Esquire, deceased, to this Company, that a committee should be chosen to treat with a committee of the Common Counsell, and to consider of the way and meanes how the said ridges might be lett by lease to the towne to the beste advantage of the Company, and give their report accordingly.

Mr. Governor produced a letter from Sir Ralph Carr intimateing the Rushia Company designed to lay new impositions on all goods to and from Revell and Nerve, contrary to the agreement made with this ffellowshipp; which was reade, and after some consideration, it was resolved, That if York and Hull and other places in the trade, would ffirmely stand by this Company, they would joyne with them to oppose the same; and to that effect a letter was to be sent to Sir Raiph Carr to consult them.

The Committee who were desired to take into their consideration the paper drawn up and signed by the maior and aldermen as concerning the Drapers of this fellowship and the pretended Drapers, presented their report, drawn up in writing which was in open Court read, and after some debate whether it should be registered in the Company's Bookes or not, being put to hands, it was carryd on the affirmative, which is as followeth:

On Sunday next after the feast of St. Bartholomew, according to ancient custome in St. George's portch, the Merchant Drapers did elect Mr. John Bowes and Mr. William Sanderson auditors for the said Company, who were duely returned to the Clarke of the chamber, who refused to booke the same, but by the order of the then Maior, George Morton, esquire, one of the other pretended Company of Drapers did enter to booke two of the said Company.

The Wednesday after, our auditors did attend to take the oaths accustomed, whereupon the wardens of this Company did apply to the Maior in right of this fellowship to move the admission of the said auditors; but the Maior refused to admitt them to their oaths. Whereupon a court was called, and was there ordered, That the aldermen should be a standing Committee to consider from time to time, and doe what seemed most expedient for the maintainance of the rights and priviledges of this fellowship, by whome it was ordered,

That our auditors should give their constant attendance in court, and sitt at the usuall times, which was done accordingly.

At the Comon Counsell held before Michaelmas att the passing the bill of payments the aldermen then present did vindicate the rights of the Merchant Drapers, that they ought to have paid them what was due as auditors, and did severally subscribe the bill with a salvo to the right of the Merchant Drapers. On Fryday before the election, being the last day of the sitting of the auditors, the auditors of the Merchant Drapers did demand their moneys in court, but it was refused them, and paid to the other auditors. On Monday, the fourth day of October, at the Election of the Maior and other officers for the yeare ensuing, Mr. Huphrey [sic] Pybus and Mr. Robert Wetwang were chosen for the Merchant Drapers, for the first election, and Mr. Ralph Ellstob for the latter; where after a long debate by the Maior and aldermen, in the presence of the recorder, who should be called in to compleate the said election, it was carryed in behalfe of the Merchant Drapers, and an order drawne up and signed by the Maior, aldermen, and sherriff, which is as followeth:

Michaelmas Monday, October the 4th, 1680.

The Maior and Aldermen, mett in the Election House for chusing the maior, sherriffe and all other officers for ensuing yeare, a question happened concerning the right of the Merchant Drapers and the other Drapers to elect the said elligible officers, which occasioned a greate debate, and was likely to occasion some stopp to the election, and make a greate difference; for the apeaseing whereof it was consented by the Maior and alldermen then present that the said question should have a settlement with all convenient speede, and that the Merchants Drapers should present electors for this time, saveing the right of the other Drapers. Signed, George Morton, Maior, Raiph Carr, Ralph Jenison, Henry Maddison, Henery Brabant, Robert Roddam, Matthew Jeffreyson, Tim. Robson, Nathaniel Johnson, William Aubone, Vice. C. Committee chosen and appointed to goe to counsell to know whether strangers may sell corne at the New Keay off the Markett days, and how long they may be allowed lyeing days.

[5 May 1682.]

Mr. Governoure acquainted the Company that the cheife cause of his calling them together at that time was to lett them know how that the pretended Company of Drapers of Newcastle had comenced a suite against some of our bretheren the Merchants Drapers, which was debated in Court, and how to proceed in the Vindication of the Company's priviledges. It was by generall consent agreed, That a comittee should be chosen and appointed from tyme to time to manage that affaire, and that Mr. Douglas should be appointed to act for the Company upon all occations herein.

[23 Aug. 1682.]

Complaint was made by some bretheren that divers persons, who by selling corne at the new Keay, as they conceived, did very much invade the priviledges of the Company in generall, as well as the greate prejudice divers perticular members thereby doe sustaine. Whereupon a second committee was chosen to joyne with a former, appointed to goe to counsell learned to take advice what might be the best expedient to redresse the same.

[12 March 1682-3.]

Mr. Governor acquainted the Company that the conveyance of the ridges of land in the Castle Leases which the Company sold to the towne was to be signed and sealed. The Company considering thereof did request Mr. Governour that he would be pleased to take that trouble upon him as to signe and seale the same in behalfe of the whole ffellowshipp.*

[21 June 1683.]

Mr. Governour produced some papers relateing to the Rushia or Moscovia Company which were reade in open court, and after some consideration of their demands contained in the said papers, it was by generall consent resolved that a letter should be writt to Sir Nathaniel Johnson to consult those of the Eastland Company at London, who are not free with the said Mosco: Company, to know what their resolutions were as to that affaire; and it was further ordered that letters both to York and Hull should be sent to the Eastland Merchants to the same effect, and they desired to give us their resolutions likewise.

[17 July 1683.]

Mr. Governour acquainted the Company how that the pretended drapers did intend to bring on another triall at the next assizes, whereupon it was ordered, That the wardens should take speciall care in the manadgment of that affaire for the Company.

[29 July, 1685.]

Mr. Edward Harle acquainted the Company that there were severall complaints against Mrs. Abigall Smith now marryed to William Lecke, junior, a person not free of this Fellowship, whereby shee having lost hir priviledge of this Company, doth still continue to keepe open shopp to the prejudice of the Company. The court greate care and observance in them to whome it belongeth, that the deade may not be abused nor poore mens right injured.

That the ffirst payment of the hundred pounds to the towne of Newcastle was anno 1559 ; the second payment anno 1623. The third payment should have beene anno 1646, but by reason of the civill warrs betweene the King and Parlyament and the succeeding confusions in the nation, there was a respite of the payment of the said money from anno 1642 till anno 1647. And whereas the citie of Bath should have received 100^{li}. in anno 1642, they did not receive till anno 1647, for and in respect of the losses, butzens and taxes imposed upon Sir Thomas White's lands ; soe that Newcastle gott not theire 100^l. beeing the third payment, which was due anno 1646 till anno 1651. The ffourth payment of 100^l. (and hereafter must be reckoned and accompted from that time and not otherwise) was at the ffeast of St. Bartholomew 1674. And by reason divers records are lost, formerly by fire, since, at the stormeing of the towne by the Scotts Army anno 1644, and other distractions, that it cannott be found to what persons or when the money was first lent, yet the 400^l. now in the townes hands is lent to these persons ffollowing, together with the time when, and who became bound for it, viz.

Edward Clarke of the towne of Newcastle upon Tine Maister of the Shipp called the "Love's Increase" mentioned.

[4 May 1686.]

A letter from the King's Moste Excellent Majesty directed as followeth was reade.

To our trusty and well-beloved Sir Henery Brabant, Knt., Maior of our towne of Newcastle upon Tine and Governor of the Hoastman Company there, and to Timothy Davison, esquire, Governor of the Merchants Company in our said towne.

James R.

Trusty and wellbeloved, wee greete you well. Whereas it hath beene represented unto us that Sir William Creagh* of Newcastle upon Tine, Knt., is a merchant of considerable dealeing, wee have thought fitt hereby to require you, that fforthwith upon receipt hereof you make him a freeman, free hoastman and free merchant of our said towne and county of Newcastle, any constitution, custome or order to the contrary in anywise, notwithstanding, with which wee are graciously pleased to dispence in his behalfe. And for soe doeing this shall be your warrant. And soe we bidd you farewell.

Given at our court at Whitehall, the 17th day of March 168⁵/₆, in the second yeare of our reigne. By his majesty's speciall command.
Sunderland.

Immediatly after readeing of the said letter, the Company, in obedience to his Majesty's command did admitt Sir William Creagh, Knight to his freedome of this ffellowshipp, and so hee was sworne accordingly.

[25 June 1686.]

[Another royal letter, addressed like the last, and in identical terms, except] Whereas it hath beene represented unto us that John Errington and Thomas Errington of Beaufront, in our county of Northumberland, gentlemen, are considerable dealers in leade in that our towne and county of Newcastle, wee have thought fitt, &c.
[Dated 26 April, 1686.]

Immediatly after reading of the abovesaid letter, the Company in humble obedience to his majesty's command did admitt Mr. John Errington and Mr. Thomas Errington to their respective freedoms of this fellowship, and were sworn accordingly.

[2 Sep. 1686.]

Mr. Francis Johnson made a complaint of Mrs. Ann Blenkinsopp, a daughter of a brother of this fellowship, that shee not being free of this fellowship did intrench upon this Company's privileges by keeping open shop, and selling of flax, tow, and other merchandizes. It was ordered, That shee should have notice given to dispose of her goods within six months, and not to keep shop any longer.

[29 Oct. 1686.]

[Anthony Dobson petitioned the Company to remitt him the fines amounting to £105 owing for scandalous words. "Granted" provided hee pay according to an act of the Company for every twenty shillings soe remitted the summe of 12^d.] *

[6 Jan. 1686-7.]

Upon a motion made by a member of the Company, That it would be very decent and convenient for them to have a velvet pall and twelve black cloaks particularly to belong to the Company, it was duly considered of, and carried on the affirmative. Whereupon it was ordered, That a committee should be chosen, and desired to meet in the Merchants' Court at some convenient time, to consult of the best expedient to effect the same, and also to devise a short act for the better regulation of the use and manner of the disposall of the aforesaid Palls and Clokes. The said committee upon the first day of February met in the Merchants Court, where they tooke into consideration the abovesaid order, and it was agreed, That patterns of velvet and cloth should be sent for to London; Mr. Ellstob to procure patterns of both, and Mr. Barnes of cloth, which was accordingly performed, and the said patterns by them both severally produced at a committee held the fourteenth, and after view of the said patterns and prices to each anext, being seriously considered, the whole committee resolved, That the dismission of the whole matter should be referred to the Company's determination at the next court.

[16 Feb. 1686-7]

The committee appointed for buying the cloth for the clokes and velvet for the pall reported their result. The whole court resolved, That the cloth for the twelve clokes should be provided by Mr. Ralph Elstob, Mr. Richard Gray and Mr. George Huntley, and the velvet for the pall by Mr. Elstob only. The money to be paid by the wardens.

[Resolved] That the Company's money might be lett out to a brother of the Company at 4 pound per cent. upon good security.

Ordered that the warden that keeps the accounts for his care and paines shall have ten pounds per annum for his salary.

* The Act is set out on page 75.

[10 March 1686-7.]

Henery Peareth petitioned for the loane of the Company's money. It was ordered that hee should have the loane of the said money for twelve moneths at foure pounds per cent., and allso to have three moneths notice given him before hee pay in the said money.

[8 April 1687.]

[Elstob and Gray presented bills for pall and clokes] which were then brought into court and after vew were very well approved of, and ordered the said bills to be delivered to and paid by Mr. Harle, and allso the care of the said pall and clokes comitted to him ; and accordingly were sent to his house.

Ordered that Mr. Harle should have three pounds per annum allowed him for his care and paines in keepeing, letting forth, and receiveing backe the said vellvett pall and black clokes upon any occation.

Whereas by former order, at the charge of this ffellowshipp a vellvett pall and twelve mourning clokes are made and provided for the honoure of the Company in the decent interment of its members, &c.

It is enacted, &c., That every brother and sister of this Fellowship at the buriall of themselves or theire children, and not otherwise, may have the use of the said pall and clokes, or any part thereof. Allso any brother of this ffellowshipp for his owne use only may have a mourneing cloke to attend the ffunerall of a ffriend or relation, though not free of this ffellowshipp, provided it be within the towne of Newcastle.

It is allso ordered, That the warden, for the time beeing, shall have the keepeing of the said pall and clokes (in a wainscot press made at the charge of this ffellowshipp) to be sealed with the Company's seale. And the said pall and clokes, or any of them, shall not be lent or delivered by the said warden unto any person whatsoever, untill security be given in writeing under the hand of a brother or bretheren of this ffellowshipp to redeliver and send back the same in one day or two after the ffunerall, in the like condition they received [them]; makeing good the loss or damadge if there be any.

It is allso further ordered, the pall and clokes shall not be lent to any ffunerall without this towne and county, nor lent into the country upon any pretence whatsoever.

And be it further enacted, That noe brother or sister shall reape any benifitt by this act, unless the party deceased shall be decently interred within the Church or Churchyarde, any thing in this act contained to the contrary notwithstanding. And in case the said pall or clokes shall be imployed or used otherways then is ordered and expressed by this act, then the member or members borrowing the same, beeing convicted thereof, shall forfeite for every such offence five pounds to the use of this fellowship, without grace or favoure of court. Also if the said warden shall lend the same to any person or persons otherwise then is appointed and expressed by this act, beeing convicted thereof, he shall forfeite for every such offence five pounds to the use of this fellowship without grace or favoure of Court.

Whereas this court hath lately made an augmentation to the warden his salary for his care and paines in keeping the Company's bookes and accounts.

It is therefore enacted, That yearely, and every yeare, the first court day after the auditors chosen by the fellowship have audited the Company's accounts, they shall deliver them into court. And it is further ordered, That, at the same court, the warden for the time beeing who hath the charge of the bookes and accounts shall bring into court the money to ballance due thereupon, to the end it may be lent out to a brother or sister of this Fellowship or otherways disposed of as the company shall thinke meet. And it is further enacted, That every warden or auditor makeing default therein shall forfeit to the use of this Fellowship the summe of five pounds.

Sir William Creagh Knight presented a letter from the King's moste excellent majesty, thus directed :

To our trusty and wellbeloved Nicolas Cole, Esqr., Mayor of our towne of Newcastle upon Tine, and Governor of the Hostmen Company there, and to Timothy Davison, Esquire, Governoure of the Merchants Company in our said towne.

Which letter was then reade. A true copie hereafter followeth :

James R.

Trusty and wellbeloved, wee greete you well. Whereas wee were pleased by our letters beareing date the 17th day of March 168⁵/₆ to require you to admitt our trusty and wellbeloved Sir William Creagh, Knight (beeing a merchant of considerable dealing in that our towne Newcastle) a freeman, free-hostman, and free-merchant of that corporation. And whereas wee are given to understand that, in pursuance of our said letters, hee has beene admitted, but not in so ample manner as wee intended ; wee have thought fitt hereby to require you, that you cause his said freedoms to be recorded by order of the common Councell, and the companys of hostmen and Merchants, so as hee and his posterity may be able to take apprentices and enjoy all other franchises which any freeman of the said corporation enjoys, either by descent or as having served as an apprentice, and for so doing this shall be your warrant. And so wee bidd you farewell. Given at our court att Windsor, the 31st day of May, 1687, in the third yeare of our reigne.

By his Majesty's command. Sunderland P.

After readeing of the aforesaid letter the company in all loyall obedience to and in pursuance of his majesty's moste gracious commands did order that the said Sir William Creagh, should be recorded an absolute ffree brother as Merchant Draper of that their said ffellowshipp, as full and to all intents according to the purport of the said letter.

[14 Sep. 1688.]

Sir William Creagh, Knight, the present mayor, requested the Company for a list of the names of all the members thereof, which was seriously considered off, and after some debate Mr. Governor put it to the Company whether the said request could conveniently be granted or not, and beeing put severally to hands was carryed on the negative.

[18 Sep. 1688.]

A letter from the King's moste excellent majesty was with all loyalty and humble obedience reade. But the admission of Mr. Edward Gray suspended. And it was agreed, That a comittee should be chosen and desired to meete to-morrow morneing to consult and prepare a petition to present his sacred majesty of the evell consequence will inevitably fall upon this ffellowshipp by the admission of the said Edward Gray.

[The King's letter is similar to the first of his letters to the Company, except that it is only addressed to the merchants company and not to the Hostmen or the Common Council.]

To the King's moste excellent Majesty,

The humble petition of the governoure, assistants, wardens and ffellowshipp of Merchants Adventurers of Newcastle upon Tine,

Humbly Sheweth,

That upon receipt of your sacred Majesty's letter requiring us to admitt Mr. Edward Grey a member of this our Fellowship, with all duty and submission, after a serious and deliberate consideration, the said Company unanimously agreed, before his admission, humbly to offerr to your majesty the reasons annexed, which wee apprehend tends not only to the ruine and dissolution of this your majesty's antient society, but of the members thereof, not doubting your majesty, beeing sensible of the greate prejudice wee may sustaine thereby, out of your princely compation and goodnesse will be graciously pleased to releive us, and withdrawe this your mandate.

And wee as in duty bound shall ever pray.

Reasons humbly to be offered.

1st In all times the persons of quallity and gentry of these northerne countys put theire sons apprentices to serve and abide ten yeares before they could be free of this ffellowshipp, and paid considerable summes of money to whome they were bound. If ffreedomes may be obtained without service they will altogether decline this way of education of theire childeren.

2 Hereby an immediate loss and damadge falls upon the present members and traders in this ffellowship. They will be deprived of fitt servants to trust and imploy in theire affaires besides the loss of the moneys given with every apprentice at his bindeing.

3 This Company is now more numerous then hath beene knowne in any time of memory, and noe trade answerable to aforde a comfortable support to the present members. If more be admitted, tends greatly to theire impoverishment.

4. The loss falles in generall upon all trade when men unexperienced, beeing not educated therein, have a liberty and ffreedome to intermedle.

5 A greate discouradgement hereby is allready fallne upon all our present servants and apprentices, which they have made knowne by petition to our Company, expresseing theire sorrow and disapointment that after ten yeares service and moneys paid, others shall have equall right and liberty with them in that priviledge for which they have served so long.

Given under the common seale of our ffellowshipp the 20th day of September 1688.

Hereafter the copie of the Company's letter to the Earle of Sunderland.*

May it please your Lordship,

His Majesty's letter mandatory for the admitting of Mr. Edward Grey a ffree merchant of this towne was this day presented to us in court. Wee have defferred the executeing of it untill his Majesty and your Lordshipp were acquainted with the greate inconveniences it would cause to this antient and numerous society. Wee begg your Lordship's favourable interpretation of this delay, and that your Lordship will beleive it is not from any want of duty or due obedience to his Majesty's commands, but only humbly to lay before his Majesty the prejudice that may thereby ensue, and then with all submission to expect his Majesty's pleasure. The great zeale your Lordship has upon all occations expressed for the incouradgement of trade makes us hope for your assistance in this affaire, and that your Lordship will on our behalfe interceed to his Majesty, that hee would be gratically pleased for the reasons here inclosed to recall

* At this time (September 1688) the Earl of Sunderland was in communication with William of Orange. In October 1688 James II. restored the forfeited franchises of all municipal corporations, and removed from office his nominees, and in November 1688 William of Orange landed at Torbay.

this his letter mandatory, and that for the future his Majesty would be pleased not to grant any more : which, if your Lordship please to voutshafe [sic] us, it will be an honoure and favoure which will ever obleidge us to be

To the R^t Hon^{ble} the Earle of Sunderland, president of his Majesty's moste Hon^{ble} privie Councill, and princi-pall Secretary of State.
Humbly Present.

[24 Sep. 1688.]

The wardens presented three precepts, signed by the Right Worshipfull Mr. Mayor, the Recorder, Aldermen and Sherriffe, directed to the wardens or stewards of the severall mysterys or societys of Drapers, Mercers and Boothmen, requireing the said wardens to summons the severall members with all convenient speede, to electe and chuse two persons out of ffoure named by them to be electors for the yeare ensueing ; which said precepts together with the clause of the new Charter, relateing to the same, beeing reade in open court, whereby it appeared they were to chose burgeses for parlyament contrary to the antient usage and prescription : after a serious and mature debate, it was put to hands whether they would proceed to elect and retorne according to the tenure of the said precepts or not, and was carried in the negative.*

[18 Jan. 1688-9.]

Mr. William Bayles, son of Mr. William Bayles, late deceased, moved the Company that they would please to admitt him to his ffredome, and after some debate, especially of his age, hee not yett beeing full seaventeene yeares old, and the Company neaver haveing any former president of the like nature before them, or any extant in the bookes, it was put to handes whether he should be admitted or not, and was carryed on the negative. Notwithstanding, out of the greate respect the Company had for his deceased ffather, and good incouradgment they would give to the young man the whole court consented that hee might carry on his trade as formerly for the space of twelve moneths.

* Between June 9 and Sep. 22, 1688, James II. had granted the town a new charter, whereby the ancient custom of electing burgesses for Parliament was changed, and new provisions were made in it increasing the power of the Crown ; but the previous surrender of the former charters not having been enrolled, this new charter was avoided by the proclamation made in the following October. See Brand's History of Newcastle, vol. ii. p. 195 ; "The Life of Ambrose Barnes," Surtees Society Publications, vol. i. p. 176. A similar precept directed to the Company of Barber Surgeons and Wax and Tallow Chandlers of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, with facsimiles of the signatures, is set out in a paper by Dr. Embleton, on the records of that Company, in the Archæologia Æliana, N.S., vol. xv. p. 228.

Mr. Edward Ridley was ordred £10 for his charges and care of the Company's affaire at London against Edward Gray's attempts for a ffreedome by mandamus, which, by his Majesty's proclamation for restoreing antient charters all ffredomes by mandatory letters were made null and voyde.

This court considering the great inconveniences may arise by the numbers of ffreemen beeing admitted to theire ffredomes very yonge and under age,

It is therefore enacted, &c., That from and after the second day of February, which shall be in the year of our Lord, 1690, noe ffreemans son shall be admitted to his ffreedome of this ffellowshipp untill he hath attained unto the full age of one and twenty years; which shall be testyfyed in open court by a brother of this ffellowshipp, either of his owne knowledge, or upon his vew and examination of the church register where he was borne.

Mr. Governour moved the Company that a committee might be chosen to inspect the charter of the Merchants of Eastland, which was accordingly done.*

[20 Sep. 1693.]

Mr. Christopher Teesedale beeing complained off for that hee kept and imployed in his shopp an hyered servant, who was neither a ffree brother or the son of a brother of this ffellowshipp. Fined £10.

[29 June 1694.]

Complaint was made against Mr. John Maddison that he had unduely taken two apprentices bound to him, not beeing ffree of the Hambrough Company† whereupon the court takeing the said complaint into serious consideration and findeing it to be a greate dishonoure to the company in generall as well as the greate prejudice the young men will sustaine thereby, it was agreed, That Mr. Maddison Brethren of the Merchants Company of Newcastle were allowed to take up their freedom of this Eastland Company. Welford's Newcastle and Gateshead, vol. ii. p. 514. Extracts from the records of the Merchant Adventurers of Newcastle, shewing their relationships with the Eastland Company, will appear in vol. ii. of this publication.

† The Company of Merchant Adventurers of England was commonly called the Hamburgh Company. The disputes between this Company and the Newcastle Merchant Adventurers will be set out in vol. ii. of this publication. The above complaint was that the master had not taken up his freedom of the Hamburgh Company. At the time of the incorporation of the Newcastle Merchant Adventurers, all the members were members also of the London Merchant Adventurers, and the Newcastle Merchants had sedulously kept up

John Loudon apprentice to Jonathan Hargrave admitted. Fined £100 for having presumed to take up his ffreedome on the Hambrough Company at London without the Governor's certificate.

[27 March 1695.]

[John Loudon petitioned for remission of fine of £100 laid on him at last court. £99, 15^s. remitted.]

[11 Oct. 1695.]

Complaint was made against one Mrs. England for intrenching upon the priviledges of the Company by tradeing in and cutting of silkes, callicoes, musslings &c. to the greate prejudice of those bretheren who trade in those comoditys. Committee chosen to consider of the said complaint.

[27 Nov. 1695.]

Mr. Governour acquainted the Company That Mrs. England had beene with him and did declare and promise That shee would not act anything to the prejudice of the Company in generall or any perticular member thereof in that or any other kinde for the future.

[25 Jan. 1696-7.]

Mr. Governour acquainted the Company that hee had received from York a copie of the petition which the merchants in London and others had presented to the honourable the House of Commons complaining of the Rushia Company* which was read and very well approved of. Mr. Governour then put it to the Company whether it might be convenient or not That a faire copie of the said petition should be drawne in large paper in the name of the Governour, Assistants, Wardens and Fellowship of Merchants Adventurers of their priviledge of taking up their freedom of the London Company. From the way the fine was imposed, it was probably want of the necessary funds which had prevented Mr. John Maddison from so taking up his freedom. The Governor's certificate mentioned in the next following extract, was intended to evidence that the Newcastle Company was an independent Company, having control over its own members, and not a mere branch of the London Company, a position which had been controverted in the course of the disputes above mentioned.

[3 March 1696-7.]

A motion was made That it would be very convenient and allso for the honour of the Company to meete upon the Exchange att some sett houre. It was agreed that a comittee should be chosen to consult of the moste ffitt time for meeteing. The comittee mett accordingly and resolved upon the time keepeing the exchang to be betweene the hours of eleven and twelve of the clock: to commence the 25th instant, 1697.

[9 April 1697.]

Alderman Robson made complaint against Mr. William Johnson for that hee had so unduely corrected his servant Timothy Robson by his unreasonable and violent beateing him, insomuch that hee was alltogether disabled of doeing his maister any service, and forced to goe home to his ffathers, where he doth still continue in a very badd condition, so that his ffather, beeing fully resolved, as allso the young man, neaver to returne to his maisters service; it is therefore their humble request That this Company will be pleased to consider hereof and give their determination of the whole matter. [Six months allowed the youth to make choice of a new master and] It was further ordered That Mr. Johnson should restore the summe of £20 of the money he had with him, to be paid at such time as the young man shall be sett over to a new maister.

[17 Aug. 1698.]

Mr. Nicolas Redley moved the Company on the behalfe of Benjamin Anderson son of Mr. Bartram Anderson an antient member of this ffellowshipp deceased beeing cast into prison at London and not haveing anything wherewith to releive himselfe, that they would be pleased to take his sad and necessitous condition into their serious considerations, which they did and out of their Christian charity were pleased to give him £5.

[3 Nov. 1698.]

The enrolment of Mr. William Johnsons apprentice was suspended by reason that Mr. Johnson had not paid the twenty pounds which by order of court he was to pay at the setting over of his man Timothy Robson.

[27 Feb. 1698-9.]

[John Stephenson who had had the use of John Rumney's bequest of £100 for three years, "informed the court that the money was ready, when they pleased to demand it," but requested the further loan of it "for three yeares to come, by reason he had a considerable loss by reason of short money, and the fall of the price of guines." His request was granted.]*

[7 Sept. 1699.]

Mr. William Johnson made complaint of his servant James Nesfield, how that he was of late very undutyfull and negligent in his service, whereupon the young man was sent for and being come into court Mr. Governour acquainted him with the said complaint, whereunto the young man made answer by way of complaint how that his maister had given him undue correction by beateing him with his hands, and kikeing him with his feete, which rendered him uncapeable of doeing that service he ought; yet was ready and willing still to remaine with his master and by God's assistance to be his faithfull and obedient servant to the utmoste of his power. [Ordered that Johnson "should continue him in his service as formerly without any further trouble."]

[1 Nov. 1699.]

James Nesfield apprentice to Mr. William Johnson made complaint of his maister how that he had turned him away out of service, since the order of last court that he should entertaine him as formerly in his service, but contrary to the said order did violently beat him, and endeavord to thrust him headlong downe staires. Mr. Johnson beeing in court made answere that Nesfield was not a fitt servant for him to doe him any service and therefore was resolved not to entertaine him any longer, and desired he might have justice, and reflecting upon the court said that he could not have right done him with other undecent language [for which he is fined £100]. The court then tooke the young man's case into consideration and ordered that Mr. Johnson should deliver in the bond which he forceably had obtained from him to cross him out of the Company's bookes, and also that he should pay his servant his wages that is due to him [Three months allowed Nesfield in which to find a new master].

[21 Aug. 1700.]

Complaint was made by Mr. Edw^d Harle, senior that the Charnell House, which of right did and does belong to the Company is detained from the said Company by the Mayor and Burgesses of this said town. It was thereupon ordered that Mr. Governour [and others] would be pleased to acquaint Mr Maior with the said complaint, and that they would further prosecute the matter at the next common councell if need require.

[24 July 1701.]

and merchandises as well grosserys as mercers goods by retaile haveing onely a glass window placed before the shop, which we take to be a great prejudice to this Company. That Mr. Tho. Sutton who lately imported some q^{rs} of flax and hemp did lodg the same in warehouse or warehouses in Gateshead, which does mightily tend to the carreing to Gateshead the trade of this town, to the great prejudice and detriment of this Company and contrary to the rights and priviledges of the same.

Mr Governour did make complaint against Richard Thompson apprentice to Mr Edw^d Harrison that he the said Rich^d Thompson did rudely and most unmannerly behave himself toward him by boldly cocking his hatt two severall times when Mr. Governor spoke to the said Thompson instead of decently uncovering his head. ffor which offence and as an example to warn and put other apprentices in mind of their duty, most especially to Mr. Governour, this company did lay a fine of Tenn pounds upon the said Thompson.

Notice was taken that att the ffunerall of some of the brethren and sisters a very small appearance of the Company were there present to attend the corps of the deceased to church. [The standing committee to inspect the acts and report hereon.]

[23 March 1703-4.]

[Complaint against John Johnson apprentice to Sam^l Gill for amongst other offences "importing into Sunderland Hollands topp tow and other merchants goods." Against Richard Robinson apprentice to John Rawling for "importing divers goods and merchandises into the port of Sunderland, as allso for inhabiting in the said port, and allso for takeing up the trade of a ffitter in Sunderland, and publicquely contracting with coal owners of that river of Sunderland for great parcells of Coales." These offences to be registered and considered when the apprentices demand their freedome].

Ralph Shield "by reason of his many offences and crimes committed against his master," crossed the books.

[A committee had been appointed to enquire into the difficulties between Shield and his master. From their report have been made the following extracts]. This committe did call Mr. Robert Watson before them, who did declare by oath [that] he had sustained great loss and damage by his said apprentice, and did produce a note of good amounting to £10 and upwards, which the said Watson did affirm was either imbeasled or otherwise waisted and destroyed by his said apprentice. The said Shield did own he had waisted and destroyed some part of them. Watson did further say his said apprentice had been very undutifull and disobedient. Particularly one Gascoign comeing to his shop and giveing him abusive language, and being debter to him upon bond £17, did order his apprentice Shield to seek out said Gascoign after he was gone from the shop, being minded to arest him, and his said apprentice haveing found in a neighbouring ail house the said Gascoign instead of aquainting his master, did advertize him to be gone, for his master had taken an entry out of court against him, and had two sargeants ready to arest him; whereupon the said Gascoign did goe to Gateshead and has not since that time been seen in this cuntry. ffurther Watson did say that his said apprentice did threaten him in an unusuall manner, and often swore he would be his death, and would crush his head against the table, with many such like provokeing expressions. Shield being called before this committe did alledg for his justification, that his master would have had him charge to Sir James Clavering's account more goods then were delivered, and allso that he would had him swore a confession of two severall persons of a debt under fforty shillings, which his master did utterly deny, and was credited by this committee, by reason that in the Court of Conscience his oath alone is all that court requires.

The Companys pall and cloaks [to] be well mended, but the covering of the table and seats in the Court [to] be referred to a more convenient time.

[14 March 1704-5.]

Mr. Governour acquainted the Company that he had found amongst the writeings belonging to this ffellowship a note signed by George Dawson Mayor for £100 borrowed for the use of this corporation from the Society of Merchants, dated the 14th day of Ffebruary 1650, which said note was read in court, and allso the Company's bookes searched, and it does appear that the said £100 was paid in to this Company in Aprill 1672. Ordered that the said note should be delivered up to the mayor of this Corporation.

[25 May 1705.]

Mr. Governour did communicate a letter from Mr. William Carr our late member of parliament for this Corporation directed to himself and ffellowship of Merchants in Newcastle upon Tyne, which did import his acknowledgments to this Company for their former favour in assisting him to be made one of their representatives, and his willingness to serve them in that station this ensueing session of parliament. And after the same was read, Sir William Blackett being present did in an ingenious and significant speech declare to this Company his intention to represent them himself this ensueing sessions one other burgess for this Corporation. Which said speech and letter were very well approved, and the persons and merit of the said Sir William Blackett and Mr. William Carr so very well known and acceptable to this Company, they did unanimously agree to give them their assistance at the next election.*

[10 July 1705.]

Complaint made against Mathew Bell who keeps shop on the Sand Hill and sells broad cloth, but is not free of this fellowship. [Also] that he does sell by retail shallows, silk, buttons and other mercer goods. [Standing committee to consider the matter].

[30 Aug. 1710.]

[Rich^d Robinson petitions to be admitted, but the Company "finding that the said Richard Robinson had in the time of his apprenticeship traded at Sunderland, did not think fit to admit him."]

[8 Feb. 1710-11.]

[Nicholas Rand came into court to receive his freedom, but his master declared he did not continue in his service more than three years. Rand has for some time past kept an open tavern. For these reasons his admission is refused.]

[6 June 1711.]

[Complaint that Thomas Warwick] "apprentice to Mr. Joseph Partis has yet near two years of his term of apprenticeship unexpired, has married a wife upwards of one year, has kept open shop ever since his marriage."

[Complaint against John Lawson apprentice to Mr. Francis Brandling] "for wearing gold or silver lace upon his hat, ruffles at neck, breast and hands." Fined 20^s.

[Various persons are to be proceeded against for selling groceries, mercery &c. and] "This Company did agree that by reason Mr. Cuthbert Ogle, confectioner, since his indictment last sessions in Newcastle has been spoke to by some of the members to admonish him to forbear selling of figgs, He gave for answer that if he could make profit he would not onely sell figgs but sugars also, and that after the figgs he had were sold he would order to London for twenty barralls more, which is so great an affront to the liberties and priviledges of this fellowship that this court does thereupon make this order, That no brother of this fellowship, servant, agent,

* Sir William Blackett (who was the second baronet of that name, and the third son of the first baronet), was elected member of Parliament for Newcastle on the 7th June 1705. The Parliament met on the 25th October 1705; and he died in London on the 29th December in the same year.—Welford's Men of Mark 'twixt Tyne and Tweed, vol. i. p. 303; Brand's History of Newcastle, vol. ii. p. 212.

or other person for himself or any of his friends or acquaintance do after the day of the date hereof buy of the said Cuthbert Ogle, his wife, servant or agent, any wett or dry sweetmeats, comfitts or other confectionary goods whatsoever, untill the said Cuthbert Ogle shall first make his submission to the satisfaction of the company &c."

[5 Dec. 1715.]

Mr. Governour proposed to this Company the signing an humble address to his Majestie King Georg upon the happy success of his arms against the rebells in Northumberland &c. which address was read in open court and approved of and signed in court by this Company.

[19 Sept. 1717.]

Mr. Governour also acquainted the Company he had taken several Counsels opinions relating to the priviledges of this Company and that amongst other things they advised for expeditions sake to act in concert with the Corporation and that accordingly an Act of Comon Counsell was made in the Company's favour of which he delivered into Court a copy as follows:—

At a Comon Councell held the twenty ninth day of April Anno Dmi 1717,

Whereas divers persons not being free of the Company or fellowship of Merchants Adventurers inhabiting within the Town and County of Newcastle upon Tyne nor Widows of Freemen of the same Company or fellowship of late have sold and now frequently do sell within the said Town and liberties thereof to several other persons not being free or the Widows of persons free of the said Company or fellowship of Merchant Advent^{rs}. severall goods wares and merchandizes which by custom time out of mind used within the said town and the liberties thereof have been and ought to be sold by freemen and the widows of freemen of the said Company or fellowship onely And also of late had used and exercised and now frequently do use and exercise within the said Town of Newcastle and the liberties thereof the trade mistery and occupation of Merchants Advent^{rs}. contrary to the said custom and to the antient liberties franchises and priviledges of the said Company or fellowship of Merch^{ts}. Advent^{rs}. and to severall Royal Charters made and granted to the said Company or fellowship in confirmation thereof to the great impoverishment of the Freemen and Brethren of the said Company or fellowship and of the widows of freemen thereof for remedy whereof and for preventing the like abuses and injuries for the future it is ordered by the Mayor Aldermen Sheriff and the rest of the Common Councell of the said Town and County of Newcastle upon Tyne in Common Councell assembled that from and after the first day of July next ensuing the date hereof no person not being free of the said Company or fellowship or not being the widow of a freeman thereof shall sell within the said Town or the liberties thereof to any other person or persons not being free or the widow of one free of the said Company or fellowship any of the goods wares or merchandises accustomedly sold by freemen or the widows of freemen of the said Company or fellowship nor shall use or exercise in the Town of Newcastle aforesaid or the liberties thereof the trade mystery or occupation of a Merchant Advent^{ur}. contrary to the said custom and to antient liberties franchises and priviledges aforesaid upon pain that every person so offending shall forfeit to the Mayor and Burgesses of the said Town of Newcastle upon Tyne for every parcell of goods so sold of the value of five pounds or under, the sum of Tenn shillings and for every parcell of goods so sold above the value of five pounds, the sum of two shillings per pound according to the current market price of such goods wares and merchandizes, to be recovered by action of debt bill or plaint to be comenced and prosecuted in any of his Majesties Court or Courts of Record att Westminster Together with Costs of suit in the name of the Mayor and Burgesses of the said Town of Newcastle upon Tyne or by way of distress upon the goods of every such offender by warrant under the seal of the said Mayor and Burgesses And it is further ordered that a copy of this By law shall be affixed to the Publick Exchange in Newcastle aforesaid to the end that all persons concerned may take notice thereof.

Mr. Governour did also acquaint this Court that by the oath he took at his being elected Governour he would not commence any suit in law without their consent, and Whereas divers warrants had been signed by Mr. Mayor and seizures made of the goods of several persons who had knowingly offended against the said Act did desire to know whether this Company would permit him to take such further methods in law as he should be advised by Counsell. To which this Court did unanimously agree that Mr. Governour may proceed against those or any other offenders in that nature as he should think most proper and that they would support and assist him with what sum of money he should require and for his great care in and concern for the welfare of the priviledges and franchises this whole Court does return him their most humble thanks.

At the same Court Mr. Governour seeing but a small number of Brethren, ordered absents to be called and upon a fine of five shillings Assistents, and two shillings and sixpence the rest of the Brethren, which was done accordingly.

[18 May 1718.]

Mr. Governour acquainted this Company that complaints were made of divers hecklers of lint and hemp in this town did ocupie that trade by candle light, which endangered the burning some part of the town, and for preventing the same an act of Common Councill was made and a copy thereof served on Mr. Governour which was read in court, wherein were mentioned divers penallties to be inflicted on such as dare for the future offend in that kind, which was so well approved of by this court that there upon was made this order that the same penalties mentioned in the said act should be submitted to by every brother of this society that shall be guilty of the same crime. The act is as ffolowes.

Att a Common Councill held January 20th 1717. Whereas the Mayor and burgesses of the town of Newcastle upon Tyne, in the County of the town of Newcastle upon Tyne, time whereof the memory of man is not to the contrary, have been and now are a Corporacion or body politique, and have used and accustomed for all the time aforesaid to make by laws and ordinances for the better goverment of the said Town and of the artificers, workmen and tradesmen inhabiting within the same, and for preventing and restraining such artificers, workmen and tradesmen from doing any act, matter or thing which apparently tended to the publick hazard and prejudice of the said town or the inhabitants thereof, so as such bylaws, or ordinances were not contrary to the laws and statutes of this realm. And whereas severall persons of their own accord do frequently hecle lint and hemp within the said town by candle light, and the merchants and others who imploy the said persons in heckling lint and hemp do sometimes oblige and direct them so to do, which practice frequently endangers the burning and destroying several houses in the said town, ffor remedy whereof and for preventing such mischiefs and daingers as may happen thereby, it is ordered by the mayor, aldermen, sheriff and the rest of the Common Councill of the said town and county of Newcastle upon Tyne in Common Councill assembled that from and after the 29th day of September next, no person whatsoever shall heckle any lint or hemp by candle light within the said town upon paine that every person so doing shall forfeit to the mayor and burgesses of the said town of Newcastle upon Tyne the summe of fforty shillings for every time such persons shall be guilty of the said offence, and every merchant or other person whatsoever who shall oblige or direct any person or persons to heckle lint or hemp as aforesaid by candle light, within the said town shall allso fforfeit to the mayor and burgesses of the said town of Newcastle upon Tyne the summe of ffive pounds for every time that he she or they shall give such directions as aforesaid, to be recovered by action of debt, bill or plaint to be commenced and prosecuted in any of his majesties court of record at Westminster, together with costs of suit in the name of the Mayor and burgesses of the said town of Newcastle upon Tyne, or by way of distress upon the goods of every such offender by warrant under the hand and seal of the mayor and burgesses. And it is ffurther ordered that a cobby of this by law be affixed to the publique Exchange in Newcastle aforesaid, that all persons concerned may take notice thereof, and that another copy be delivered to the Governour of the Merchants Company of the said town of Newcastle that the brethren of that Company may be informed of the same.

Mr. Governour did propose that whereas formerly wee used to choose election men for voteing for the mayor, sheriff, etc., in the ffree school, it would be more convenient and more private to assemble in the Merchants Court on Munday the said day of election and there proceed to the choyse of the said election men, which was very well approved of and is hereby recorded accordingly.

[16 March 1718-19.]

Mr. Thos. Warwick, merchant, did petition this Company for releif against the Surgeons of this town who have sued him att law for giveing medecines and plaisters to sick and hurt people, and complains further that the said surgeons do incroach upon the Merchants Apothicarys of this town by selling divers goods and merchandizes belonging to them. [Committee appointed to consider the matter.]

[10 Aug. 1720.]

Mr. William Reed, merchant, being in Court was accused before the Company for suffering Mr. Charles Atkinson, Oastman, to retaile iron in his name in a celler in Trinity Chair. Fined £20.

[The company orders "Mr. Ralph Hall, merchant to attend" Nathaniel Hargrave, the company's attorney, "to give account of a heckler of flax who keeps open shop at the blew stone on the bridge in order to proceed in law against him."]

[6 March 1720-1.]

Mr. Governour acquainted this Company that Georg Storrer apprentice to Alderman Ralph Reed deceased was complained of for dealing in hops, lofe sugar, indico and other merchants goods without leave, in breach of the Company's priviledg, to the detriment of the shop, selling the said goods to the customers of the said shop. The said Georg Storrer was called before the Company, and the fact being plainly proved against him, Mr. Governor and the Company did think fit to send the said Georg Storrer to Westgate for his said offence, which was done accordingly.

[21 Dec. 1721.]

A velvett pall was ordered to be bought by the wardens and secretary, and that the woman that sweeps the Merchants Court be made acquainted when the pall is borrowed by any brother, and to be paid by them sixpence for bringing of it carefully to the warden's house.

Mr. William Johnson petitioned against Humphrey Anderson for beating and bruseing him in a most cruell manner, which was referrd to Mr. Governour.

[25 April 1724.]

Matthew Bell son of Mr. Matthew Bell of the town and county of Newcastle upon Tyne, draper, apprentice to Mr. Thomas Salkeld, Boothman, by indentures bearing date March 18, 1723, were read, but the Company takeing exception att his title of Draper, as not belonging to him, nor to the trade he belongs to, the said indentures were ordered not to be enrolled till the word Draper was erased and some other title incerted. [Court held 14 Sep. 1724, the word Draper having been erased and Gentleman inserted the indentures were enrolled.]

[12 July 1726.]

[A committee reports that they had met 8 June 1726] and had laid before them by the wardens a list of 114 persons or thereabouts who keep open shop in this Corporacion, and most of them not free of this said town, and many of them sell by retaile goods properly belonging to the Merchants Company, to the great loss and prejudice of the said merchants, and this Committe knowing by experience that inditements are tedious and expensive this Committe does therefor humbly desire that the said offenders may be punished by a weekly assesment laid on them for the use and benefit of the poor, as Mr. Mayor and the magistrates shall think most proper, which speedy method wee hope will oblige the offenders to betake themselves to their respective trades and business, whereby we may preserve to ourselves and successors our antient privilidges intire and undisturbed, which list as above we request may be laid before Mr. Mayor and aldermen in order that the said offenders may be assesed as above desired. This Committe allso does complaine against Mr. William Leighton, merchant, for telling severall of the retailers above complained of that he would insure them against any penallty they should thereby suffer, and the said Mr. Leighton being in Court did partly deny the same, but was ordered to let those persons know he was mistaken in offering any such thing to them.

[8 Dec. 1726.]

The business done by the Committee by order of Court of the 16th September 1726 was read, and this court does agree with the said committee that Mr. Robert Johnson and Mr. Thomas Partis having seised ffouerteen Barrells of Tarr belonging to Mr. Edward Ord, forreign bought and forreign sold, and also having seised two parcels of wheat, twenty four Bushells belonging to James Brankston, Oastman sold to Robert Dalton, Starchmaker and Eight Bowles belonging to John Robinson Junior, Oastman deserve for their diligence in their office, thanks from the Company. And this Company does agree unanimously that any Action or Suit att law commenced or hereafter shall be commenced against the Wardens for the seizures aforenamed, the expense thereof shall be paid by the Merchants' Company. And this Company does further agree that if the said Mr. Edward Ord will Petition this Company for the Tarr seised as above, acknowledge his offence and give bond never to offend against the privileges thereof for the future, he paying the charge and expense thereof, shall have his Tarr restored him, or else that the said Tarr be sold and the amount thereof to be paid into the hands of the Wardens of this Company. And Allso that sale be made of the Wheat now in the Merchants' Court and the cash paid to the said Wardens.

Mr. Robert Johnson, Warden made complaint that Mr. Chaloner Cooper, merchant did give him abusive language for seising the Wheat aforementioned, and said he had acted imprudently, with other unbecoming expressions to an officer serving the Company. The said Mr. Cooper being then in Court made some apology for himself, but did not fully answer what the Company expected. Mr. Governour did modestly reprehend him and in hopes he will not be guilty of the likes again the fault was passed over.

ORDERED that George Grey Esquire, Counsellor at law, his opinion for prosecuting in the Court of Exchequer persons offending against the privileges of the Merchants' Company be put in execution, and also that application be made by proper persons to the said Court of Exchequer for establishing us in our Antient liberties and privileges. And allso that Mr. Attorney Generall's opinion in the case between Mr. Vinkinson of Lynn and this Corporation be transcribed out of the books in the Town Court and writ at length in the Merchants Company's Books to be used as occasion requires.

This Company does agree with the committe that divers goods and merchandises are landed att Shields to the great loss of this Company and Corporation by neglect of the water bayliff there, and hopes that effectuall care will be taken to prevent the same for the future.

Mr. Governour acquainted this Company that the repeated request of the merchants to the mayor and court of aldermen for assessing unfree persons who keep open shop would shortly be complyd with.

The Reverend Mr. John Ellison sent a letter superscribed to Mr. Governour desireing the Company's bounty towards payment for the bells in St. Andrew's church, which said letter was read, and the consideration thereof postponed till next Court day, that the said Mr. John Ellison may attend in his place.

[13 March 1727-8.]

Mr. Governour proposed to the Company renting of my Lord Scarbrough for years by lease the roomes under the Merchants Court for the benefit of the said Company, which said proposall was approved of.

[18 August 1730.]

Mr. Governour acquainted the Company that alltho upon our late tryall att law with the brewers in the exchequer our bill was dismissed, Councell learned in the law did assure that our rights and priviledges might be defended against all incroachments made by fforreigners, and thereupon Mr. Governour did move that the former Committee might meet and report what person or persons they were of opinion ought to be sued att law for infringing upon the liberties and priviledges of the Merchants Company.*

[Jany. 22, 1729-30.]

Were disfranchised for their disobedience to Mr. Governour, Mr.

* No record of the trial exists in the books of the Company of Bakers and Brewers of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, beyond a resolution fixing a contribution from the members for the costs of the trial. It appears, however, from documents in the Record Office, that the complainants were the Company of Merchant Adventurers and Robert Johnson, Warden of that Company, and that the defendants were George Dixon and others, members of the Company of Bakers and Brewers. The complainants had seized corn imported by ship and lofted in Newcastle by John Robinson, junior, a hoastman, and sold by him out of the loft, and not on the "key" or in the public market, to the defendants, who were all freemen of the town. It appears from the depositions and decree, that for two years past an action had been pending, brought by William Dixon, one of the defendants, against the said Robert Johnson, in respect of 18 bushells of wheat, part of the said corn seized by Johnson, as Warden of the Merchant Adventurers Company, and that the action was to have been tried at York Summer assizes, 1727. The present suit was brought, on the equity side of the Exchequer, to restrain the assize action, and to establish the merchants' claims to seize the corn. The Merchant Adventurers alleged that there had been a custom, time out of mind, that if any person, not being a Merchant Adventurer, did at any granary or other place within the town (except out of a ship and at the public "key" of the town, or on a market day in the public corn market), buy or sell of or to any person, not being a Merchant Adventurer, any corn imported and laid in any granary or other place (except as aforesaid), the corn was, by such sale, forfeited to the use of the Merchant Adventurers' Company, and might be seized by the Warden or any other member of the Company inhabiting the town. The defendants traversed the custom, and pleaded that, if it existed, it was unreasonable, as tending to a monopoly of corn, and that, if seizures had been made, they had been made from persons not able to bear the charge of a lawsuit against such potent adversaries, and that the circumstances, in the cases of such seizures, were different to those in the present case. On the 27th June 1730 the Barons of the Exchequer, after hearing the arguments of Sir John Cheshire, Knight, his Majesty's Premier Sergeant-at-Law, Mr. Bootle and Mr. Ord, counsel for the plaintiffs, and Mr. Busbury, Mr. Brown, and Mr. Fenwick, counsel for the defendants, dismissed the complainants' bill, with costs.—Exchequer Depositions, 3 Geo. II. Hilary No. 21; Exchequer Decrees, 3 and 4, Geo. II. No. 20.

Charles Dalston, Mr. Joseph Partis, senior, Mr. Rich^d Wall, Mr. Edw^d Harle, Mr. James Clark, Mr. Timo. Tully, merchants.

[23 Jany. 1729-30.]

Mr. William Burrell, Mr. Chaloner Cooper, merchants, were disfranchised for their disobedience to Mr. Governour.

[18 August 1730.]

Charles Dalston, etc., who by a former court were disfranchised for their disobedience were this present court upon their petition, restored to their respective freedoms.

[15 Sept. 1730.]

The committee appointed to meet by order of Court of the 18th August 1730, did report that it was their opinion that Anthony Dunne, surgeon, be prosecuted att law for selling sugar, peper and other grossery goods. Alderman [Nathaniel] Clayton being in Court did acquaint the Company that he did believe the said Anthony Dunne had given his answer in law by bill, and thereupon Mr. Joseph Douglas being called into Court did declare the same, and that Alderman Clayton's son, Mr. Cuthbert Clayton has appeared solicitor for the said Anthony Dnnne.

[24 January 1732-3.]

Severall of the Company takeing notice how much they had suffered by the present excise laws upon tea, coffee, liquors etc., insomuch that some had been obliged to lay aside those branches of their business; it was unanimously agreed that any extention of the present excise laws on wine, tobacco, sugar, etc., would be highly detrimentall to the trade of this Company, and we conceive to that of the whole nation, it was therefore resolved, to use all dutifull and legall methods to oppose any such new excise.

[30 May 1733.]

A letter directed to the Governour and the rest of the Merchants' Company, signed W^m Midford was redd seting forth the hardships they suffer by reason of an act of 100 marks penalty on any who take a Quaker an apprentice, desireing that the said act may be abrogated. [Company to consider the same and whether counsel's opinion on the matter should be taken.]

[26 Sep. 1733.]

Mr. William Leighton, merchant, did in court move that John Airey, a Quaker, whome he sayd he had bound to himself might be enrolled, and had a note signed by Mr. William Wharton collector of the stamp duty. But not producing his indentures nor certificates as usuall, the said W^m Leighton did ffreely defer the same till another court.

[11 Feb. 1733-4.]

And wee ffurther find that keeping two shopps open at one and the same time, by any one brother is injourious to the rest of the tradeing brethren. Wee therefore recommend to the Court that proper meanes be taken to prevent the same, and that an act be made for that purpose annexing a penalty of £20 a year to be paid to the Merchants Company for every brother therein offending, without grace or favour of court. Which said report of the Committe was read in Court and very well approved of, and the same is hereby enacted and recorded accordingly.*

[29 Oct. 1735.]

W^m Leighton haveing some time agoe brought a certificate from Mr. W^m Wharton of one pare of indentures made between the said Leighton and John Airey, but haveing neither certificate of age nor estate as the lawes and rules of this Company require, the said indentures by Leighton's own consent were not enrolled, but put of to some other court day, and the said W^m Leighton did this day acknowledg and declare in the presence of this Company that the said John Airey should not be bound to him as an apprentice, nor have any benefit in this Company by the indentures formerly certified.

[13 July 1739.]

Matt Ridley Esq^r. acquainted the Company that he at the request of the Company sometime since had spoke to the Earl of Scarborough about the intended alterations of the Mason due and Merchants' Court who answered he would order his steward Mr. Gowland to examine into the matter and report to him and then he would give an answer to the Company.

[11 Dec. 1739.]

Mr. Governour acquainted this Company, that John Airey, a Quaker, kept shop and retailed groceryes and other merchandize to the prejudice of this Company, he not being a freeman, upon which it was ordered that the wardens should apply to the said John Airey, to know by what authority he did so and discharge him.

[16 April 1740.]

[The wardens reported that they had interviewed Mr. Airey] "and that he answered, he apprehended he had a right but that he would advise with his friends about it." [referred to the standing committee.]

* This act was repealed at a court holden the 6th May 1771.

[2 Oct. 1740.]

[Mr. Governour reported] "that the wardens had bought a New Velvet Pall and Eight Cloaks according to the order of last court."

[Mr. Governour reported that Mr. Airey disclaimed being privy to the orders made against him at the courts of the company but desired an appointment with a gentleman of the company to whom he would make proposals]. "William Ellison Esq. and Alderman, and John Stephenson Esq. were desired to meet Mr. Airey and take his proposals in writing."

Ordered that the wardens at the next court after the 9th day of October next do lay before the Company the expence and charge this Company was at in paying watchmen and other people during the late tumult in this town.*

[25 May 1741.]

Ordered that if leave be granted to any apprentice to go abroad for his improvement in trade, if he does not go beyond seas in three months after such order and continue so during the remainder of the term of his indentures he shall not be intituled to his freedom of the ffellowship.

[12 June 1741.]

[William Cuthbert, Recorder of Newcastle, advised on a case submitted to him as to whether the parents of intending apprentices to merchants need have an estate of inheritance of the yearly value of 40^s. in accordance with 5 Eliz. c. 4, s. 27]. "'Tis probable when 5 Eliz. was made it might be then intended that if the father had 40^s. per annum he might give his son a competent fortune to set up in trade and the master would be better secured. But, say the books, such an estate now is scarce sufficient to make the son a cobbler. So that this day it seems a matter quite indifferent whether such certificate be or no."

[24 July 1741.]

[The law committee reported that Mr. Cuthbert Ogle should be allowed to exercise the trade of a grocer on his making an annual payment, executing a bond and consenting to a verdict against him at the next assizes.]

[7 August 1741.]

[Mr. Governour reported that Mr. Ogle had executed the bond, and that a licence had been granted him under the Great Seal of the Company.]

* An account of this tumult is contained in Brand, ii. 521. Other details are mentioned in the MS. of Alderman Hornby, who alleges that the then Mayor showed pusillanimity.

[23 June 1742.]

Mr. Governor acquainted this ffellowship That it was necessary the Court Room should be repaired and beautified, which could not be done to any purpose by reason of a great smoak from the rooms belonging to the Earl of Scarbrough under the court; that these rooms might with a small expence be converted into a warehouse which might be of profit to the Company and would prevent any nuisance. He had therefore made an application to his Lordship for a lease of the said rooms and my Lord had consented thereto. It is ordered that Mr. Governor be desired to treat with Mr. Gowland, steward to the Earl of Scarborough for such a lease as is before mentioned.

A letter from the Reverend Mr. Thomas Turner Vicar of Newcastle to Mr. Governor was read in which he desired the Charity of this Fellowship for propogating the gospell in foreign parts, which was refused as most of the members had already contributed to the said charity.

Mr. Matthew Bowes and Mr. Lancelot Turnbull, members of this Fellowship, petitioned setting forth that they had applyed to the Governor and Company of Hoastmen at a Court by them held on Friday the second day of July instant to be admitted into the Society of Hoastmen, which was refused by the said Governor and Company. It is ordered that the said petitions be referred to the Comittee hereafter named, to examine their contents, and report at the next court the most proper method to support the ancient usage of members of this Fellowship being admitted Hoastmen.

It is farther ordered that the Sectretary write to each of the free misterys and acquaint them with the resolution before mentioned, expressing the good inclinations of this ffellowship to give them assistance for the support of their priviledges.

The Comittee appointed last court to examine into Mr. Matthew Bowes and Mr. Lancelot Turnbull's petitions reported as ffollows: That in their humble opinion every person ffree of any of the misterys by patrimony or servitude are well intitled to their admission into the Hoastmen's Company and that the Hoastmen's pretence of accepting and complying with the Charter of Queen Elizabeth and rejecting that of King James can in no wise be supported, as they have all along from the commencement of the charter of King James uniformly and upon all occasions comply'd therewith by admitting every person who was ffree of any of the twelve misteries upon request untill the last Court day, when they refused the admission of Mr. Bowes and Mr. Turnbull (who are both ffree of one of the said misterys) which they deemed highly injurious to the right which had been constantly enjoyed by the said misterys.

And they did also report that they had stated these facts in a Case to be laid before some eminent counsell for his opinion thereon, which they conceived to be the best method for the said mysterys to take in order to assert their right of being admitted into the Hoastmen's Company.

[Committee to consider the matter further, and report again].

[1 Oct. 1742.]

The Committee appointed to examine into the right of the members of this Company to be admitted Hoastmen, report that the opinions of Mr. Bootle, Mr. Craster and Mr. Recorder were read to them, and that they had agreed the Governor of the Hoastmen's Company should be desired to hold a court, and that some persons free of one of the 12 mysterys should be desired to apply for their freedom of that Company, and that coppies of the opinions that were read be sent to each mystery.

[22 Feb. 1742-3.]

The report of the Committee appointed to examine into the right of members of this Company to be admitted Hoastmen was read and ordered, That the wardens of this Company do pay into the hands of John Stephenson Esq^r the sume of £15 towards carrying on the suit against the said Company of Hoastmen.

[20 Jan. 1743-4.]

Whereas several on their admission into this fellowship have put into the poor box half-pence, farthings &c., It is ordered that every person before he be admitted shall in the presence of the Wardens put into the said poor box the sum of five shillings at least for the benefit of the poor of this fellowship.

[1 March 1743-4.]

It is ordered that the following address to his Majesty be sealed with the Common seal of this fellowship and signed by the Governor, viz. :

To the King's most excellent Majesty.

The humble address of the Governor, Assistants, Wardens and Fellowship of Merchant Adventurers of the Town and County of the Town of Newcastle upon Tyne.

May it please your Majesty,

We your Majesty's most dutifull and loyall subjects, the Governor, Assistants, Wardens and Fellowship of Merchant Adventurers of Newcastle upon Tyne beg leave humbly to approach your Majesty with the assurance of our most steady attachment to your majesty's sacred person and Government, and to testify our just abhorrence of the wicked designs now threatned by the French against your majesty and the peace of these kingdoms on behalf of a popish pretender.

We are duly sensible of the many blessings we enjoy under your Majesty's mild and gracious Government, in protection of our religion, laws, libertys and trade, for the continuance of which we can have no security but the support of your Majesty upon the throne of these realms, and the succession established in your illustrious house.

We are engaged by the strongest ties of duty and affection to contribute cheerfully every thing in our power (to the hazard of our lives and fortunes) for the defence of your majesty and the present happy establishment against all your enemies both at home and abroad, and we fervently pray that the Almighty may bless your Majesty's arms with success and grant you long to reign over a loyal, dutifull and happy people.

Given under our Common Seal this second day of March, 1743.

Mr Governor acquainted the Company that the proceedings in the cause upon the mandamus to admitt Mr. Matthew Bowes now deceased into the Company of Hoastmen was ready for triall, and notice given for next term, but by the death of the said Mr. Bowes no farther progress could be made in the same. He therefore desired to know the sentiments of the Company, if they remained in their former opinion to support the right of the members of this Fellowship to be admitted into the said Company of Hoastmen, upon which it was unanimously resolved that the Committee appointed the 21st day of July 1742 [with certain others] do meet those appointed by the severall Misteries, and concert the most proper measures to maintain and assert that their ancient right.*

* "The quarrel with the hostmen concerned the whole of the twelve trades, for it involved the right of any freebrother to be admitted a brother of the Hostmen's Company on demand and payment of the usual fees. This, the hostmen declared, was only optional on their part. The trades thought otherwise, and the hostmen having refused admittance to two applicants, the other companies appointed a committee, stated a case, and took three counsels' opinion. The case, after reciting the clauses in the charters of Elizabeth and James I., relating to the hostmen, showed 'that all persons who were free of any of the twelve mysteries by patrimony or servitude had, as often as they requested, been admitted into the Hostmen's Company on payment of the fees in the clauses mentioned.' The counsel, Mr. Bootle, Mr. Craster, and Mr. Cuthbert certified that although the clause in Queen Elizabeth's Charter did not in express terms declare every mysteryman entitled to be admitted, yet it was so ordered and decreed in the first year of James I., and that the proper method would be to apply to the Court of King's Bench for a mandamus to command the Hostmen's Company to carry out the law which they had always recognised. The sum of £5 was contributed by the tanners for the purpose of prosecuting the suit, which, as appears from another contribution of £15 in 1752, seven years after, was a protracted one." — Article on the Tanners' Company of Newcastle upon Tyne, by Mr. W. Pickering, printed in the Newcastle Courant for March 9th, 1877. The above mentioned charters are set out in Brand, vol. ii, pp. 659 and 628. The charter of James I. only confirmed what was the former practice. Brand, ii. 275.

Ordered that the assistants [with 5 others] be a committee to agree with a plumber for repairing the lead covering of the Merchants' Court.

[30 May 1751.]

It is ordered that the sum of £25 be given yearly by this Fellowship towards the support of the Infirmary founded in this town.*

[24 July 1751.]

Geo. Roe having petitioned for liberty of exercising the trade of a mercer within the town of Newcastle, and to have the licence of this Fellowship for that purpose. It appearing that only one brother of the Company carried on the business of a mercer, therefore for the convenience of the inhabitants of this town, it was agreed that the said George Roe be allowed to follow the said business on payment of one guinea a year for such liberty to this Fellowship and that he have a licence accordingly. [Licence is given under date 13 Jan. 1752].

[21 Dec. 1752.]

[Order reducing term of apprenticeship to eight years.]

[30 June 1757.]

Merchants Court being greatly out of repair and the roof thereof fallen in, and money being wanted to put the same into repair, it is ordered that the sum of £100 be for that purpose borrowed.

this order
repealed.

[Act of 7 Sep. 1699 prohibiting brethren to trade in partnership repealed and instead] It is enacted, that no brother shall at any time hereafter be permitted to join in partnership with any person not free of this Fellowship without leave of the Company (upon petition) first had and obtained and paying such yearly acknowledgment as the Governor, Assistants Wardens and Fellowship shall think fit. And it is further enacted, that no free brother, after he shall have entered into partnership with such non-freeman, shall be permitted to take an apprentice to serve in that branch of trade in which the partnership shall be concerned.

[The Committee appointed to inquire into the state of the funds of the Company reports]

That William Carr Esquire, by his will dated the 11th April 1660, gave to the Governor and Wardens of the Company, Two hundred pounds, to be lent upon good security, to merchants only, for five years, without interest, and ordered that no merchant should have more lent him than Fifty pounds—that Fifty pounds part of the said legacy is now due upon the bond of Mr. Richard Owen, and that Mr. James Liddell, Mr. Francis Johnson, and Mr. Thomas Heath are sureties—that Fifty pounds, other part thereof, is now in the Bank of Messrs. Surtees and Burdon, and that one hundred pounds, remainder thereof, was lent to, and is now in the hands of The Mayor and Burgesses of Newcastle, upon their Bond and bearing interest at four per cent.

That John Rumney Esquire, by his will dated the 3rd February 1694, gave to the Company, One hundred pounds, to be lent upon reasonable security, to some younger trading brother, for three years without interest and that the same is now in the hands of Mr. William Raisbeck.

That Joseph Atkinson, Esqr. and Alderman, by his will dated the 13th March 17^{12/13}, gave to the Company, One hundred pounds, to be lent to a Brother, upon reasonable security for five years without interest, and the same is now in the hands of Mr. Shafto Coulter.

That William Warmouth, Esquire and Alderman, by his will dated 22nd July 1642, gave to the Town of Newcastle upon Tyne, One hundred pounds, for the use of the Society of Merchant Adventurers, to be disposed of by the Common Council for the time being, according to certain directions contained in his said will. That it appears, by a minute in the handwriting of the late Mr. Jonathan Sorsbie, Clerk of the Chamber, that on the 21st day of April 1760, the widow of Mr. Thomas Charleton deceased paid in the sum of one hundred pounds, which he had of Mr. Warmouth's money, and that the Committee believe this to have been the same sum of One hundred pounds, given by the said William Warmouth. That the Committee have not been able to ascertain in whose hands the same now is, but apprehend, as the bequest was made to the Town for the use and benefit of the Company, that the Mayor and Burgesses ought to be responsible to the Company for the money.

That Henry Warmouth, Esquire and Alderman, by his will dated 8th April 1654, gave to the Mayor Aldermen and Common Council of Newcastle, One hundred pounds, to be disposed of by them, to ancient decayed Merchants of that Town, in like manner as the one hundred pounds was disposed of, which his father, Mr. William Warmouth deceased, put into the Towns Chamber. That it appears, by an extract from the Towns books or papers in the handwriting of the Town Clerk, that on the 21st April 1742, this money was lent to Mr. Henry Eden, but the Committee have not been able to obtain information whether the same or any part thereof was ever paid in, but this money having also been left to the Mayor Aldermen and Common Council, for the use of the Company, the Committee are of opinion that the same ought to be made good and forthcoming by the Mayor and Burgesses.

That Thomas Davison, Esquire and Alderman, by his will dated the 25th November 1675, gave to the Governor, Assistants, Wardens, and Fellowship of Merchants Adventurers of Newcastle upon Tyne, and to their successors for ever, All his leasoes ridges of land in the Castle Fields or Leasoes, upon condition to pay yearly, before the sixteenth day of December, unto the Churchwardens of All Saints, thirteen shillings and fourpence, unto the Churchwardens of Saint Johns, twenty-six shillings and eightpence, and unto the Churchwardens of Saint Andrews, twenty shillings, and the remainder of the yearly revenue of the said lands to be distributed in December, at the discretion of the Governor, Assistants and Wardens to the poor Brethren and Sisters of the said Company. That the Company, some few years after the death of the said Thomas Davison, sold the said ridges of land to the Mayor and Burgesses of Newcastle, in consideration of an annuity or yearly rent charge of thirteen pounds, payable at the Chamber, at Michaelmas for ever, which said yearly sum of thirteen pounds is regularly received by the Wardens and applied to the abovementioned charitable uses.

That Timothy Davison, Esquire and Alderman, by his will dated 7th February 1694, gave to the Governor, Assistants, Wardens and Fellowship of Merchants Adventurers of Newcastle upon Tyne and to their successors for ever, Three hundred pounds, and ordered that the Governor, Assistants, Wardens and Fellowship and their successors should yearly for ever, in the month of December (at the time when the distribution of his father's legacy is made) distribute to the poor Brethren and Sisters of the Company, twelve pounds and to the four parishes of Saint Nicholas, All Saints, Saint Johns and Saint Andrews in Newcastle, six pounds, to each parish thirty shillings, to be distributed to credible freemen or freemens widows (not of the Merchants Company) fallen into decay, out of such persons as shall be returned needful, by the Minister and Churchwardens of the respective parishes, the distribution to be made at the discretion of the Governor, Assistants and Wardens for the time being and to be recorded yearly in the Company's Journal Book, in what manner and to whom the same is distributed. That this sum of three hundred pounds is now in the hands of the Mayor and Burgesses of Newcastle, having been lent upon their Bond (in the Governors possession) bearing interest at four per cent. That it appears to the Committee, that the said Timothy Davison, by directing twelve pounds per annum to be paid to the poor of the Company, and six pounds per annum to the four parishes, has calculated interest, upon his said legacy of three hundred pounds, at the rate of six per cent, the common lawful interest at that time, but that the Company now only receive four per cent, as above reported, amounting to twelve pounds per annum for the whole, out of which seven pounds only have been usually divided among the poor of the Company, and five pounds to the parishes, which the Committee think an improper distribution, and therefore recommend, that Eight pounds be annually paid to the poor of the Company, and four pounds to the parishes, as this will be a distribution in proportion to that directed by the Testator and the present reduced rate of interest.

That Thomas Davison of Ferryhill, by a Declaration of Trust bearing date the 19th August 1755, after reciting that the Mayor and Burgesses, by their Bond under their Common seal, dated 29th July 1755, stood bound unto him in one thousand pounds, conditioned for payment of five hundred pounds and interest at four per cent, declared that the said Bond was taken in his name, upon trust to pay the interest of the said Five hundred pounds, from time to time, as and when the same shall amount to fifty pounds, to any son of a merchant, or young man, who shall have served his apprenticeship to a merchant in Newcastle upon Tyne, being a freeman of the Company of Merchants, in order to enable him to set up and follow the trade of a merchant, such person to be nominated by Sir Walter Blackett, Baronet, Morton Davison, and Thomas Davison of Beamish Esquires, and the survivors and survivor of them, and after the death of the survivor of them, then by the Mayor, Aldermen, Sheriff and Common Council of Newcastle upon Tyne for the time being. That the said sum of five hundred pounds is yet remaining in the hands of the said Mayor and Burgesses, and that there is now ten years interest upon the said bond due the 29th July last, amounting to Two hundred pounds. That the said Sir Walter Blackett, Morton Davison and Thomas Davison are all since dead, so that the right of nomination is now in the Mayor, Aldermen, Sheriff and Common Council.

That it appears to the Committee, that several members of the Company are greatly in arrear for fines of absense, monthly pence, and annual payments, amounting collectively to three hundred pounds and upwards, which the said Committee think ought to be received by the Wardens, and therefore recommend that the Governor, Assistants, Wardens and Fellowship do make order for payment of such arrears, and, in case of refusal, that then they do take some effectual method to enforce such payment—the Committee also recommend, that in future the name of each person paying the monthly pence and annual sum of five shillings be entered in the Wardens book as formerly.

[The committee appointed to inquire into the infringements made upon the rights and privileges of the Company, and for other purposes, reports] That we did order the wardens to call upon the several persons hereafter named, to inquire what right they had to exercise the business of this Company, and to inform them that the Company expected they would apply for leave to be granted to them, on paying the usual acknowledgments, viz. :

Purvis Sisson, who gave for answer, that he was willing to apply for leave, and pay such acknowledgment as the Company should think proper ;

—— Easterby, who returned for answer that he had a right to exercise the business ;

—— Temperley says he has exercised the business long enough to be exempt from paying any acknowledgment, but is willing to submit to the Company ; *

—— Mather sent word to the committee that he would consider of it ;

Garland and Smart, the former of whom thinks he has a right as a freeman to exercise the business, but he did not give any answer as to Mr. Smart, nor did Mr. Smart ever send any answer ;

—— Wallace, who lives at the Blackgate, returned for answer that he lived without the liberties of the town and is therefore exempt ;

Henry Barnett thinks he has a right to follow the business, but will wait upon the Company ;

* It had been held at law that there was no necessity for an actual binding apprenticeship, but that the following of a trade for seven years was a sufficient qualification within the statute of 5 Elizabeth c. 4, 1 Salkeld 67 : 2 Salkeld 613.

— Watson is willing to apply for leave and pay an acknowledgment ;

John Spencer says he has been nine years in the business, and is therefore exempt ;

— Thompson says, he has been fifteen years in business, and therefore thinks himself exempt ;

— Hedley says, he is willing to apply for leave ;

John Hays says, he is willing to submit to the Company ;

William Wilson sent word, that he had been nine years in business, and therefore apprehended he had a right to follow it ;

John Scorer thinks he has a right by serving Mr. Snaith five years ;

Charles McNab says, he is in so small a way that it is not worth while minding him ;

Mrs. Carnton (now Mrs. Barron) said she could not give any answer without consulting her husband ;

Joshua Wardell says, he has exercised the business ten years, and therefore thinks himself at liberty so to do, without paying any acknowledgment ;

George Sanders says, he has a right to follow the business ;

— Young is willing to leave the matter to the Company ;

— Kirkley told the Warden that he did not know what to say to it ;

And we further report [Here follows a report on the subject of arrears due from members.]

The report having been read, it was ordered that the committee meet again, to consider what further steps may be necessary to be taken, with those brethren who have refused or declined to pay their fines of absence, monthly pence, and annual contribution ; and that the committee do report the same to the Company at the next court.

[22nd November 1831.]

Ordered that the several Escutcheons which were hung in the Old Hall be cleaned and put up in the new one, and that the inscriptions thereon be entered in the Order Book of the Company.

[The inscriptions follow. They epitomise the bequests above set out. The arms borne on the escutcheons are described in a note to page 15 of Knowles' and Boyle's Vestiges of old Newcastle and Gateshead. The editors state that in two or three cases the tinctures are probably incorrect, but they have described them as they are actually emblazoned. They are as follows :—

1. Robert Bewicke, 1628. Argent, five lozenges in fesse gules, each charged with a mullet of the first, between three bears' heads erased sable, muzzled or.

[The Committee appointed to investigate the matter of the ridges on the Leazes, devised by Thomas Davison the elder to the Merchants Company of Newcastle for charitable purposes, and to confer with the Common Council on the subject, reports.]

On an early day after our appointment, we proceeded to the Leazes, accompanied by Mr. Oliver an able Land Surveyor, for the purpose of ascertaining whether or not the ridges in question could be identified. On that occasion, we inspected all the ridges on the Leazes, but could not to a certainty distinguish those devised to the Company, although we fancied we identified some of them. We then ordered Mr. Oliver to lay down on a plan the forms, sizes and situations of the whole of the ridges on the Leazes; this he has accordingly done and the plan is in readiness to be produced for the inspection of the Company. We next caused a petition to the Common Council to be prepared and presented to that body on the 27th day of March last, of which the following is a copy:—

To the Right Worshipful the Mayor and the rest of the Common Council of Newcastle upon Tyne in Common Council assembled.

The humble petition of the undersigned members of the Company of Merchants Adventurers of Newcastle upon Tyne Sheweth.

That the Company of Merchants Adventurers claim 94 ridges of land situate on the Castle Leazes, devised to them by Mr. Thomas Davison a member of the Company by his will dated the 25th day of November 1675, for charitable purposes, and by them sold and conveyed on the 10th day of August 1681, to the Mayor and Burgesses, in consideration of a perpetual Rent charge of £13 a year.

That such ridges were so conveyed by the description following, that is to say, (setting forth the description contained in the deed)*

That the Company have taken the opinion of Counsel on their claim, and a copy of the case upon which his opinion was given, and of such opinion is hereunto annexed.

That at a Court held by the Company on the 4th day of February last, your petitioners were appointed a Committee to investigate the matter of the Company's claim to the ridges in question, and to confer with the Common Council on the subject thereof.

That your Petitioners have inspected the whole of the ridges on the Leazes, but have not been able satisfactorily to distinguish those devised to the Company, in consequence as your Petitioners believe, that their boundaries having been destroyed, since they were sold and conveyed to the Mayor and Burgesses.

That your petitioners are advised that, as the boundaries of these Ridges have been so destroyed, a Court of Equity would grant a Commission to ascertain the same, and order all books, deeds, papers, writings, plans and surveys relating to all or any of the ridges on the Leazes, in the possession of the Mayor and Burgesses, to be produced.

That it appears, by the description given thereof, in the deed by which these ridges were conveyed to the Mayor and Burgesses, that

* The description as contained in the Counterpart Indentures of Lease and Release in the possession of the Company, dated the 9th and 10th August 1681, is as follows :—

All those leazes or ridges of land lying and being in a place called the Castle Field (without the walls but within the liberties of the said Town of Newcastle-upon-Tyne) late in the possession of Robert Plumpton Taylor and Thomas Newton Tanner which said leazes or riggs contain in number about Nynety Four ridges Seven of which leazes or ridges lying East and West adjoin on the East side of the Castle Leazes near the Blinde Loaning and Six ridges called Todds Nook Four ridges lying on the west side of Three ridges of Mr. Ambrose Barnes Two ridges adjoyning next to Six ridges of Mr. Ogles Five ridges adjoyning next to Broad Ridge of George Moody Three ridges adjoyning next to Eight ridges of Mr. Ogles Eight ridges adjoyning next to Five ridges of Mr. Ambrose Barnes Nine ridges lying North and South Six ridges there adjoyning to Six ridges of Mr. Ambrose Barnes Twelve ridges adjoyning to Six ridges of Gawin Hairopps Sixteen ridges adjoyning to Two ridges of Mr. Ambrose Barnes Seven ridges betwixt the Spittle Close and the Apothecaries Close lying North and South adjoyning to Eleven ridges of Lyonell Blaidons Nyne ridges adjoyning towards Gallowgate Together with all and singular Collieries and Coalmines &c.

Ambrose Barnes, Mr. Ogle, George Moody, Gawin Hairopp and Lionel Blagdon were then owners of adjoining ridges since purchased by the Mayor and Burgesses.

That your Petitioners, with the view of avoiding the necessity of applying to a Court of Equity, for a commission to ascertain boundaries, and of obtaining an amicable settlement of the Company's claim, are desirous of having the inspection of the deeds, by which the ridges of the persons abovenamed were conveyed to the Mayor and burgesses, and of all other deeds and of all books papers and writings plans and surveys in the possession of the Mayor and Burgesses relating to the Leazes or any of the ridges thereon, for the purpose of better enabling your petitioners satisfactorily to ascertain and distinguish the ridges claimed.

Wherefore your Petitioners humbly pray, that you will be pleased to appoint a Committee of your body, to meet and confer with your Petitioners on the subject of this claim, and for the purpose above stated, to allow your Petitioners to have an inspection of all such deeds, books, papers, writings, plans and surveys as are above referred to, and also to give to your Petitioners all such information and particulars, concerning the Leazes or any of the ridges thereon, as the Mayor and Burgesses are in possession of, And that you will be pleased to give your answer to this Petition in writing.

Not having received an answer to our Petition, on the 29th September last, we met together and resolved to present a Memorial to the Common Council praying for an answer. A Memorial being accordingly prepared, was on the 22nd October last, presented, and on the following day the Town Clerk was pleased to deliver to us, as the Answer of the Common Council, the annexed copy of an opinion of the late Solicitor General.

Having afterwards learnt that the Corporation had purchased the Ridges under a license granted by the Crown, the contents of which might give additional information, and the Solicitor General's opinion differing from that of Mr. Duval, we procured a Copy of the license which we annex to this our Report, and then submitted the case, with the Copy License annexed, for the opinion of Mr. Tinney and Mr. Walters—those opinions are also annexed to this our report.

All which we humbly report to the Company.

Merchants Company—Copy Opinion.

1st The Corporation of Merchants Adventurers were Trustees for charitable purposes, and the Conveyance by them was a breach of trust, and the length of time is not of itself a Bar—but it is discretionary in the Court, whether it will interfere after the lapse of so many years. And I am of opinion that the Court will not interfere, so as to subject the lands again to the charitable uses, if there shall not appear to be any reason to doubt the £13 per annum having been the fair value of the land at the date of the conveyance. Att^y. Gen^l. v Pembroke Hall. 2 Sim. & Stu. 441.

2nd The proceedings, if instituted, must be by information in equity.

Copy Mr. Tinney's Opinion.

I am not aware of any case so clearly resembling this as to enable me to give a certain opinion. On the principles stated in the Atty. Genl. v. Warren 2 Swanston 291, an alienation or exchange of Charity Lands made in ancient times will not necessarily be treated as void in Equity. In this case certain lands, lying dispersed and being subject to an inconvenient right of pasturage, were in substance exchanged, in 1681, for a rent charge issuing out of the same and additional lands. The evidence as to the treaty for the exchange is very slight. I do not think it raises any inference of unfair dealing as regards the Charity. The fixed payments directed by the Founder's will amounted to £3 per annum only. This I think makes it not unlikely that £13 per annum might be at least the full value of the property. If no evidence can be given to the contrary, I think on the whole that a Court of Equity would presume in favour of the transaction and decline to set it aside. I therefore do not advise any proceeding. The proper mode of proceeding, if any, would be by information, at the relation of some member of the Company of Merchants Adventurers. I think that the new Statute of Limitations 3 & 4 W^m. 4 c 27 would not be held to affect this case, but in the event of a suit the point would probably be raised.

W. H. Tinney.

Lin. Inn, 30 Oct. 1834.

Copy Mr. Walter's Opinion.

The great difficulty in this case is to ascertain a matter of fact, whether the alienation by the Merchants' Company of the land in question was consistent with that provident administration which is incumbent on Trustees of a charity? There is no fixed rule of law on the subject, the circumstances of each case are sifted and the Judge decides upon the evidence according to his discretion. Now here it is to be observed, that the property consisted of several unclosed parcels of ground, lying dispersedly in an open field, subject to a right of pasturage in a third party; such property it is evident was under great disadvantages and perhaps it may be said it could not be beneficially enjoyed, except together with the other parts of the same open field. Hence it may be said, that the rent of £13 was at the time a good exchange to the Cestui que trust, and such considerations as the foregoing might perhaps induce a Court to pause, before it decided that the alienation in question was improvident. It might too be urged, that the sale was to parties who had no interest in making an unjust bargain, and that it was for the benefit of the general Corporation of Newcastle of which the Merchants Company is a part. Upon the whole it appears to me very doubtful whether the conveyance in question would be set aside. The Case of the Attorney General v. Christ's Hospital reported in the Legal Observer 8 Vol. 386 is a strong authority to show that no length of time will affect a conveyance from Trustees of a Charity, where there is no ground for assuming that the alienation was a provident Act.

Since writing the above it has occurred to me whether the question proposed in this case is not affected by the late Limitation of Actions Act 3 & 4 W. 4 c. 27-s.s. 24 & 25 and I incline to think it is.

IT WAS RESOLVED that the Company do not proceed further in the attempt to recover the Ridges on the Leazes.

ORDERED—That the expenses of the investigation be paid out of the Company by the Wardens.

[9th October 1866.]

The Auditors Report of the Wardens Accounts from the 9th day of October 1865 to the 9th day of October 1866 was read, and there appeared to have been received by the Wardens the sum of £81. 1. 0 including £30. 6. 4 the balance of last year, and to have been laid out and expended the sum of £53. 11. 10, leaving in the hands of the Wardens the sum of £27. 9. 2.

WARMOUTHS CHARITY.—The following report of Mr. Ingledew was read.

At a meeting of the Merchants Company of Newcastle upon Tyne held on the 12th day of December 1780, a Committee appointed to enquire into the state of the funds of the Company and of all moneys due and belonging to the same, reported that William Warmouth Esq. by his will dated 22nd July 1642, gave to the Town of Newcastle upon Tyne £100, for the use of the Merchants Company, to be disposed of by the Common Council for the time being, according to certain directions contained in the will—that Henry Warmouth Esq. by his will dated the 8th day of April 1654 gave to the Common Council of Newcastle £100 to be disposed of by them to ancient decayed merchants of Newcastle, in like manner as the £100 bequeathed by his father William Warmouth was directed to be disposed of, and that, as these sums had been left to the Common Council for the use of the Company, the Committee were of opinion that the same ought to be made good and forthcoming by the Mayor and Burgesses.

At a meeting of the Merchants Company held on the 9th day of October 1815, the Governor suggested that some steps should be taken as to the two sums of £100 each, the legacies of William Warmouth and Henry Warmouth, which had been in the hands of the Corporation for upwards of 50 years without payment of interest, it appearing that the Common Council were, under the wills of the donors, trustees for the disposition of these sums, which were directed to be lent to some member of the Company, not worth altogether £100, for three years without interest, and the Company conceiving that it could never be the intention of the donors that the Corporation, who were merely trustees, should derive profit from bequests, which were intended for the benefit of the Company, it was resolved that a memorial should be presented to the then next Common Council, praying that they would direct the payment into the hands of the Wardens of six years interest on the said two sums of £100 each.

A memorial relative to these legacies and other matters was accordingly prepared and presented to the Common Council, who took the same into consideration and thereupon made an order of which as far as it relates to the two legacies the following is a true copy.

At a Common Council held the 22nd March 1816 the Governor, Assistants, Warden and Fellowship of Merchant Adventurers of Newcastle upon Tyne petitioned, setting forth that Mr. William Warmouth a member of the Merchants Company, who died on the 22nd day of July 1642, by his will bequeathed to the Town of Newcastle £100 for the use and benefit of the Society of Merchant Adventurers, to be disposed of by the Common Council for the time being in manner hereinafter mentioned, and directed the same to be lent from time to time, for three years without interest, to some member of the Petitioners' Company, who, amongst other things, should not be worth in land or goods in all the world £100—that Mr. Henry Warmouth, another member of the petitioners' Company, by his will made a similar bequest of £100, to be disposed of in like manner—that, in consequence of the above legacies being confined to persons not worth £100, it rarely happens that any member of the said Company is eligible to apply for them, and that the fact was as the Petitioners assert, that no application had been made for either of these legacies for fifty years and upwards, during which time the Corporation had had the use of them without paying any interest, and that the Petitioners conceived it to be perfectly clear that the donors did not intend the Corporation, who are merely trustees, should derive profits from bequests which were made expressly for the benefit of the Company to which they belonged, and in the case which had occurred, where the interest arising from these legacies cannot be applied precisely as the donors direct, but at the same time must belong to some one, the Petitioners conceived it to be more consonant to the donors' intentions, that such interest should belong to the said Company than to the Corporation—the Petitioners therefore prayed the Common Council to direct the payment to them of interest on the said two sums of £100 and £100 for the last six years (a period which the Petitioners trusted would be deemed reasonable) and that such payment might be continued, until the said sums were applied for by persons qualified under the wills of the testators.

The said Petition, being read, was referred to a Committee with instructions to consider the prayer thereof and report thereon accordingly, and thereupon Robert Clayton and Benjamin Sorsbie Esquires and Aldermen, and Mr. Nicholas Naters and Mr. James Archbold, such Committee, having reported that they, having considered the prayer of the said petition and the instructions above mentioned and having found that the legacy of Mr. William Warmouth was paid into the Towns Hutch by the widow of Mr. Thomas Charlton the last person to whom it was lent on the 21st April 1760, that it has remained in the hands of the Corporation from that time till now, and that no interest has ever been paid upon it, did recommend that the claim of the Merchants Company to six years interest should be complied with, and that in case the said legacy should at any future time remain as it has done, unapplied to the purposes of the trust, interest at £4. 10. 0 per cent should be paid to that Company upon it. As to the legacy of Mr. Henry Warmouth they could not find that any evidence existed to charge the Corporation with it. That on the 21st April 1742 it appeared to have been lent to Mr. Henry Eden for three years, and that no entry of the repayment could be found in the Towns books, so that it was probable it might have been lost, but whether the Corporation as trustees was answerable for such loss the Committee did not feel themselves called upon to consider. All which they submitted to the Common Council.

The said report being read, it is ordered that the further consideration thereof be and the same is hereby suspended.

In the investigation of the books of the Corporation, and of the Merchants Company, I cannot find any entry of any order made on a further consideration by the Common Council of the Committees report, so that such further consideration still remains suspended, save as appears by entries of which extracts are as follows :

As to Henry Warmouth's legacy.

Extract from the Common Council Order Book.

At a Common Council held the 20th December 1816, Samuel Mowbray of Newcastle upon Tyne petitioned, setting forth that he is a decayed member of the Company of Merchant Adventurers of Newcastle upon Tyne, and is not worth in all the world £100, that he is therefore entitled to the benefit of Mr. Henry Warmouth's legacy of £100, which was bequeathed to the Common Council, to be lent for three years without interest, to a member of the said Company so circumstanced, whereupon the Petitioner prayed the Common Council would direct the said legacy of £100 to be lent to him, on his entering into a Bond, with Edward Wilson and William Armstrong the Wardens and John Clayton the Secretary of the said Company as his sureties, for the repayment of the same, at the end of three years. The said Petition being read it is ordered that the prayer thereof be complied with.

Tho^s. Burdon, Mayor.

This Order I conceive amounts to an acknowledgment by the Common Council that Henry Warmouth's legacy was in the hands of the Corporation at the time of its being made.

No interest on this legacy has ever been paid by the Corporation.

Under the circumstances above stated, I venture to suggest that a petition be presented by the Wardens of this Company to the Town Council, praying that the consideration of the memorial of this Company, referred to in the order of the Common Council of the 22nd March 1816, may be resumed, and that the Council will be pleased to order, that six years interest on William Warmouth's legacy and fifty six years interest on Henry Warmouth's legacy shall be forthwith paid to the Wardens of this Company, and that interest on Henry Warmouth's legacy shall henceforth be paid to the Company, in like manner as the interest on William Warmouth's legacy is now paid, whilst the trust money remains in the hand of the Corporation.

I beg to remind the Company, that by the wills of the two testators above referred to, the Corporation are express trustees of the legacies thereby bequeathed, and that in cases of express trusts of Charities I am of opinion the statute of limitations does not apply.

9th October 1866.

Henry Ingledew.

On the motion of Mr. Henry Ingledew seconded by Mr. Pollard It is ordered that the Wardens present to the Council a memorial founded on the report.

[9th October 1867.]

WARMOUTH'S CHARITY.—On the motion of Mr. Alderman Ingledew seconded by Mr. Thomas Pollard, It is ordered that application be made to the Corporation for compliance with the memorial, presented to them by this Fellowship, and if not, that case be brought before the Charity Commissioners.*

[9th October 1886.]

The Governor informed the Company that the accumulation of interest on Mr. Thomas Davison's gift of £500 amounted to the sum of £50, and was ready to be paid, by the Corporation of Newcastle upon Tyne, to any son of a merchant or young man who shall have served his apprenticeship to a merchant in Newcastle upon Tyne, being a freeman of this Company, to enable him to set up the trade of a merchant in Newcastle upon Tyne. Whereupon it was ordered that the said sum of £50 be paid to [Here follows the name of the recipient.]

CHARTERS.

THE Charters under which the Merchant Adventurers of Newcastle upon Tyne claimed rights are as follows:—

1. A charter of the 17th year of King John, dated 28th January 1215-16.
2. A charter of the 1st year of King Edward VI., dated 1st September 1547.
3. A charter of the 1st year of Queen Mary, dated 15th November 1553.
4. A charter of the 1st year of Queen Elizabeth, dated 10th May 1559.
5. A charter of the 2nd year of King James I., dated 14th April 1604.

The charter of King John is set out in its original Latin form in the Rotuli Chartarum, published in 1837 by the Record Commissioners. The main part of it is also set out in Gross's Gild Merchant, vol. ii. p. 183. As these two volumes are already accessible to readers, it has been thought that it would be more convenient to set out in this volume a modern translation of the original. This translation has been kindly revised for the editor by Mr. F. H. Gough of the Inner Temple, but for verbal accuracy the original must of course be referred to. The charter of Edward VI. is set out in its original Latin form in Brand's History of Newcastle, vol. ii. p. 647. The charters of Mary, Elizabeth, and James I. were merely charters of inspeximus, and they did not grant any new privileges to the Company.* They recite in full the charter of Edward VI., and, as that charter has already been published in full in Latin, it has in like manner been thought convenient to set out in this volume a translation, made in the Stuart period, of Elizabeth's charter, transcribed from the books of the Company. The sub-headings to the various clauses have been added for the sake of clearness. They do not appear in the original translation.

* The English custom of renewing or confirming Charters to the successors or representatives of the first grantee, by the successors or representatives of the first grantor, seems to have arisen out of a general feeling of the necessity of obtaining from successive sovereigns confirmations of the grants made by their predecessors.—Hardy's Introduction to the Rotuli Chartarum, p. iii.

THE CHARTER OF KING JOHN

KNOW THAT WE have granted, and by this our charter have confirmed, unto our burgesses of Newcastle upon Tyne for their faithful services, and unto their heirs for ever, that none of them be distrained upon by any without the same borough for the payment to any of any debt, for which he is not a principal debtor or surety. We have also granted unto them a Gild Merchant, and that no member of the Gild Merchant need plead without the walls of the borough of Newcastle concerning any plea, save pleas concerning foreign tenures. We have also granted unto them that none need undergo trial by duel: and that in pleas pertaining to our crown they may clear themselves according to the ancient custom of the city of Winchester, and that all burgesses of the said borough and their heirs members of the Gild Merchant, be quit of toll, lastage, pontage, and passage, as well during the fair as at other times, and throughout all the ports of all our dominions both on this side of the sea and beyond it, and that none be fined in misericord save only according to the ancient law of the same city of Winchester which they had in the time of our ancestors, and that they should rightly hold their lands, tenures, recognizances and all debts from whomsoever due. And as concerning their lands and tenures which are within the aforesaid borough, let them be rightly held to them according to the custom of the city of Winchester, and concerning their debts which have been incurred at Newcastle upon Tyne, and recognizances made in the same place, let pleas be held in the same place. But if in all our dominions anyone shall have taken toll or custom from the men of Newcastle upon Tyne, being members of the Gild Merchant, after the wrong has been done, let the sheriff of Northumberland or the provost of Newcastle thereupon distrain upon the offender at Newcastle. We have moreover granted unto the same men for the improvement of the same borough that all be quit of yeresgyeve and of scotale so that no sheriff of ours or any other bailiff levy scotale within the same borough: whatever customs however have been unjustly levied in times of war, let them be altogether annulled: and whatever persons shall have resorted to the borough of Newcastle upon Tyne with their merchandise, from whatever place they came, be they foreigners or others, let them stay and depart in our safe peace on payment of the just customs that are due: and we forbid any to put a hindrance in their way in this regard. Now these customs we have granted unto our same burgesses of Newcastle upon Tyne and their heirs and by our present charter have confirmed and all the other liberties and free customs which they had in the times of our ancestors, as freely and fully as they then enjoyed them, to have and to hold of us and our heirs to them and their heirs for ever well and peacefully, freely and quietly, fully and entirely and honourably in all places and things as is aforesaid. Wherefore it is our will and firm command that our burgesses aforesaid of Newcastle upon Tyne and their heirs have . . . all the liberties and free customs aforesaid, as is aforesaid. Witnesses, R. Earl of Chester, W. Earl de Ferrers, Ph. d'Albini, Roger de Montbegon, Hugh de Balliol, Hugh de Bolebec, William de Cantilupe, Phil. de Ulecote and Gerard de Furnivall.

Given by the hand of Master Richard de Marisco our Chancellor, at Durham, on the twenty-eighth day of January, in the seventeenth year of our reign.

THE SURTEES SOCIETY.

THE RUTHERFORD SOCIETY.

PRINTED BY

THOS. CALDCLEUGH, 70, SADDLER STREET,

REPORT FOR THE YEAR 1880.

THE SURTEES SOCIETY.

REPORT FOR THE YEAR M.DCCC.XCV,

THE condition of the Surtees Society since the last Report was issued in the year 1892 has been one of quiet and successful progress. The list of Members is well filled, and there is no difficulty in supplying any vacant places upon it. In many instances the membership of a deceased associate is occupied by his son or representative. No stronger proof of the stability of the Society can be given than the fact that as many as seventy gentlemen have been associated with it for more than thirty years, and that the list of Members includes the names of one hundred and twenty libraries and institutions, the great majority of which may be regarded as permanently connected with the Society.

One removal by death during the present year elicited from the members present at the General Meeting in June a special expression of their regret. It was the decease of the Rev. Charles T. Whitley, Vicar of Bedlington, Senior Wrangler in his year, and long honourably connected with the University of Durham. Mr. Whitley was for nine years the last survivor of the band of gentlemen who met together at Durham on the 27th of May, 1834, and established the Surtees Society on its present basis. From 1836 to the time of his death Mr. Whitley was one of the Vice-Presidents, and for more than sixty years he took the warmest interest in the progress of the Society and aided it with his advice. To many of the members the death of Mr. Whitley involves the loss of a friend whose geniality and prompt as well as warm kindness cannot easily be replaced.

The Senior Member now upon our list is the President of Ushaw College near Durham, who was elected in September, 1838, but he stands as the representative of his college, and there have been several changes in the Presidency since 1838. The oldest personal member of the Society is the Rev. William Greenwell, who joined it on the 28th of September, 1843.

Five volumes have been issued since the last Report was printed, and others will soon appear, as the number of works on hand is unusually large. The hundredth volume of the publications of the Society will soon be reached.

The stock in hand of the publications of the Society has been much diminished in recent years by sales and gifts. The Society can make up only five complete sets of its works, but of several of the volumes which have been withdrawn from sale a few more copies than five are in stock. If any member should wish to have one of these for his own use he must communicate with the Secretary, through whom alone the sale can be made.

THE SURTEES SOCIETY,

ESTABLISHED IN THE YEAR 1834,

IN honour of the late Robert Surtees, of Mainsforth, Esquire, the author of the History of the County Palatine of Durham, and in accordance with his pursuits and plans; having for its object the publication of inedited Manuscripts, illustrative of the intellectual, the moral, the religious, and the social condition of those parts of England and Scotland included on the east between the Humber and the Frith of Forth, and on the west between the Mersey and the Clyde, a region which constituted the ancient Kingdom of Northumbria.

NEW RULES AGREED UPON IN 1849; REVISED 1863.

I.—The Society shall consist of not more than three hundred and fifty members.

II.—There shall be a Patron of the Society, who shall be President.

III.—There shall be twenty-four Vice-Presidents, a Secretary, and two Treasurers.

IV.—The Patron, the Vice-Presidents, the Secretary, and the Treasurers, shall form the Council, any five of whom, including the Secretary and a Treasurer, shall be a quorum competent to transact the business of the Society.

V.—The twenty-four Vice-Presidents, the Secretary, and the Treasurers, shall be elected at a general meeting, to continue in office for three years, and be capable of re-election.

VI.—Any vacancies in the office of Secretary or Treasurers shall be provisionally filled up by the Council, subject to the approbation of the next general meeting.

VII.—Three meetings of the Council shall be held in every year, on the first Tuesday in the months of March, June, and December; and the place and hour of meeting shall be fixed by the Council, and communicated by the Secretary to the members of the Council.

VIII.—The meeting in June shall be the Anniversary, to which all the members of the Society shall be convened by the Secretary.

IX.—The Secretary shall convene extraordinary meetings of the Council, on a requisition to that effect, signed by not less than five members of the Council, being presented to him.

X.—Members may be elected by ballot at any of the ordinary meetings, according to priority of application, upon being proposed in writing by three existing members. One black ball in ten shall exclude.

XI.—Each member shall pay in advance to the Treasurer the annual sum of one guinea. If any member's subscription shall be in arrear for two years, and he shall neglect to pay his subscription after having been reminded by the Treasurer, he shall be regarded as having ceased to be a member of the Society.

XII.—The money raised by the Society shall be expended in publishing such compositions, in their original language, or in a translated form, as come within the scope of this Society, without limitation of time with reference to the period of their respective authors. All editorial and other expenses to be defrayed by the Society.

XIII.—One volume, at least, in a closely printed octavo form, shall be supplied to each member of the Society every year, free of expense.

XIV.—If the funds of the Society in any year will permit, the Council shall be at liberty to print and furnish to the members, free of expense, any other volume or volumes of the same character, in the same or a different form.

XV.—The number of copies of each publication, and the selection of a printer and publisher, shall be left to the Council, who shall also fix the price at which the copies, not furnished to members, shall be sold to the public.

XVI.—The armorial bearings of Mr. Surtees, and some other characteristic decoration connecting the Society with his name, shall be used in each publication.

XVII.—A list of the officers and members, together with an account of the receipts and expenses of the Society, shall be made up every year to the time of the annual meeting, and shall be submitted to the Society to be printed and published with the next succeeding volume.

XVIII.—No alteration shall be made in these rules, except at an annual meeting. Notice of any such alteration shall be given, at least as early as the ordinary meeting of the Council immediately preceding, to be communicated to each member of the Society.

PUBLICATIONS OF THE SURTEES SOCIETY,

WITH THEIR RESPECTIVE SALE PRICES.

N.B.—Of several of these Volumes the number of copies on hand is very small; some will not be sold, except to Members of the Society under certain conditions, and all applications for them must be made to the Secretary.
